The Mikado wired such imperative orders to the Japanese Legation for the presence of a Japanese warship at the naval display that the battleship Hatsuse—now being completed at the Elswick Works, Newcastle—one of the largest battleships in the world, having 15,200 tons displacement, has sailed for Portsmouth, although hardly in condition to go.

About 3,500 troops will be engaged in the procession from Osborne to Cowes. Ten thousand volunteers will be employed along the line of route in London, in addition to 20,000 regulars.

Some disappointment is likely to be caused by the statement that no photographs may be taken of the procession from Osborne to Cowes.

It has been arranged that the Eton boys will line the route from the Long Walk gates to Windsor Castle, while the Military Knights of Windsor will be on duty in the chapel during the funeral service.

The Privy Council has ordered the Archbishop of Canterbury to prepare a special form of service, to be used in all churches in the Kingdom on Saturday.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 30.—Queen Victoria's coffin will be borne from Osborne House by the Queen's Highlanders on Friday at 1:45 P. M. to a gun carriage. The household of the late Queen, the royal servants, and the tenantry will be drawn up on the carriage drive. The Queen's pipers will lead the procession through the King's Gate to Trinity Pier.

There will be an imposing military display along the route, massed bands and drummers playing funeral marches. Behind the coffin will walk Admiral Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, (First and Principal Aide de Camp to the Queen since 1899,) the King, Emperor William, the Duke of Connaught, Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, Prince Henry of Prussia, Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, and other Princes. Then will come Queen Alexandra, the Duchess of Cornwall and York, and other Princesses.

Bluejackets will bear the coffin from the pier to the royal yacht Alberta, where Admiral Culme-Seymour, four naval Aides de Camp, and two Ladies in Waiting will accompany the body.

The outer coffin arrived on Monday night. The men detailed to carry the coffin rehearsed yesterday with a dummy coffin filled with sand and weighing over half a ton.

The King, the Queen Consort, Emperor William, and other members of the royal family will embark on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

The only American wreath which has arrived at Osborne House so far is one from Mrs. Sidney Everett of Boston, who is staying in the Isle of Wight. It is inscribed "In token of lifelong veneration and reverence."

TRIED TO ADDRESS AUDIENCE.

Then Manager Rang Down the Curtain on Melbourne MacDowell.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—The curtain was rung down on Melbourne MacDowell at Hopkins Theatre yesterday afternoon. He said he was suffering from a bad case of grip.

MacDowell got through half of the first act in a fairly creditable manner, but just before Cleopatra made her entrance he hesitated and then walked to the front of the stage and attempted to talk to the audience. Several in the house started to hiss, and Manager Grummpertz hastily gave the signal to lower the curtain. MacDowell saw the curtain descending and stepped forward so that he was in front of it when it dropped. He talked for a few moments and then retired.

MATTOON, Ill., Jan. 29.—Ex-Congressman Andrew J. Hunter and United States Marshal Hitch are heading a syndicate of Edgar County capitalists to construct an electric line from Paris, Ill., to Clinton, Ind., thirty miles long, at a cost of $250,000. The road is to be in operation next Fall.

It is intended to open up the rich Brillet's Creek coal fields and a populous farming country which has no railway facilities. A company of Clinton capitalists will complete the system from the Indiana line to their city.

Oil Discovered in Iowa.

Special to The New York Times.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Jan. 29.—Oil has been discovered near this city in such quantities that a big oil company of Ohio, which owns big fields there, has determined to lease thousands of acres of land, with the expectation of drilling wells and later putting up a refinery in this city if the flow is what is expected. The land owners throughout the tract have agreed to sign the leases which are for ninety-nine years, and which give them one-eighth of the oil which may be secured. The oil was found on the surface.

Special to The New York Times.

RUSHVILLE, Neb., Jan. 29.—Mrs. Schindler-Siebert of this place has received notice from New York that she has inherited $40,000 from her father, Dr. Schindler, who died in that city. Mary Schindler was once one of the prettiest girls in Hoboken, and, much against her father's wishes, eloped with William Siebert, son of ex-Police Captain Siebert of New York. They were married, but separated soon after. Mrs. Siebert came to Rushville, and has been living here ever since. She is settling up her affairs, and will leave soon for New York.

SENATOR FRYE SERVES NOTICE ON THE SENATE

The Subsidy Bill, He Says, Must Have Precedence.

TURNER ATTACKS MEASURE

Calls It a Piratical Raid on the Treasury—Mr. Perkins Opposed to Features of the Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Senator Frye (Rep., Me.,) made this afternoon a declaration that has been taken by many persons as a threat that the Subsidy bill must be disposed of before any other business of the Senate can be proceeded with. Just after he had moved at 2 o'clock to proceed with the Shipping bill, he made a little speech which for a moment startled his associates and which made Mr. Hanna (Rep., Ohio,) smile with calm satisfaction.

"Mr. President, I desire to say now that I do not intend, if I can help it, to yield to anybody for anything during the consideration of this bill. I do not intend to yield to an Appropriation bill unless, by a vote of the Senate, I am compelled to do so. There is not the slightest difficulty, as the Senator from Massachusetts well stated yesterday, about passing the Appropriation bills, provided this bill is out of the way. I do not believe the Indian bill would have occupied more than two or three days if this bill had been out of the way. As every Senator knows, I am of an exceedingly yielding disposition. Therefore, I give notice in advance so that I hope Senators will not ask me to yield."

All that this menace means is that if the Senate chooses to take up another bill, appropriations and revenue measures having first privilege, it may do so on motion, without debate, going at once to a vote to decide whether the Subsidy bill or another shall be considered. Senator Aldrich (Rep., R. I.,) explained its meaning clearly soon after Mr. Frye had made his announcement. It means that if the Republicans of the Senate are united in their determination that the Subsidy bill shall be proceeded with in preference to any other measure, a vote would decide that it should have the right of way. But he would not say that the Republicans are united upon such a course, or that they are prepared to let the appropriation bills fail, so that the Subsidy bill shall be passed. He is very anxious to ascertain what Democrats are opposed to the bill, and though not an outspoken supporter of the measure, warned a group of inquiring newspaper men not to predict that the bill would fail. The opponents of the bill say that Mr. Aldrich has become a recent convert to the Subsidy bill, but his conversation has never made it plain that he was for or against it.

Senator Turner (Pop., Washington,) spoke to-day in severe arraignment of the bill. He began with the statement that the bill was one of the most extraordinary measures ever brought before Congress. It was vicious in principle and absurd in the extravagance in which it proceeded. It had been devised by a select committee of private parties, by distinguished counsel, with less consideration of the public welfare than of the private interests concerned.

He did not, he said, impugn the motives of those in Congress advocating the bill, but he considered the measure a striking instance of the strictly business policy of the party in power and its readiness to listen to any project in behalf of wealth as against the interests of the people. He referred to the subsidies given by the bill as equivalent to a spoliation. Mr. Turner said he had been appealed to to support the bill on the ground that it would help his State. But he said that it was not calculated to benefit any community, but rather to enrich a few private individuals. He maintained, also, that the bill was paternalism carried to an extreme. It was one-quarter Government paternalism and three-quarters a "lawless, piratical raid on the public Treasury." It disclosed, he said, the piliancy of the ruling politicians to the demands of organized wealth. It was as justifiable for Congress to pay 5 cents a bushel bounty on wheat as to pay this bounty on ships, and the logical sequel to this measure was a bounty on shoes, on clothing, and on all other products.

The only consideration given to the farmers by this bill, Mr. Turner said, was for the purpose of providing a sauce to force this "atrocious and villainous concoction down the throats of the American people." He declared that the Subsidy bill would commit the Government to expenditures aggregating $570,000,000. This, he said, was a mere gift to a favored industry, and he predicted that the time would soon come when the ship owners of the United States could build their own ships independently of Governmental aid. He predicted that much of such legislation as this would work the ruin of the Republican Party.

Mr. Turner contended that, contrary to the popular belief, the subsidies provided for by the bill were to continue for thirty years. He had been surprised, he said, to learn that the subsidies were to continue for a longer period than twenty years, and he was sure that popular opinion had accepted the shorter period as the correct one.

Mr. Frye reminded Mr. Turner that there is pending an amendment to the bill limiting the payment on existing ships to ten years.

Mr. Turner asserted that we already have or soon will have a sufficient tonnage to absorb $11,736,349 under the bill, if that amount were allowed. This, he said, demonstrated that the full $9,000,000 allowed annually for subsidies would be required from the beginning. He declared that under the provisions of the bill the American Line would receive $2,188,500, or almost one-quarter of the entire amount to be paid out annually.

Mr. Frye said that the Committee on Commerce had reported amendments which prohibited the company from bringing in more than six foreign ships.

Continuing, Mr. Turner said that the Treasury doors should be padlocked and guarded by Gatling guns when the American Line prepared to make a raid upon the Nation's vaults. All the world outside of the United States pays less than $20,000,000 annually in the way of ship subsidies. This country was preparing to pay almost half as much, when it is admitted that our tonnage is not one-hundredth part of the tonnage of the world. He argued that on the side of the vicious principle of the bill, the greatest objection to the bill is found in the fact that it will retard instead of advance American shipbuilding. The result of such legislation would be that shipowners would build ships for foreigners far more cheaply than they would build American vessels. He asserted that the proposed subsidy would amount to more than 10% per cent. on the capital invested in shipping. The shipowners, he said, never would consent to a division of this bonus with the shipbuilders.

In conclusion, Mr. Turner asserted that the policy intended in this bill was a complete change of front on the part of the Republican Party, and he asked Mr. Hanna to explain, if he could, the reason for this change. He concluded at 5:30, whereupon Mr. Frye took the floor with a request for action upon the amendments suggested by the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. Frye said his only purpose at this time in requesting action upon the amendments was to get the bill in perfect shape, and that there was no idea of preventing opportunity to Senators to offer other amendments. The amendments heretofore suggested were then formally agreed to.

Mr. Perkins (Rep., Cal.,) took exception to the provision of the bill limiting the amount of subsidy to go to ships built on the Pacific Coast to 50 per cent. of the whole amount. Mr. Frye replied that no more had been asked before the committee. He would be surprised, he said, to find the Senator from California suggesting amendments to the bill as now perfected in view of the fact that as a member of the committee he had voted for the bill when it was not half so good as now.

Replying, Mr. Perkins said he had agreed to the reporting of the bill, but that he never would consent to giving subsidies to foreign-built ships.

"Then," said Mr. Frye, "you will kill the bill."

"Oh, no," replied Mr. Perkins, "I will vote for it."

"If you strike out the provision for foreign ships it will kill the bill," replied Mr. Frye. "You would be forty years in getting a merchant marine without it."

Mr. Aldrich sought to have certain amendments which he said he desired to suggest adopted as committee amendments with the understanding that they should be subject to further amendment, but there was objection, and he contented himself with offering the amendments in order that they might be printed. One of these limits contracts under the bill to fifteen years instead of twenty, and gives no premium for speed above eighteen knots.

WHIPPING POST IN DELAWARE.

Senate Decides to Do Away with Pillory—Punishment for Husband Beaters.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 29.—The Delaware Legislature faced the problem of corporal punishment to-day. Many of the members have been annoyed by newspaper and magazine articles regarding the pillory and whipping post, and want the whole ancient business abolished. Therefore in the Senate to-day when the bill abolishing the pillory came up, it passed by a vote of 11 to 6. Every criminal convicted of felony has to stand at the pillory for an hour, locked by the wrists and the neck.

Immediately afterward the Senate passed Senator Clements's bill for the punishment of wife beaters at the whipping post, twenty lashes being prescribed. Senator Knox pleaded earnestly in behalf of his bill providing for secret whippings, but the Senate voted it down.

In perfect good faith Representative Ewing presented in the House his bill for the punishment of wives who beat their husbands. It provides "that if any person being the wife of any man shall by physical violence abuse, maltreat, or beat her husband, she shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by being whipped at the whipping post with not less than five or not more than thirty lashes by the Sheriff or by the husband at his election."

Brooklyn Woman Said Politicians and Police Were Persecuting Her.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—A Brooklyn woman who gave her name as Amelia Holt was taken in charge by the authorities today for acting queerly at the White House. She said that the boy was her son, and that they had been persecuted by Brooklyn politicians and policemen until they had been obliged to come to Washington to escape them.

Detective Boyd took her to the House of Detention in order that the Police Surgeons might examine her and determine her mental condition. Here she gave her name and said that her husband was a motorman on one of the Brooklyn trolley lines.

WATCH OF ANCIENT MAKE FOUND

Believed to Have Been Lost in Connecticut Nearly 300 Years.

Special to The New York Times.

ESSEX, Conn., Jan. 29.—A watch, believed to have been lost some time about 1627, which has been found on Poverty Island at the mouth of the Connecticut River, is attracting great attention from antiquarians. The watch is a large silver one, and on the inside of the outer case is engraved a name which cannot be made out, and the date 1627. It is a fact that in 1632 Hans Eencluys of the famous West India Company landed at the mouth of the Connecticut and purchased a point of land from the natives, and erected there the arms of the State's General of the Netherlands.

His object was to obtain for the company the trade of the river valley, a plan which Van Twiller, Governor of the New Netherlands, carried out on a greater scale the following year.

OVER TWENTY COLONELS RESIGN

Staff of Illinois Governor Thinks the Honor Too Expensive.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 29.—Over a score of new Colonels on the Governor's staff arrived in Springfield to-day to meet Gov. Yates and organize. One of the first things they learned on arrival was that an assessment of $500 each was due. Then followed the intelligence that another assessment of about $500 would be levied in a week or ten days. Besides the two assessments, there were uniforms and horses to be paid for. The cost of a uniform, with its yards of gold lace, is about $300.

Incidental expenses of the trip to the McKinley inauguration, when the staff will make its first display, will amount to $200 for each Colonel.

Broad hints of heavy expenses had been conveyed to the appointees when they were asked to accept the commission. Several of the new Colonels came down to Springfield yesterday to learn what the cost would be. When apprised they promptly handed in their resignations.

SUES J. J. HILL FOR $1,500,000.

Geologist Wants Share of Profits of Western Coal Mines.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 29.—Suit was begun in the Circuit Court here to-day against J. J. Hill by Herbert W. Pearson, an expert geologist, to recover $1,500,000. Pearson claims that in 1896 he entered into negotiations with J. J. Hill to explore for coal in Washington and Montana, an expense fund of $200 a month to be provided by Mr. Hill as long as the search continued. The coal was found much sooner than was expected, and the complaint declares that Mr. Hill at once possessed himself of all the land containing coal and began the development of mines which are now valued at $14,000,000.

The complaint further alleges that Pearson discovered the Stockett mines by a study of elevations and topography, and that he located the limits of the fields, which have since proved to be correct. The Hill interests, he charges, secured thousands of acres under his direction and are now mining there 1,600 tons daily. It is for a share in the profits of this operation that the suit is brought.

While Pearson brings the suit in his own name, it is understood that associated with him in his scientific investigations are several leading financiers of Duluth, and a number of leading scientists of this country and England.

CARNEGIE RENOUNCES HIS OWN STATE

He Publicly Declares His Allegiance to New Jersey.

AT THE ARKWRIGHT CLUB

Says that Pennsylvania Will Not Allow Him to Build Railroads or Own Steamships.

There was something of a sensation among the guests at the second annual dinner of the Arkwright Club last night when Andrew Carnegie expressed himself freely on the controversy which has been going on between himself and the State of Pennsylvania, and publicly declared his allegiance to the State of New Jersey. The speech of Mr. Carnegie followed a speech by Gov. Voorhees of New Jersey, in which the Governor eulogized the laws of that State in regard to the protection that they afford to capitalists. Mr. Carnegie said:

"I wish to publicly declare my allegiance to the State of New Jersey. The State of Pennsylvania enjoys that grand monopoly of railroads. The State of Pennsylvania says to the manufacturer: 'You shall not engage in transportation, you shall not build a railroad, you shall not own a steamship.' Now, I want to build a railroad, and I want to own a steamship. The Governor of New Jersey says to me: 'Why, your place is in New Jersey. There is no State in the Union that enjoys such liberal laws.'"

There were about 300 members of the club in attendance at the banquet. The guests of honor were Gov. Voorhees of New Jersey, Andrew Carnegie, Charles Stewart Smith, John R. Van Wormer, and Commander A. V. Wadhams, United States Navy. George H. Sutton, President of the club, acted as toastmaster of the evening. Among those present were W. B. Timms, Edward Huber, Frank Bergen, Raymond W. Smith, John W. Catchpole, Edward M. Fulton, Lewis J. Geary, F. E. Turner, Alexander King, George Kneeland, Charles Spencer, H. C. Pomeroy, A. E. Colfax, Dr. William Moore, A. P. Burke, C. H. Florence, F. H. Holmes, J. H. Braggin, Abraham Gruber, William T. West, F. N. Soule, F. W. Slocum, and William B. Cunningham.

In his introductory remarks Toastmaster Sutton referred to the death of Queen Victoria and paid a tribute to her memory. He also spoke in complimentary terms of the services of the late President of the United States, Mr. Hoover. Locke, and proposed a toast to "Our President, Our Country, and Our Flag," which was drunk standing amid cheers. After the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," Gov. Voorhees, the first speaker of the evening, was introduced. In his speech, Gov. Voorhees said that he would not be a candidate for re-election. He spoke as follows:

"I came here to-night to meet you and to pay my respects to the Governor of the Empire State, who I expected would be here. He is a business man in politics. He has just started on a journey which I have finished. He has started on the journey most auspiciously. I notice in his inaugural address that he made a number of recommendations that commend themselves especially to the members of the Arkwright Club. All that he recommends has been in use in New Jersey for many years. You are doing well to imitate us. There are many other things in New Jersey which New Yorkers may imitate to advantage. I notice that when New Yorkers of wealth seek better laws they seek the comfort and the protection of the laws of New Jersey.

"A distinguished gentleman has charged that the State of New Jersey was a Government of corporations, by corporations, and for corporations. Well, the people of New Jersey have by a vote of a majo ... of 65,000 declared that they did not care if it was. You New Yorkers ought to wake up. You ought to learn something from the little State across the river. You may learn something from us in regard to laws that adequately protect wealth and industry and labor. No Jerseyman need be ashamed of those laws.

"You people here in New York do not think enough about public affairs. You give your time solely to the accumulation of wealth. I invite you to come over to the little State over the river and learn something. This little State across the river has more independent thought in it than any other State in the Union, and it is not of the Mugwump variety.

"New Jersey has wisely refused to reelect its Governors, and I am not going to be a candidate for re-election for this reason. Before the century closes you may possibly learn by what we do in New Jersey how a State ought to be governed."

Gov. Voorhees took his seat amid ringing cheers from the merchants present. Toastmaster Sutton announced that Gov. Odell, who was expected to attend the banquet, was unable to be present, and read a letter of regret from the Governor to that effect. In introducing Mr. Carnegie, the next speaker of the evening, Mr. Sutton referred to him as a "representative Scotsman with American improvements."

Mr. Carnegie began his speech by saying that he had not come to speak words of wisdom to such a distinguished assembly, but rather to learn something, and after listening to the speech of Gov. Voorhees he believed that he had done so. He then declared his allegiance to the State of New Jersey, in the words quoted above. Mr. Carnegie said that he felt home among the members of the Arkwright Club, who, he had been told, were the live young men who were doing the work of the world behind the scenes. He said that he liked to get away from the swells and get down among the boys. He declared that he felt like a boy and acted like one.

"The man who is known outside of his own business sphere in these days is quite a man. It takes a smart man to be a manufacturer, but it takes a smarter man to be a jobber or a commission man. It is the man who takes money out of the goods who is the smartest, and that is what the commission man and the jobber do. The manufacturer puts his money into the business.

"Recently a man asked me if I did not think that America was far and away the leading Nation in the matter of inventions. I asked him if he referred to steel. [Applause.] If he meant steel, I told him that England led in the matter of steel inventions. But America takes England's inventions and improves upon them. In all the great inventions in steel, you will find that America leads."

In referring to New Jersey, Mr. Carnegie said that about the only thing that a man could not own there was the Governor of the State.

Mr. Carnegie's remarks were received with enthusiasm. He was followed by Commander A. V. Wadhams of the United States Navy, who said in regard to the Spanish-American war that the outcome was no surprise to those who knew the navy. In regard to naval armament to-day, Commander Wadhams said:

"England is first, and we can well afford to let her be first. It is a good sight to see the English flag and the Stars and Stripes flying alongside one another. England's friendship for America is a good thing for the world, and I thank God for it."

Commander Wadhams paid a tribute to Mr. Carnegie for what he had done for the navy by building up the steel industry in this country, an undertaking which he thought required great courage.

In closing Commander Wadhams spoke of the munificence of Miss Helen Gould in giving $400,000 for the Young Men's Christian Association Building now in course of construction at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. He also made an appeal for the sum of $15,000 to buy stereopticons for the amusement of the sailors on board warships.

Speeches were also made by Charles Stewart Smith and John R. Van Wormer.

CONCESSIONS TO THE BOERS?

Strange Wording of the Proclamation of King Edward in Pretoria Commented On in London.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The papers are much interested in the peculiar wording of the proclamation of the King by Sir Alfred Milner in Pretoria as "Supreme Lord of and over the Transvaal." The general opinion is that the use of such an unusual phrase must have some significant meaning.

"Is it possible," asks The Daily News, "that the Government desire to leave themselves a loophole, and do not wish at the present moment to go beyond the assertion that Great Britain is the paramount power in South Africa?"

A dispatch from Pretoria, dated Jan. 28, said that at noon of that day, in the presence of Lord Kitchener and his staff, the Governor General, Sir Alfred Milner, proclaimed Edward VII. to be King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, and Supreme Lord of and over the Transvaal.

Boers Not to Ask Intervention Yet.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—A dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from The Hague says that, according to reliable information, the Boers do not intend, at present, to take diplomatic steps, but will continue fighting until the general situation of South Africa is strong enough to make the success of diplomatic steps certain.

TEXAS MAY CLAIM OIL WELL.

Lucas Gusher, at Beaumont, May Be Found to be on Land Formerly Belonging to the School Fund.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 29.—The oil from the great Lucas gusher near Beaumont may become the property of the State of Texas. State Land Commissioner Charles Rogan to-day discovered that the Public Free School Land act passed by the Legislature in 1883 contains a provision that all oils and minerals found on school lands on and after the date of passage of the law shall belong to the State. At the date of the passage of the act nearly all the land in that section of east Texas which is embraced in the new oil field belonged to the school fund, and it has since been sold.

It is not yet definitely known whether the Lucas gusher is situated on land that formerly belonged to the school fund. An investigation with the view of determining this is now in progress, and if it is found that the Lucas well is State property steps may be taken to give the owners thereof relief after the State has received remuneration for the oil.

The discovery that a big proportion of the prospective oil lands formerly belonged to the school fund and have been sold since the passage of the act of 1883 may have a depressing effect on the oil development work in the region, unless the provision which gives to the State all oil discovered on such lands is repealed. The matter will be at once called to the attention of the Legislature, which is now in session.

The State still owns large tracts of land in the prospective oil region, and the State Land Office is being overwhelmed with applications from parties who desire to purchase or lease such lands. Under the law no increase in the price of the lands can be made by the Land Commissioners.

Board of Aldermen Order Proceedings to Discover the Relations Between Ogden and People's.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—At the meeting of the City Council an opinion was read from Corporation Counsel Walker on the relations of the People's and the Ogden Gas Companies. He held that the issue of $6,000,000 of bonds by the Ogden Company and the agreement of the People's Company to purchase the plant March 5, 1945, did not constitute a technical violation of the ordinance, although he intimated it violated the spirit of the franchise.

Alderman Finn then moved that proceedings be instituted to discover the true relations existing, and the motion was carried, despite the strenuous opposition of Alderman Novak, who cited Chicago's poverty as a reason why litigation should not be indulged in.

MANITOBA TO BUY RAILROAD.

Deal for Certain Northern Pacific Lines to be Closed Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 29.—Negotiations are nearly completed for the sale of the Northern Pacific lines in Manitoba to the Provincial Government. It is practically settled that the Government has decided to purchase the Northern Pacific lines in Manitoba for about $6,000,000 and lease them to another company in consideration of a low grain rate.

An authority said to-day that the Manitoba officials notified President Mellen that the price asked would be paid, and he left at once for New York to confer with the Directors. To-night Vice President and General Manager Kendrick left to join him, and a dispatch from Winnipeg says agents of the Government will meet the Northern Pacific officials in New York and close the deal.

It is thought here that the Canadian Northern, a new transcontinental road being built, will lease the Northern Pacific tracks.

MR. GRIGGS MAY RETIRE.

He Declines the Chief Justiceship of the New Jersey Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 29.—It became known to-day that United States Attorney General John W. Griggs was tendered the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey when Gov. Voorhees heard of Chief Justice Depue's contemplated resignation. The Attorney General declined the honor.

This has given rise to the rumor that Mr. Griggs may remain in the President's Cabinet after all, but it is said by his friends that he will retire at the expiration of the President's term, because of his inability to meet the financial strain of official and social life at Washington.

He desires to return to Paterson and resume his law practice. Perhaps his declination of the high honor of the Chief Justiceship is due to the same situation. The Chief Justiceship pays but $10,000 per annum.

Mr. Grady, In Opposing the Bill, Admits that Vice Flourishes Here—Measure Goes to the Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The New York Police bill passed the Senate to-day by a vote of 31 to 14. The division was on strict party lines, but while all the Republican Senators voted for the bill upon its final passage, Republican sentiment in the Senate was not unanimous as to the wisdom of its enactment. There were several discordant notes in the party harmony on the measure, and a positive discord appeared to have been narrowly avoided. Senator Ellsworth, the Republican leader in the Senate, and Senators Marshall of Brooklyn and Malby of Ogdensburg frankly confessed their dislike of the provision in the bill giving the Governor the power of removal.

Senator Malby went so far as to announce that he favored and would vote for the amendment of the bill in this particular. He carried out his promise. When the Grady amendment striking out that clause in the bill was submitted to the Senate for action, Senator Malby voted with the Democrats in favor of the amendment.

Senator Malby's reason for objecting to this provision was not the same which actuated the Democrats in opposing it. His objection was frankly partisan. He said the passage of the bill would be a political mistake. He believed it would be to the interest of the Republican Party to leave the existing conditions in New York City alone until the next election, when the people would take such action as would right them. To change them now would be to change the issue, but if a remedy were to be applied at this time, he believed it ought not to be a half remedy. He believed the Republicans ought to take entire control of the police in New York.

It had been urged that the passage of the bill would place the full responsibility for those conditions upon Tammany. In his judgment, that would not be accomplished by leaving in the bill the clause giving the Governor the power of removal.

The debate on the bill lasted throughout the day. The bill was taken up shortly after the Senate convened. It was continued until 1:45 o'clock, when an adjournment was taken until 3 o'clock. The debate was then resumed, and it was 6:30 o'clock before the final vote was taken. Senators Grady, McCarren, and Donnelly made the principal arguments in opposition to the bill on the Democratic side, and the principal arguments in its favor on the Republican side were made by Senators Stranahan, Ellsworth, and Raines.

Senator Grady sought to prove by comparison of present conditions make no difference, and that the bill will be jammed through regardless of opposition and argument. It is entirely safe for the Governor to say that he is willing to take the responsibility.

ABOUT THE CONSTABULARY BILL.

"New York City made known in unmistakable figures what it thought of the gentleman from Orange, who now seeks to foist upon the city a police bill which is obnoxious to citizens of the metropolis. He knows very well that there is no way of reaching him, no redress, or no manner by which the indignant citizens may reach his official hide. I'm willing to take the responsibility for legislation affecting rural localities which I have outraged. The indignant citizens may protest, rave, and curse and swear at me, but how can they punish me; how can they impress on my mind in some pointed way the fact that they repudiate me and condemn that which I have done? I can go back to New York and be re-elected and laugh at those rural residents against whose village I have legislated. And so with the Governour. The responsibility which he is willing to take amounts to nothing. If the bill is objected to by fair-minded rural citizens, why, he slyly remarks that it only affects New York, and New York is a Democratic city.

"I know, if the old songs are sung again, heroic measures are needed again with New York; all our commonplace men become heroes when dealing with New York City. The moral or immoral atmosphere so stifles that something must be done to purify it. I've lived in New York for forty-seven years. I know something of present police conditions. I know New York as well as any man who undertakes to speak about it. I know its good and bad side. There is no vice in New York that I will not find in any great city.

VICE AND REFORM.

"Here in the capital of the State of New York, where you discuss the awful conditions in New York, vice comes to you with an effrontery it never does in New York City. Not hiding behind a closed door, not skulking in the shadows, but open as any legitimate business. Is it charged that there must be connivance between the Governor and these places, or that the Republican Legislature profits by them? In the National capital, when you arrive, a policeman will show you to questionable places all over the city. Right at the White House door, if these things exist, will it be said that the Congressmen make money out of them?"

Senator Grady then outlined the history of the reform wave of 1894. "You all know the principal points," said he, "and how before it the social evil had been controlled and regulated. Reform dissipated it, obliged vice to get respectable embellishments, and forced women from homes of infamy to apartment houses, right at the door of the respectable and the virtuous. Not for a generation is it possible to tell of the ruin that was wrought during that period. In that reform movement was banded together the most intolerant and bigoted crew that ever conducted a campaign, and it was really a campaign of bigotry and intolerance, supported by men who prefer that you shouldn't worship God if you didn't worship Him in their way.

"Now the same old host is again marshaling, under the same old banner and with the same old cry, 'We must rescue New York, if it takes all the people outside of New York to do it.' How helpless and tied down are the citizens of New York! The only weapon they have is their vote and the only time they can use it is once a year. Can you imagine any worse slavery than this? Wasn't it the Spartan who faced death smiling, looking on it as the dawn of his greatest joy? Why the Spartan isn't in it with the people of Greater New York. He only smiled—they are laughing, laughing in the face of their moral death and ruin.

ADMITS VICE EXISTS.

"If there is a condition of affairs detrimental to public morals in New York, and the Mayor is believed to be responsible, charges of malfeasance in office could be brought against him. Certainly the proper thing to do is to call on the Mayor to explain. That you haven't done so concedes the proposition that the Mayor is not responsible for the present state of affairs or that the conditions cannot be improved. In every possible way the constituency has indorsed the city administration and has refused to elect those office-seeking reformers whom the people prefer to have continue in the even tenor of their way.

"I don't claim New York is free from vice. I don't claim it is free from sin; I don't claim that the ideal obtains in its administration of affairs, but as a son of New York, grateful for its advantages, proud that every distinction of mine has come from one or another of its constituencies, I claim it is cleaner than any city half its size, purer than any cosmopolitan community, and better to live in than any city in the world. You don't have to believe me, but look for yourself; what Frederic de Peyster has to say, and surely his name does not sound as though he were a member of Tammany's Executive Committee.

"The Governor insisted on the power-of-removal clause in the present Police bill. Gentlemen, some one has said that no man could fill the office of Superintendent under such conditions—that it would make him cross-eyed looking at the Mayor and the Governor, each with the power to remove him. No self-respecting citizen would accept office under this bill. It would be a cruel piece of injustice to hold an office by virtue of the Mayor, when he might be removed at any moment by the Governor.

"You provide that not only may a man be removed by two men, but you deprive him of the right to ascertain why he is removed. You may write down that a man's usefulness has ceased when you do away with him, but not in justice until you have given him a chance to disprove charges. A slip of paper from Albany or a slip of paper from the City Hall, reading 'You are removed,' is all that is necessary to hurl a man from office.

SUGGESTS A REMEDY.

"The co-operation of the minority may be reckoned on to aid in any movement to make New York a better city. That man contributes nothing to the solution of the vice problem in New York who pays no attention to conditions existing there. From the day that mankind ate of the forbidden fruit and was admitted with the stain of original sin, vice has existed. Vice must necessarily have grown some in a city that has grown like New York. There is vice in New York. There are places that may be sought out where men can satisfy their passions, places where they can satisfy the greedy impulse of the gambler, there are secret places where all kinds of moral impunity go on. But the cause does not rest with the Police Department. The responsibility rests not with the Chief of Police. The remedy is not with the Legislature.

"The passions of men blind their judgment and still their conscience. They are not kept moral or immoral by what occurs at the polls, but by regard for the punishment which God has provided for sin. Instead of providing for a Police Department or the organization or the extension of a Police Department, there should be some way of making known to the individual that he is doing wrong. Vice has existed 3,000 years before you and will exist 3,000 years after you are gone.

"I am willing that there should be a single-headed Police Commission, but not that your Governor, repudiated as not deserving of the polls in New York, should wreak his vengeance against that city. I am not willing that a man should be removed without a trial, however. Put the District Attorney, the Sheriff, and the County Clerk in a bill, to be removed the same way without trial, and what would have been the result in the days of 'Teddy the Rover'? He had to charge Gardiner openly, and Gardiner had a chance to answer. He got rid of Gardiner by saying that Gardiner had outlived his usefulness.

"If Heaven had only vouchsafed a way to make known just when Teddy had outlived his usefulness, how quickly his term as Governor might have ended and the presiding officer of this body [pointing to Lieut. Gov. Woodruff] would have been Governor in fact, as he has long been by courtesy.

"You are passing this bill expecting partisan advantage, but as you have been disappointed before, I promise you you will again. You may put the intelligence of the voters at a low level, but they have a way at the polls of registering their approval of what you may desire to thrust upon them."

MR. McCARREN TALKS.

Senator McCarren followed Senator Grady. He said that forty years' experience in New York City had shown that the police under all administrations could not extirpate vice. "Why," he continued, "the 1,250,000 people of the Borough of Brooklyn did not know vice until Lexow laid it bare, and the morality of Brooklyn was injured by the revelations made. Every time you try to reform New York you make things worse. You may move the hive, but you spread the bees, as it were. Herbert Spencer says that vice cannot be controlled by the methods which States pursue.

"You must have a certain amount of vice in New York. You cannot make people moral by legislation. I want to emphatically protest against the bill. You make a coward of the Police Commissioner before he goes in. The fact that Roosevelt removed Gardiner on a whim or caprice is good ground to suppose that a Governor might use this power of removal on some other whim or caprice. The Police Commissioner could not possibly please both Mayor and Governor. He certainly could not please Roosevelt, if he were in office, with his ideas of the administration of police affairs in New York. The single-headed idea may be all right, because it centralizes power and limits responsibility. In its present form, I feel constrained to vote against the bill, principally because of the Governor's power of removal."

SENATOR RAINES FOR THE BILL.

After a short recess the bill was again taken up. Senator Raines, in speaking for the measure, said he did not intend to attack the good citizenship of New York. But he did condemn the present terrible state of affairs, which, he said, is a disgrace to civilization. Continuing, he said:

"Unless the press is utterly mistaken, the condition is a disgrace not only to the municipality, but to the good citizenship of the State at large. There is no argument in the assertion that a bad state of affairs existed years ago—worse than prevails now. The Democratic Senators in their astonishment are probably sincere, but they probably do not regret that this bill and not a State Constabulary bill is here now. If we can accomplish by this bill the concentration of responsibility so to know how and whom to reach, when such is necessary, we have accomplished something. The bi-partisan board is a misnomer, although the people hold the Republican Party half responsible.

"This bill will turn over to Tammany Hall the responsibility for the administration of the Police Department. Tammany will then be untrammeled. You have not the slightest fear that the Governor will touch a police official unless the circumstances justify it. You will say that Gardiner was removed. His removal was demanded and justified. When Gardiner was removed the gamblers flocked out of New York, for they then became fearful lest they should be punished for their crimes. I openly declare in favor of a State Police Department, and we make a mistake when we don't take into our hands all the police power of the cities."

"Why the cities?" asked Senator Grady.

"Because we legislate for the cities and arrange their charters. The conditions in Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester, and other cities is equally as bad as it is in New York. I do not say that they are any better than New York, except that New York has a larger field and vice is there more apparent. The circumstances in other cities demand as stringent remedies as those in New York. The State is warranted in resuming the State power which it has delegated to the various municipal corporations. If we had a State police administration that had done one-hundredth of what the police administrations of various municipalities have done it would not last for an instant.

"I do not believe that this experiment is going to be an astounding success. We shall at least know what Tammany is capable of doing."

RAINES LAW CONDEMNED.

Senator Wagner asked Senator Raines if he knew the cause of the increase of vice in New York. Senator Raines replied that the Tammany district leaders were the ones who prevented the police from doing their duty. Senator Wagner declared the Raines law was the cause of the increase of vice, the ruin of youth, and the committing of crimes, even of murder.

"If, Senator Raines," said Senator Wagner, "you are held responsible for all the crimes committed through the Raines law you will strike a hotter town than New York."

"If I do," replied Senator Raines, "I will call for water, which the New York Senator will never do."

Senator Raines continued his address, attacking Tammany and its district leaders until interrupted by Senator Grady, who repeated the charge that the Raines law handicapped the police. First, the Raines law began by breeding vice, then by housing vice, and finally by protecting vice.

Senator Raines set up a defense to the liquor tax law, and declared it had redounded to the benefit of the State, and said if the police of New York would enforce the law it could do away with the conditions that are a scandal and disgrace.

Senator Stranahan then spoke briefly as sponsor of the bill. He replied to Senator Grady, saying that the attempt to array the State against the city was ancient, but should never be availed of in debate. What becomes a smirch in one locality cannot fail to become a smirch in another section. Senator Stranahan quoted Bishop Potter, and added that no one believes that the Police bill will eradicate the social evil, but it will prevent vice from flaunting itself in the faces of respectable people and will prevent innocents from being dragged down to the depths of infamy. The Senator arraigned the Police Department, and declared that while prohibitory orders had been given, the other eye was winked. Captains of precincts told complainants to go to the Police Board, and vice versa, and thus is responsibility shifted.

"We propose," he said, "to centralize responsibility and give New York a larger measure of home rule than it ever had before."

DEBATE CONTINUES.

Senator Foley defended New York against what he declared "the wanton attacks made on the floor of this Senate." Every official in New York, he declared, is faithfully performing the duties of his office.

Senator Malby, who followed, urged that the provision giving the Governor the power of removal be stricken out, thereby placing the entire responsibility on Tammany. "If we give Tammany the responsibility," he declared, "we take it away by that provision. The people will then hold the Governor. A man cannot serve two masters, and I therefore believe that this provision should be stricken out. The courts will not support this provision. The provision, I believe, will be declared unconstitutional."

Senator Marshall said the bill did not meet with his entire approval. He would rather see a State constabulary law. "If I were treating a cancer I would cut it out, roots and all; I would not simply scratch or irritate it. It is better to get a part of what we want than nothing at all, so we will support this bill, which will do some good, but I would prefer to have the matter deferred until after election to insure Republican success."

GRADY'S LAST EFFORT.

Senator Grady then replied to each of the Republican Senators, endeavoring to show that the bill was designed to secure power in New York. He wanted to know, if the State were to administer police affairs in cities, why towns and villages were not included. Reverting to the subject of the Governor's power of removal, Senator Grady said the responsibility could not be centred by the bill. The responsibility could be shifted from Mayor to Governor and back again. "The fact is," he declared, "that the Republican Party is endeavoring to secure an unfair and partisan advantage. What Senator from any other city of the State who supports this bill will vote for a similar measure affecting his own city?"

Senator Ellsworth, who closed the debate, said he supposed the oratory had ceased. He wished to call the attention of the Senators to what the subject is and about which so little has been said. Senator Ellsworth said the bill simply sought to get rid of the bipartisan board, which, from experience, was not the proper system and should be replaced by a single-headed commission. As to its constitutionality, Senator Ellsworth said he believed it did not conflict with the Constitution. If it were not for Devery's election lay order, he would have favored the omission of this section.

The motion to strike out the enacting clause was put at 6:10 o'clock, and was lost by a vote of 29 to 16, Senators Russell and Malby voting with the Democrats. Later, Senator Russell changed his vote, making the vote 30 to 15.

Senator Grady offered several amendments, the principal one making it necessary that charges be preferred before the Superintendent could be removed by the Governor. His motion to amend and recommit was lost. Senator Grady offered another amendment that the Chief and his deputies shall not be retired until they shall have reached the age limit.

The vote on the final passage of the bill was: Yeas, 31; nays, 14—a strict party vote.

BUFFALO POLICE BILL HEARING.

Advocate of the Measure Intimates Present Commission Is Corrupt.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The Assembly Cities Committee to-day listened to arguments on the Schneider bill abolishing the present Police Commission of Buffalo, also the Superintendent and Deputy Superintendent of Police, and giving the Mayor power to appoint a Police Commissioner and a Deputy to assume the duties of the present officials. James L. Quackenbush spoke in opposition. He said he was a Republican and a good organization man, but the bill was not favored by the Republicans as a whole. It had not been passed upon by the Republican City Committee and nothing was known of it in Buffalo until it had been smuggled into the Legislature. He declared it unconstitutional.

Mr. Quackenbush presented a petition against the bill with 3,000 names signed to it, and said if he had three weeks' time he could present one with 30,000 signers. He thought the bill would be detrimental to the interests of the Republican Party in Erie County if it is enacted into a law.

Tracey Beaker made the argument in support of the bill, intimating that the present commission is corrupt.

WITNESSES FOR CAPT. HERLIHY

They Testify that the "Red Light" District Is All Right.

A Doctor Says that He Never Saw Anything Wrong, but Mr. Olcott Trips Him Up.

Dr. Max Amend Zipser was the principal witness for the defense in the trial of Capt. Herlihy, which was continued yesterday, and before Mr. Olcott of the prosecution finished cross-examining him, Dr. Zipser was pretty well tangled up. Dr. Zipser's testimony was similar to that of a dozen other witnesses who had been brought in by Lawyer Grant to prove to the satisfaction of the Police Commissioners that the "Red Light" district was a much maligned and an altogether lovely section of propriety.

The witnesses all were asked as to what they observed regarding disorderly behavior on the part of those residents of the district who had made life impossible for the decent element of that section of the community, and without exception all of the witnesses swore that they had never seen any action on the part of any person in the district to warrant that the Red Light section had deserved its name. This evidence was considered bad for the defense which, earlier in the trial, brought out testimony from a number of police officials that over 600 women had been arrested for disorderly conduct in the district, of which number 470 were convicted of the charges made against them.

For the most part the witnesses were business men who have stores in the neighborhood of Stanton, Allen, Grand, Eldridge, Delancey, and the other affected streets. With few exceptions, these witnesses lived in the upper part of the city, and seldom came down town to their places of business at night. One of these witnesses had testified that he had passed up and down the Bowery for twenty years almost every night, and that he had never, in all that time, seen any soliciting or disorderly conduct on the part of any one on that thoroughfare.

Judge Olcott tried hard to pump from the witnesses why they had come to the trial and whether promises had been made to them to appear for the defense, or whether any one representing the Police Department had spoken to them about what testimony they were to give at the trial. In this he was unsuccessful. Relating to this, after the session, Judge Olcott called attention to the fact that most of the witnesses, when answering certain questions, replied almost in like answers, and this, despite the fact that the witnesses were placed in another room, from which they were called in one by one as they were desired. Judge Olcott said that there was little doubt in his mind that the witnesses had been primed, though he was unable to get such an admission from any of them.

The first witness called by Lawyer Grant was Edward Herbert of 87 Madison Street, who said he was a law student. Grant read the witness a passage from the charges against Capt. Herlihy and, after drawing out that the witness had lived in the midst of the district for five years, read from the charges the numbers of some fifteen houses in the witnesses's neighborhood, all of which are supposed to be houses of ill repute. The witness declared that he was acquainted with all of the houses named, but that he had on no occasion seen anything or experienced anything to lead him to believe that the district was not as reputable as any other part of the city. There was a wrangle among the lawyers as to the proper form of the question, and Commissioner Abell, who, with President York and Commissioner Hess, was conducting the investigation, sided with the accused Captain. President York ruled against the defense, and thereafter the witness testified that he had passed through the section at almost all hours of the night, and that at no time did he see anything which might credit the accusations of vice being rampant or even present.

"How did the police know you were going to testify that you were not aware of the presence of vice in your district?" Mr. Olcott asked.

"I don't know. I suppose some one heard me say that the reputation given to the district was altogether too hard and that there was no truth in the report, and that I was willing to come forward as Capt. Herlihy's favor. I don't know if that is how I was found, but I suppose so."

Then came the "set answer" which every witness called made to the question "Did you at any time notice on the street or on the stoops of houses women who were not properly dressed?" The answer to this was invariably that such a thing had been seen, but that in Summer time the people needed fresh air as a relief from the crowded tenement houses, and that the people in the section were quite used to seeing women taking things easy without much regard for appearance." The next witness called was Lemuel Bohm, a real estate dealer at 8 Christie Street. He, like all the other witnesses, was made to testify to the same condition of affairs as Herbert, and then came Dr. Max Amend Zipser, who was tied up into a knot by a little surprise which the prosecution had in store for him. After giving his address as 52 St. Mark's Place, the witness told that he had studied in the College of the City of New York and had finished his course at the Bellevue Medical College.

Mr. Olcott got him to state that though he had traversed the "Red Light" district at all hours he had never seen anything that should not have existed therein.

"Are you acquainted with Martin Engel?" Mr. Olcott asked.

"I know the gentleman."

"Did you ever get much business in the examination of women in regard to their health from Mr. Engel?"

"I never got any business from Mr. Engel." All the time Mr. Olcott had been toying with a card which he held concealed from the witness. The card bore on one side the doctor's name and address. Mr. Olcott got the witness to reneat his statement as to the cleanness of the vice district more positively than before, and then he held out the card at the doctor.

"Is that your handwriting on the back of that card?"

The witness replied "Yes, Sir."

The card certified that a woman was ill. Upon further examination the witness said that he did not know where his patients lived, and that as he expected many of them were from further up town he did not consider that he had contradicted his earlier testimony that the district was clean. The card was offered in evidence, and Lawyer Grant, who, as usual, was seconded by Commissioner Abell, objected. President York's ruling admitted the evidence as throwing light on the character and standing of the witness.

The trial will continue this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Police Board in Private Conference.

At the adjournment yesterday of the Herlihy trial Police Commissioners York, Hess, and Abell went to Mr. York's room and talked for a quarter of an hour. Then the door was closed and the private conference lasted half an hour. The Commissioners said that they discussed police matters in general, and that their executive session had nothing to do with what is called the police situation and the status of Chief Devery or the pendency of the Single-Headed Police Commission bill in the Legislature.

COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

Weekly Meeting Is Postponed—Harmony in Committee of Five.

It was announced yesterday that the weekly meeting of the Committee of Fifteen organized to combat the vicious conditions existing in this city, would not take place this afternoon, but would be postponed until Friday afternoon in the Charities Building.

This was done, according to Counsel Robert Grier Monroe, to meet the convenience of certain members, nearly all of whom have large business interests.

Neither Chairman William H. Baldwin, Jr., nor Mr. Monroe would forecast the business to be transacted at the meeting, and, preserved their usual silence as to the general work of the committee.

M. Warley Platzek, member of and counsel for the Tammany Committee of Five, yesterday declared that there was absolutely no foundation for published reports that dissension had arisen between certain of his fellow-members. Beyond this he, too, would say nothing of the work they have in hand.

BENJAMIN D. SILLIMAN'S WILL.

The Estate Is Estimated at $1,500,000, of Which $100,000 Will Go to Yale University, It Is Said.

Yale University will be made $100,000 richer, it is understood, by a clause in the will of Benjamin D. Silliman, who died at his home, Clinton and Pierrepont Streets, Brooklyn, on Thursday. The document has not yet been filed in the Surrogate's office, but the will, it is said, was read on Monday afternoon at the Silliman residence, in the presence of the next of kin then in the city.

Mr. Silliman left in personal property and real estate what is estimated in value as about $1,500,000. After bequeathing what, it is thought, will amount to $100,000 to Yale University, the will practically distributes the remainder of the estate among the next of kin. Among the heirs mentioned are Mr. Silliman's sister, Mrs. Laura S. Blagden of Washington; a niece, Mrs. Samuel Carey of Manhattan; Miss Caroline S. Taylor, Mrs. Arthur Mathewson, also nieces, and Silliman Blagden and Thomas Blagden, stepchildren of Mrs. Blagden. The executors of the will are Grosvenor S. Hubbard and Edward Mitchell.

A brother of the testator, August E. Silliman, who has been dead several years, left a large estate in trust. At the death of Benjamin D. Silliman the trust expired. In the division of the estate Yale University is entitled to $70,000.

Members of the family who were seen last night said that while the report might be true in the main facts, they did not care to discuss it. They refused to either affirm or deny it.

THE RICE WILL CONTEST.

Opposing Lawyers Agree on a Temporary Administratorship—Prof. Witthaus's Report.

Nearly a score of lawyers appeared before Surrogate Fitzgerald yesterday when the application for a temporary administrator for the estate of William Marsh Rice came up for a hearing. Julien T. Davies represented the petitioner, Charles W. Rice, a nephew; Hornblower, Byrne, Miller & Potter represented those interested under the original will of the millionaire; Marx E. Harby was in court for Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer, now a prisoner in the Tombs; De Lancey Nicoll, James B. Carroll, and John M. Bowers and others were on hand to look after the interests of various clients.

Instead of any heated argument of conflicting interests, the lawyers got together and decided that it would be for the best interests of all that a temporary administrator be appointed, and it was further agreed that such an administrator should be in harmony with the interests now opposing the assignments and transfers of property alleged to have been made to Albert T. Patrick.

As a result of this agreement, all papers were submitted to the Surrogate. The consensus of opinion was that the Surrogate would name some temporary administrator who would at least employ the law firm of Hornblower, Byrne, Miller & Potter as his counsel, as this firm represents the interests opposed to the so-called "Patrick will" and the assignments.

It was announced that the real hearing on the contests over the various wills will begin in the Surrogates' Court Feb. 7, if the temporary administrator is appointed by that time.

Prof. Rudolph A. Witthaus, the chemical expert, who has for some time been engaged in the preparation of a supplemental report to determine whether the amount of mercury found in William M. Rice's body was sufficient to cause death, held a long conference with Assistant District Attorney Osborne yesterday. Mr. Osborne stated at its conclusion that Prof. Witthaus will communicate to him his final views within ten days and that a date for the inquest is then to be named by Coroner Hart.

MRS. CREHAN LEFT $4,500.

Ada Rehan's Mother Gives All Her Property to Her Son William.

The will of Mrs. Harriet Crehan, the mother of Ada Rehan; who died on Jan. 15 at 165 Cooffey Street, Brooklyn, was offered for probate yesterday in the office of the Surrogate. It was filed with the petition of William Crehan, son of the testatrix. The will simply stated that all the personal property and the estate of the testatrix go to the son, William Crehan, as sole beneficiary. Witnesses' names are annexed.

The relatives named in the will are Ada Rehan, Harriett Russell, Mary Kate Byron, and William Crehan.

The value of the estate is placed at $4,500.

MRS. SUSAN GORDEN WINS.

Justice Chester Restores to Her Dower Rights in a $225,000 Estate.

A decision by Justice Chester, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, restores to Susan Gorden, widow of William Gorden, the widow's dower in an estate valued at the time of her husband's death at $225,000. She brought suit against Joseph G. Burt, D. Harrington, and others as trustees under her husband's will, for an admeasurement of her dower in real estate and for an accounting. There was a defense that the widow having chosen to accept dower renounced her rights to the provisions of the will.

Justice Chester heard the case last October. He decides that the plaintiff was not required to choose as between the two matters.

Other Members of George Philippi, Jr.'s, Family, Therefore, Object to the Will.

Objections to the will of George Philippi, Jr., were filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday. Mr. Philippi was engaged in the soda-water business and left an estate worth about $75,000, all of it going to his brother Jacob. This will, which was executed on Aug. 1 last, came as somewhat of a surprise to George Philippi, the father, and Anna Euler and Mamie Philippi, sisters, as well as Charles Philippi, another brother. These relatives of the testator were so displeased that they at once began a contest in the Surrogates' Court.

In their objections, filed yesterday, they set forth that George Philippi died on Jan. 14 last, after six weeks' illness. They say that he was thirty-eight years old at the time of his death, and was a bachelor. They further declare that the will alleged to have been executed by him was not signed by him in the presence of witnesses and does not express his desire as to the disposal of the property.

Jacob Marks is the lawyer representing Jacob Philippi, the beneficiary of the will, and he said yesterday that there will be some sensational disclosures when the contest comes up for trial before the Surrogate.

PRISON FOR EX-CITY OFFICIAL.

John Clark Stole Market Rents and Must Serve Three Years.

John Clark, ex-Deputy Collector of City Revenue, pleaded guilty to stealing $174 from "the Mayor and Aldermen and commonalty of the City of New York" in General Sessions yesterday, and was sentenced by Judge Cowing to three years in State prison.

Clark is sixty years old, and for fourteen years had collected rents from the producemen using stalls in Washington Market. He suddenly disappeared last Spring, and it was said at the time that his peculations amounted to $13,000. He was captured in Chicago at a race track. Judge Cowing, pronouncing sentence, said:

"The money you stole was that of the taxpayers of this city. The city is already overburdened with taxes, and your peculations added to that burden. It is true that you are old and in ill-health, and that many persons have interceded for you. I have taken all this into account in accepting your plea."

Delmar's Sisters' Suit Dismissed.

The suit of Mary Delmar and Della Delmar, sisters of the late John Delmar, a prominent Democratic leader in Kings County, who sought to break his will, was dismissed yesterday by Justice Marean in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. Delmar left a fortune to his widow, Eliza Delmar. The sisters contended that she had not been legally married to their brother. The case has been in the courts for many months.

HOTEL KEEPER MAKES CHARGES AGAINST POLICE

Says that He Was Told He Must Pay Them $20 a Week.

He Refused, and Claims that He Has Been Subjected to Persecution and Petty Annoyances.

John J. Redner, proprietor of a respectable hotel and restaurant at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, adjoining the Murray Hill Theatre, makes serious charges against the police.

Mr. Redner formerly kept a hotel at West Point, and a few years ago came to this city. In his hotel are twenty-eight sleeping rooms, and these are let to men only, mainly commercial travelers. The fittings and improvements cost him about $15,000.

He has a hotel license and a well-appointed restaurant. In the latter is a bar, but this he has never opened on Sundays, and always closes it daily at 1 A. M. and at midnight on Saturdays.

Near by is the Grand Central Palace, where balls and other social functions frequently occur. To be within the law, Mr. Redner has on such occasions applied for an all-night license. He could never get one, as he could not procure the consent of the Captain of the precinct, the Chief of Police, and the Mayor.

"The Captain," said Mr. Redner to a NEW YORK TIMES reporter, "told the Chief, so I am informed, that there was no necessity for a license for me. The Chief turned the application back. But every other place around me was open and doing business.

"I kept within the law and closed my bar. People came in here and ordered a luncheon with drinks. When told the latter could not be served they went elsewhere, and I lost the trade.

"Finally a man came to me and advised me to see Capt. Delaney of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station. He is a patron of the Vanderbilt House across the street. I declined to do as he suggested.

"Next a saloon keeper, who was then in business on Third Avenue, but who is now on Sixth Avenue, near Twenty-third Street, told me if I wanted to do business after hours I would have to give up $20 a week to the police. I declined.

"Since then I have been persecuted. A ward man whose name I believe is Becker, has been here several times, and he had the habit of being taken with cramps a few minutes after 1 o'clock, and would want liquor to relieve him. He did not get it. Becker is no longer in the precinct, but I am continually subjected to petty annoyances. I don't know what to do."

MEDAL FOR MRS. NATION.

Kansas Temperance People Plan to Give Her One—Invited to Address the Kansas House.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 29.—The Kansas State Temperance Union, which is holding its annual convention here, to-day subscribed over $100 to purchase a gold medal for Mrs. Carrie Nation. Mrs. Hutchinson, President of the State Women's Christian Temperance Union, was made Chairman of a committee to design and purchase the medal. The fund was started by Col. C. B. Cook, who, after a stirring speech, gave $10, "to help purchase a gold medal for the bravest woman in Kansas—Mrs. Nation."

The suggestion was taken up with a cheer, and the money was quickly raised. Mrs. C. B. Hoffman, who last week aided Mrs. Nation in the Enterprise raid, was the second person to subscribe to the fund. When Mrs. Nation heard what had been done, she cried a little, and then began to scold those who had planned the surprise. She said she would take the money and turn it over to the fund to aid her work, but she would have no medal.

Later Mrs. Nation responded to an invitation to address the convention, and her remarks were vigorously applauded. Yesterday when Mrs. Nation called on him, Attorney-General Nicholas Smith told her that he believed in resubmission, and to-day she said that before he pushed resubmission on the people she would throw her hatchet at his head.

Mrs. Nation said she would remain in Topeka until every one of the 120 saloons are closed.

"I will petition the Governor every day," she said, "and will see the Legislature. I will talk and talk and talk. I will use all the influence I can, and if this does not suffice—well, there are other means."

Mrs. Nation called upon the Sheriff, the City Attorney, and the Probate Judge to-day and urged each to enforce the law against saloons. Later she visited the county jail and furnished a bushel of apples and a large bunch of bananas to the inmates. She addressed the prisoners, asking them why they were in jail by reason of whisky, and ascertained that all but two of the twenty-seven inmates attributed their arrests to liquor.

In the office of the police court Mrs. Nation observed some calendars containing pictures which she regarded as of an objectionable nature. At her request the Judge took down the pictures from the wall.

A resolution was introduced in the House to-day inviting Mrs. Carrie Nation to address that body and naming an hour for her to speak. The resolution was tabled.

SALOON WRECKER IN CHICAGO.

Woman Winds Up with Her Hand and Two Ribs Broken.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Mrs. Minnie Eden, it is said, tried to emulate Mrs. Carrie Nation last night. She is now suffering from two fractured ribs, a broken hand, and several cuts and contusions. Charges of assault are preferred against Mrs. Eden's husband, Oscar Eden, Wendel Repsteln, and Mr. and Mrs. August Kimminsky. The latter couple conduct a saloon at 5,130 Halstead Street.

Mrs. Eden entered the Kimminsky place and found her husband seated at a table with Kimminsky, his wife, and Wendel Repstein. She ordered him to go home. He refused, and Mrs. Eden, it is said, seized a poker and proceeded to demolish the saloon. The glasses from which Eden and his friends had been drinking were shattered, and a mirror met a like fate. Kimminsky, it is said, threw her to the floor and kicked her. Her husband did not interfere to save her.

COURT HOUSE ELEVATOR STUCK

Eight Men and Two Women in the Lift Receive Plenty of Advice.

"Let me out."

"Take your time. All's well that ends well."

"There she moves."

"I'll be fined."

The above cries came from the interior of one of the antiquated elevators in the County Court House yesterday morning. As a rule the two "lifts" have shown some consideration to lawyers, litigants, and jurymen, and have usually gone on the retired list just before court opened. For the first time yesterday one of the elevators took on an unusually bad streak. Seven men, two women, and the attendant were in Elevator No. 1 when it left the basement floor. All were bound for the top floor of the building. The elvator behaved well as it passed the first floor. At the second floor there is no stop. When you want to go to the second floor you either walk up or else take the elevator to the third floor and walk down. Just as the elevator was slowly moving past where the second floor exit should be it stuck fast.

Lawyers, litigants, and jurymen became excited. They were due in the courtroom at once. The two women in the elevator became excited, while the attendant was philosophical, although the lawyers were willing to give some advice as to the merits of the case.

As the cries which came from the interior of the elevator reached the people on the upper floor all sorts of advice was hurled down the shaft.

"I have it," shouted one lawyer from the safe place above. "When I say 'go' all of you people jump up and down. That will release the elevator."

"But where will we land?" cried one of the women.

"A better plan," cried another voice from above, "would be to get a barrel of oil and pour it on the ways."

"Oh, don't," cried another of the women; "that would spoil my new hat."

"Hurry up," yelled one of the jurymen, "I was soaked with a fine yesterday, and I don't want another to-day."

During all this hubbub there was a general scurrying about of court attendants, and finally the engineer of the building found out what the trouble was and remedied it. The elevator began to descend slowly, and finally the seven men and two women found themselves again in the basement. They were satisfied to walk up stairs this time.

CITY CLUB'S PLANS.

Discussion by the Members Over Pending Legislation at Albany.

The Legislative Committee of the City Club will hold a meeting to-night, and last evening there was a discussion by members of the council of the organization with reference to matters pending before the Legislature. The club and the council will meet on Wednesday of next week.

Secretary J. W. Pryor said to a NEW YORK TIMES reporter yesterday:

"The City Club purposes taking a very active part in legislation affecting the City of New York. Its members are unanimously in favor of the enactment, as a whole, of the recommendations made by the Charter Revision Commission. If these are adopted they will obviate the necessity of the passage of a single-headed police bill and a bureau of elections bill as separate measures, because both are fully covered by the report of the Charter Revision Commission.

"Of course the latter differs from the separate Police bill because that contains a clause giving the Governor power to remove the Police Commissioner. To that clause the club is opposed.

"But, furthermore, the enactment of the separate bills affecting the police and Bureau of Elections will complicate matters, because they do not repeal sections in the charter affecting those bodies. The recommendations of the Charter Revision Commission do.

"The club also intends to make an earnest fight for the adoption of the Massachusetts ballot.

"We shall favor, too, the passage of a bill equalizing the salaries of police Magistrates. Some of these now receive $6,000 per annum, while others get $7,000. All should be treated alike.

"There, too, there seems to be a general misapprehension with regard to the bills introduced by Senator Slater of New York and Assemblyman Morgan of Kings, in their respective houses, with relation to the bill repealing privileges granted to the Ramapo Water Company under the act of 1805. The proposed act only rescinds those privileges, and does not attack the charter of the Ramapo Company."

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS TO MEET.

"Harmony Dinner" to be Given at Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 12.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Certain Democratic leaders, convinced that the party needs to get together, have decided to sound the keynote of reorganization at a dinner in Columbus, Ohio, on Feb. 12. At this dinner, according to the prospectus, a common platform will be found for all factions of the disunited Democracy. The harmony arrangements are in the hands of Representative John J. Lentz of Columbus.

The speakers are to be William J. Bryan, whose subject will be "Jefferson"; George Fred Williams or ex-Gov. Altgeld, on "Jackson"; ex-Senator Charles A. Towne of Minnesota, on "Lincoln"; Representative Carmack of Tennessee, on "Lincoln and Jefferson"; Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota, on "From Lincoln to Hanna," and Representative De Armond of Missouri, on "Jackson's Utterance—Our Government should be supported by the ballot box, and not by the musket."

The projectors of the dinner are confident that it will do much to overcome the breach now existing in the party.

STEEL AND WIRE AFFAIRS

Action on Dividends Deferred Till Next Quarterly Meeting.

Prearranged Decision Known in Other Cities Before It Was Made Public Here—Gates Faction in Control.

The American Steel and Wire Company, through its Directors, yesterday practically passed the dividends on both the preferred and the common stock of the company until the next meeting of the Directors in March. In so doing the company has come into the ranks of those which hereafter will pass upon the dividends to be paid quarterly instead of declaring them in a lump sum. The Directors accomplished this by passing an amendment to the by-laws, which makes it obligatory on them to consider the question of dividends every three months.

On the surface the decision of the board was only reached after two days of earnest thought and discussion, but from the statements given out by the board itself the action was decided upon in all probability even before the Directors met, the Gates faction being strongly enough in control to know just what would happen; in fact, to dictate the happenings.

When the board went into session on Monday morning it was allowed to be interred that some of its members were for declaring the annual dividend, and that some were for passing it. These latter were said to be the Gates clique. When the day waned it was given out officially that a statement of the board's action would be made public yesterday at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. At that hour President Clifford of the board announced that an agreement had not yet been reached, but that the announcement would be forthcoming after the market closed—at 3 o'clock.

At that time the board gave out the following statement as the official announcement of its action:

> The amendment of the by-laws makes it obligatory on the Directors to act upon the question of dividends on both the preferred and common stocks of the company quarterly, beginning with March next. Under this amendment further action on the dividend question on both stocks is therefore deferred until the meeting of the board the coming March. The board voted to advance prices on standard goods $2 per ton, effective at once.

With this announcement the Directors also gave out a printed balance sheet, showing the financial standing of the company and an address to stockholders, also printed. These printed statements must of necessity have been in the hands of the printer for several days—some time before Monday, the first day the board met, yet it contains in the address to stockholders the following announcement:

> Finding it unwise and inexpedient to declare dividends payable a full year in advance, the by-laws of the company have been so amended as to enable the Board of Directors to act upon the question of dividends on both the preferred and common stocks quarterly, beginning next March.

There were other evidences at hand to show that the action of the board was not a secret that was guarded as strongly as the Directors would have the public believe it was. As early as 10 o'clock Wall Street received a dispatch from Philadelphia saying that persons in a position to know had circulated the report that the amendment to the by-laws had been passed and no action would be taken on the dividends until March. A while later a report of the same kind came from Chicago, where it had been as industriously circulated as it had been in Philadelphia, and whence, as from the latter city, the reports found their way to Wall Street.

A Director to whom these Philadelphia and Chicago reports were shown a minute after the meeting had adjourned was apparently very angry.

"It is too bad that there was a leak," he said. "We can't imagine where it came from, but we are sure that no one here is responsible for the lenkage."

He refused to discuss the fact that the board's action, ostensibly reached only yesterday, appeared in the printed circular addressed to stockholders. Mr. Gates denied himself to all reporters.

It is pointed out in Wall Street that the action of the board by no means states that a dividend will be declared on either the preferred or the common stock in March. The announcement says specifically that it is obligatory on the board to consider the question at the quarterly meetings. The result of that consideration is not at all sure.

The action of the board is also looked upon as a victory for Mr. Gates, and shows that he is in control of the board, as he has always been. It is also stated that Mr. Gates's position is not likely to be changed by the election of five new Directors in February, when the stockholders meet. The active hustle for proxies for that meeting is looked upon as a gigantic bluff, and it is even stated that what is supposed to be the opposition to Gates is really working in his interests, or, in other words, that no matter who gets the proxies, they will come to Gates in the end. It is also stated that even should the opposition elect the new members to the board, Mr. Gates, barring disloyalty in the ranks, would still be in control.

The balance sheet issued by the Directors shows the net profits of the company to Dec. 31, 1900, to have been $7,002,120.14, allowing for full depreciation in plants, buildings, machinery, and for possible bad debts. In detail, it is as follows:

The address to the stockholders is signed by the Executive Committee, composed of William Edenborn, Alfred Clifford, J. W. Gates, Thomas Dolan, John Lambert, I. L. Elwood, and William P. Palmer, and is as follows:

> When we issued to you our first annual statement, one year ago, the outlook for the immediate future as to prices and volume of business warranted the prediction of a most prosperous year, but, much to the disappointment of all, the volume of business in the first quarter of the year proved to be only one-half what was anticipated, and the result was an accumulation of stock so heavy that in April it was found necessary to very largely reduce our prices and close, for a time, several of our mills, that our accumulated stocks might be worked off. As our company was then a large buyer of both pig iron and billets, we necessarily had on hand and under contract a very large tonnage upon which the company was obliged to stand a large shrinkage in values when the price of Bessemer pig iron and of steel billets declined fully 50 per cent.
> Fortunately the volume of business for the last six months gradually increased, and we have been able to work off this overstock, and we enter the new year with all old stocks cleared away and our order books well filled with business at very satisfactory prices. The outlook for the coming year is certainly favorable, and as prices are now upon a normal level, we have no reason to fear a repetition of last year's experiences.
>
> We are now producing nearly all of our own requirements in pig iron and billets, and so are no longer subject to fluctuations in the prices of our raw materials.
>
> Our net profits for the year ended Dec. 31, 1900, were $7,002,120.14, after marking off for depreciation $1,000,000, and expending large sums in maintenance and improvements, and marking down all inventories as required by the market prices of Dec. 31, 1900. While this amount is considerably less than our earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1899, we are inclined to believe that when the changed conditions of the market are taken into consideration, our stockholders will feel well satisfied with the results shown.
> As the company is now the owner of iron ore mines on Lake Superior, it was deemed necessary by the Board of Directors that we also become independent of possible freight combinations in transporting ore to our furnaces, and looking to this end, the Directors have negotiated for the purchase, from the American Steamship Company, of twelve large steel boats of a capacity sufficient to carry practically all of the ore used by this company. This purchase was made by the guarantee on the part of the American Steel and Wire Company of twenty-year 5 per cent sinking fund bonds to the amount of $5,630,000, (this being the entire purchase price,) secured by a mortgage on the boats purchased. Based upon the average lake freight rates for the past ten years, we predict that this fleet of twelve steamers will earn annually at least sufficient to pay the interest upon the bonds and provide for a sinking fund sufficient to retire all of these bonds before maturity, thus leaving the American Steel and Wire Company the owner of the entire fleet, free from incumbrance, and without the investment of one dollar.

BANKRUPT MUST FIND $10,000.

Ordered to Give Up Money He Alleged He Lost in Horse Racing.

Nathaniel A. Prentiss, one of the referees in bankruptcy, has rendered a decision in the matter of Henry Gutwillig, manufacturer of children's clothing, formerly at 336 Broadway, who was adjudged a bankrupt, directing him to pay over the sum of $10,000 to his trustee.

Henry Gutwillig made an assignment in November, 1898, and on the 11th of November he was forced into bankruptcy by his creditors. A trustee was elected. Blumenstiel & Hirsch, acting for the creditors and for the trustee, presented a petition showing an unaccounted-for deficiency of about $54,000 in the assets of the bankrupt, and claiming that the whole or the greater part of this fund was concealed by the bankrupt and should be paid over.

Upon the hearing Mr. Gutwillig, while admitting that he had drawn out in checks to his own order, or to bearer, from June 30 to the date of his assignment, over $30,000, explained that he had lost all his money in betting on horse races. He claimed to have gone to the race track nearly every day and lost on an average from $200 to $800. The greatest loss was $2,500; but he was unable to give any details or particulars as to whom he lost the money or upon what horses he made the bets, or to give any details of his winnings. So that his statement was disregarded by the referee as being unreliable.

The referee in rendering his dicision said:

> "I am of the opinion that the facts are such as to convince any impartial person beyond a reasonable doubt that the bankrupt at the time the petition was filed had in his possession, or under his control, $17,000 or $18,000, but, in order that he may have the benefit of every possible doubt, I am inclined to fix the amount which he then had in his possession or under his control, at $10,000, which sum I am of the opinion the bankrupt should be required to pay over to the trustee herein."
>
> An order has been made directing the bankrupt to make this payment within fifteen days, and if the bankrupt does not comply with the terms of this order Blumenstiel & Hirsch will apply to the court for an order committing him to jail until he makes the payment.

STRICKEN ON THE STREET.

Woman Expires on Way to Hospital, Man's Condition Is Critical.

An elderly woman staggered into a store at Twenty-sixth Street and Broadway last night, fell unconscious, and died a few minutes later as she was being borne to the New York Hospital. Almost at the same time a man fell to the sidewalk in West Twenty-fifth Street, just off Sixth Avenue, and he, too, was taken to the hospital, where his condition was found to be critical.

The woman, whose identity was not disclosed, had a black bag, which contained some sewing utensils, a napkin bearing the initial "S," a pair of eye glasses, cash amounting to $1.31, and a German Savings Bank book numbered 382,100. Written on the latter was the name Agnes Nowak, which is supposed to be that of the woman herself. On a slip of paper in her pocket were three addresses—Mrs. Kuhn, 5 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street; Mrs. J. Koch, 54 Lenox Avenue, and Mrs. Barry, 114 East One Hundred and Nineteenth Street.

Mrs. Koch when seen at her home said that from the description of the woman she thought she was Mary Labousky, who worked for her as a domestic servant about a year ago. She did not know her present address, and had not seen her since she left her house. Mrs. Kuhn could throw no light whatever on the woman's identity, and neither she nor Mrs. Koch knew any one named Agnes Nowak. Both said they would go to the hospital this morning and try to identify the body. Mrs. Barry could not be seen last evening.

The man who fell unconscious not far away was Alonzo B. Cornell, a workman, of 344 East Sixty-second Street. He was suffering from heart disease.

Woman Fatally Stricken on a Car.

A woman whose identity is not known was taken ill last night on a Second Avenue car and was carried into a drug store, where she died in a few minutes. She appeared to be sixty years old and was neatly dressed. In a pocket was found a small leather card-case containing $5. On the case was the firm name of Hennacher, Schirmer & Co. The body was sent to the Morgue.

ROOSEVELT SUPPLANTS CROKER.

Vice President's Portrait Now Ornaments District Attorney's Office.

There is a new face among the pictures of public officials ornamenting the walls of the private office of District Attorney Philbin. Members of the Tammany Committee of Five having business with the Public Prosecutor will perceive on entering the private office of Mr. Philbin, in the exact spot occupied during the Gardiner régime by a lifesize portrait of Richard Croker, the smiling features of ex-Gov. Theodore Roosevelt, Vice President-elect. The former Colonel of the Rough Riders is shown in civilian's attire, with one hand in his trousers pocket and a half smile on his face.

Col. Gardiner, when vacating his office, after removal by the gentleman whose likeness now hangs on the wall, took away with him the Tammany chieftain's picture, along with those of two of the Johns—Carroll and Whalen—which flanked it. The bare space was not long unoccupied, though attachés of the office who survived Col. Gardiner's departure deny all knowledge of the date of the Roosevelt portrait's appearance.

OLD INDICTMENTS DISMISSED.

Brooklyn ex-Officials Escape Trial on Charges of Malfeasance.

In the County Court yesterday the last of the public fraud indictments, originally numbering twelve, and involving a number of office holders under the last City Government of Brooklyn, were dismissed by Judge Hurd. District Attorney Clarke enumerated the indictments as follows, and asked for their dismissal:

Theodore B. Willis, ex-Commissioner of City Works, and William E. Phillips, ex-Commissioner of Police, indicted jointly for conspiracy; Robert W. Fielding, Willis's deputy, twice indicted for conniving at the audit of an alleged false and fraudulent bill against the City of Brooklyn; Oscar Knapp, ex-Water Purveyor, same charge, on one indictment; Theodore B. Willis, bribery; William H. Goff, of the old Department of Sewers, accepting an unlawful fee while in office.

Judge Hurd, in dismissing the indictments, said that he agreed with the District Attorney that conviction was hopeless. The principal witness for the prosecution on these indictments was Daniel Doody, now under sentence of five years' imprisonment at Sing Sing for perjury.

HOUSE BURSTS INTO FLAME

Naphtha Gases Ignite at a Stove in the Hallway.

Woman Escaping with Her Son Falls Headlong Down Stairs—Man Leaps from Window, Breaks His Ankle.

A disastrous fire started at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning in the two-story and basement brownstone house 402 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, occupied as a dyeing and cleaning establishment by Eugene Le Pienne, who lives with his wife, Ernestine, and his son, Eugene, Jr., fifteen years old, on the second floor of the house. The two latter returned on Wednesday last from a visit to Paris. Besides these there were seven other men and women employed in the establishment.

The fire originated in the rear of the parlor hallway. One of the employes lighted a gas radiator which stood in the hallway. The whole house was permeated with the fumes of naphtha, with which the employes were cleaning clothes. In a very few seconds the naphtha ignited, and fire spread rapidly through the building.

Mrs. Le Pienne and her son Eugene were in the second story. The boy took his mother by the hand and started to lead her down stairs. She tripped at the top step and fell headlong down the entire flight. She lay with her clothing ablaze. The boy ran down after her, and attempted to drag her out on the stoop. In doing so his hair was burned from his head, and he was badly scorched about the hands and face.

At this juncture Engine Company No. 35, from One Hundred and Nineteenth Street, near Third Avenue, reached the scene, and the firemen carried Mrs. Le Pienne out in the street, terribly burned about the hands, face, and body. The boy was also led into the street.

In the back parlor of the house there were two women and a man. The women were Anna Fritch and Anna Weldt, who were employed as pressers. The man was Herman Marks, who belongs in Paterson, N. J., and who was on a visit to the house.

When the explosion came these three made their way to the rear window. Marks jumped into the yard, a distance of about twelve feet, and fractured his left ankle. The two women climbed down the leader and had their hands badly lacerated.

Mr. Le Pienne, who was in his office in the front parlor, ran out as soon as the explosion occurred, and in passing through the hallway to the street his eyebrows, mustache, and hair were badly singed. Two men and two women, who were at work in the basement, ran out into the street and escaped without injury.

Mrs. Le Pienne, her son Eugene, and Marks were taken in ambulances to Harlem Hospital, where it was said Mrs. Le Pienne was so badly burned that she is not likely to recover. The other injured persons were treated, and were not required to go to the hospital.

The firemen made short work of the fire after their arrival, but the upper floor of the house and the rear parlor were burned out. The loss is placed at about $1,500.

GASOLINE STOVE EXPLODES.

One Man Burned to Death and Two Others Injured by It.

The explosion of the feed tank of a gasoline stove on the fourth floor of the flat-house at 184 Columbus Avenue yesterday afternoon caused the death of one person, injured two others, and caused a panic among the tenants of the building that for a time threatened the lives of a number of people. Fire, following the explosion, practically gutted the two upper floors of the building.

The dead man was William Wood, a plumber, of 233 West Sixty-eighth Street, who was at work in the building, and whose soldering irons, heating in the gasoline stove, caused the explosion. He was rendered unconscious by the shock of the explosion, and the resulting fire burned him to death. The plumber's helper, Richard Mitchell of Jersey City, was thrown fifteen feet, but escaped with only minor bruises. Mrs. Mary Horn, in whose home the explosion occurred, was burned about the face, head, and body, her clothing catching fire.

Mrs. Horn's apartments are on the fourth floor of the building. Wood was repairing the pipes in the bathroom. His assistant was just outside the room when the plumber put his soldering irons in the gasoline stove, which had a 5-by-5-inch tank attached. The tank almost immediately exploded. Wood was thrown against the wall with terrific force, and fell in a heap on the floor. Mitchell, in the doorway, was thrown across the hall, but was not made unconscious, and, getting up, he ran from the building, shouting "Fire!" The gasoline set fire to the bathroom, which it had wrecked, and the unconscious Wood was slowly roasted to death. The fire quickly spread to other rooms. The explosion and the shouts of the fleeing helper threw the tenants of the entire building into a panic.

Mrs. Horn rushed out into the hall. The moment she opened the door her clothing was ignited by the quickly spreading flames. She ran down stairs into the yard, shouting for help. There several neighbors threw clothing over her and saved her life. A citizen in the street had sent in a fire alarm, and by the time the firemen arrived the whole house was in an uproar. Firemen ran through the building restraining women and children from jumping out of windows and leading many who had become dazed to safety. Several children were trampled upon in the struggles about the fire escapes and more or less bruised, but none of them seriously.

The fire spread rapidly to the top, or fifth floor, and then through to the roof. The fourth and fifth floors and the roof were practically destroyed. The total loss was about $5,000. After the fire had been extinguished the body of Wood was taken from the bathroom, badly charred.

HALF MILLION DOLLAR FIRE.

Business District of Des Moines, Iowa, Suffers a Heavy Loss.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 29.—Property losses estimated at more than half a million dollars were sustained in a fire early to-day in the business district of this city. The losses are estimated as follows:

Frankel Brothers' department store, $375,000; Younker Brothers, $45,000; A. & I. Fredlich, stock, $35,000; Utica Clothing Company, building, $11,000; C. H. Seeley, $10,000; Des Moines National Bank, $5,000; Marx Building, $3,000; Sneer Building, $3,000; C. W. Rogg Company, $10,000; Iowa Telephone Company, $7,000; Des Moines City Railway Company, $3,000; losses to occupants of office rooms, $60,000.

It is stated that the losses are fully covered by insurance. A patrolman discovered the fire shortly after 4 o'clock in the basement of Frankel Brothers' department store. A general alarm was turned in, but before the firemen could make any impression on the flames, which had by this time spread with remarkable rapidity through the building, it was seen that much valuable property adjoining was beginning to burn. The firemen immediately gave up trying to save the Frankel Building and devoted their energies to the surrounding property, consisting of the Des Moines National Bank, the Utica Clothing Company, and the Seeley department store.

All of these buildings caught fire repeatedly, but finally at 6 o'clock, when only one wall of the six-story Frankel Building remained upright, the danger of complete destruction to the business centre was considered over. Outside of the Frankel store the damage was largely caused by water.

Destruction of the electric light, telephone, telegraph, and trolley wires caused much confusion during the morning. The street-car service was almost entirely abandoned, and many factories depending upon electricity for power were compelled to remain closed during the day.

Has Former Sweetheart Arrested.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Carlos F. Bailey was arrested to-day, charged with larceny. The complainant is Mrs. Mary Koppel, who asserts that Bailey became engaged to marry her and borrowed her jewelry and $225 in money. She states that she and Bailey sang in choirs together. She had no idea that he was married, but, she protested he was single, and won her consent to marriage, and secured her property, although he had a wife living.

SITUATION IN VENEZUELA

News from a Trustworthy Source Says that It Is Critical.

Reporters Are Threatened with Expulsion and All Dispatches Are Rigorously Censored.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Jan. 29.—Cables to the Trinidad papers from Caracas are severely censored. The Venezuelan Government threatens three American reporters with forcible expulsion and is rigorously suppressing press dispatches to the United States. Even diplomatic messages are tampered with.

According to advices received to-day from Caracas from a trustworthy engineer, who has arrived there from Pitch Lake, the situation is critical. He says that a hundred and fifty English negroes who were employed to do police duty fled, when the insurgents began firing, into the jungles, only twenty-five Americans being left to protect the property and lives of American families. The messenger from the lake implored the United States Legation at Caracas to afford protection, saying that the lives and property of Americans were exposed to guerrilla attacks, firing around the lake going on nightly, and the Americans being too few to hold out longer.

United States Minister Loomis, according to the same advices, replied that these reports were possibly exaggerated, but that they could not be ignored, and that he would wire the facts to Washington.

Mr. Olcott, the Orinoco manager, has returned from Caracas, where he went to try to arrange for the release of the steamers and schooners captured by a Venezuelan gunboat near Trinidad. The British owner flew the Venezuelan flag, and the members of the crew were not shot.

The revolution in Eastern Venezuela, near the asphalt deposits, is increasing, but the disturbances are remote from Caracas, which remains tranquil.

Information that has reached Port-of-Spain says that the insurgents have retaken Cerupano and will attack Cumana soon. Steamers are not allowed to land passengers or mails at Carupano. The commander of the French cruiser Suchet, which lies there, confirms this intelligence and the reported activity of the insurgents.

It appears that an attempt to capture Ciudad Bolivar, capital of the State of Bolivar, about 375 miles up the Orinoco, is likely to be made as soon as the insurgents have received a large supply of arms expected.

HOW REVOLUTIONS ORIGINATE.

A Native of Venezuela Says They Are Mere "Uprisings."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The publication in to-day's NEW YORK TIMES of the facts about the Venezuela uprising aroused keen interest at the State Department. While the department had received advices indicating the existence of disturbances in Venezuela from Minister Loomis and other sources, nothing was known of their extent, and until a few days ago there was nothing to indicate that there was anything more than sporadic riots and general unrest.

Within the last two days, however, information has come to the State Department which indicates the existence of a very serious situation in Venezuela. The Administration of President Castro is now known to be toppling, and there is some disposition in well-informed quarters to believe that this accounts for his stringent action toward the Asphalt Trust. The usual custom among Venezuelan Presidents is to take as much with them as possible when they decamp, and when a President feels his hold shaking he naturally tries to have the Treasury as full as possible.

A well-known Venezuelan, when asked yesterday his views on the probability of a revolution in his country, replied: "I will tell you when to look out for a revolution. What the Americans describe as revolutions in South America are not revolutions at all. They are simply uprisings. Some dissatisfied General puts himself at the head of his followers and takes the field in some province. That makes trouble, but it is not a revolution. The Government sends troops after him. He may have fifty men, and the Government may send 500. He retreats into the mountains with his fifty men. The Government's 500 men have to proceed with the greatest care and circumspection in attacking the fifty, for they must not suffer a defeat. To do that would change the uprising into something more serious, for it would destroy the Government's prestige. So it may be a long time before the rebellious General is overcome. But it is not a revolution, although the Americans call it such. In the meantime some friend of his may start an uprising in another province, but it is still not a revolution.

"Do not alarm yourself about Venezuela. But when you hear that there is an uprising in this province and that province, until there are disturbances in half the provinces; when the Government troops have suffered a check, and when well-known men are engaged in the rebellion, then you may begin to call it a revolution, and then you may look out for the overthrow of the Government."

The state of things described by this Venezuelan seems now to have come to pass, and Castro's fall may be looked for. If the Asphalt Trust can hold out until his overthrow, they can probably get better terms from the revolutionists, who are now said to be in control of the province where the asphalt lakes are situated.

The name of Gen. Rolando is unknown to the State Department. Americans who are familiar with Venezuelan affairs say that Hernandez is the man to be watched, even more than Andrade. Andrade may be the next President, but Hernandez is the most formidable revolutionist in Venezuela, and will be the power behind the throne and hold an office which will place him in line for the succession.

CHARGE AGAINST TREASURER.

Accused of Stealing Funds of the Hebrew Congregation Beth Jacob.

Charles Simon, thirty years old, a lawyer living at 200 East One Hundred and Ninth Street, was arrested at his home last night charged with appropriating about $350 of the funds of the Hebrew Congregation Beth Jacob of 1,915 Third Avenue while serving as Treasurer of that body. The charge was preferred against him by Simon Lang of 2,072 Second Avenue, Secretary of the congregation. The money was given to Simon to deposit in the East River Savings Bank, and later he returned the bankbook to Mr. Lang with a number of separate entries, showing that the money had been deposited at different times.

The congregation is about to give a fair, and Mr. Lang said that when he went to the bank yesterday, instead of finding the full $350 he found there was only about $7 credited to the congregation, and the tellers assured him that the entries in the pass book were bogus.

Detective Hallihan of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Police Station made the arrest. Simon refused to make any statement before being locked up.

DIED FROM HIS WOUND.

Old Man Who Fought Off Four Burglars Succumbs at Last.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 29.—Washington Hunter, the aged man whose house, near Riverside, was entered on Saturday by burglars, with whom Hunter had a desperate encounter, died to-day from the effects of his wound. The house was at first entered by three men, one of whom struck the old man on the head with a chisel, inflicting a frightful wound. Hunter drove them from the house, but they returned with a fourth man and renewed the attack. Hunter's wife, during the absence of the men, had propped up her husband on the floor, and when the burglars broke in the second time, Hunter fired at them with a revolver. One of the men was wounded and all fled from the house. Mr. Hunter had been sinking slowly since the assault was made. He was seventy-five years old. His assailants were traced to Camden, but they have not been captured.

Vanderbilt Yacht at Florida Port.

FERNANDINA, Fla., Jan. 29.—W. K. Vanderbilt's yacht Valiant arrived in this port to-day and will remain here until Friday or Saturday, when she will be joined by her owner and party and will then proceed on a cruise in Southern waters, her first stop being at Miami.

OLDEST ODD FELLOW DEAD.

He Was Ninety Years of Age and an Ardent Spiritualist.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Jan. 29.—There was an Odd Fellows funeral in Cryptic Hall this evening when Cryptic Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F., held obsequies over the remains of William Lucas, who is said to have been the oldest Odd Fellow in the State. Mr. Lucas's age is not known, but he was close to ninety years. He had lived most of his life in Peekskill. He was married twice, and his second wife now lives in Yonkers. A dozen years ago, on account of increasing age and infirmity, he was placed in the Chapin Home for Old Men in New York, and there he died on Saturday night of old age. His remains were brought to Peekskill yesterday.

He was made a member of Cortland Lodge of Odd Fellows in Peekskill in September, 1841. He became a member of Cryptic Lodge, No. 75, on Nov. 8, 1844, and from that time to this, fifty-six years, had been a member of the lodge. He was a baker by trade.

He was an ardent Spiritualist, and when he disappeared from his bakeshop here some twenty years ago Spiritualists came from other sections and tried to find him. There was considerable excitement during the Winter and searching parties were sent in all directions, and while table rappings were held and mediums were called in to find the old man, nothing was learned until he turned up in Michigan several months afterward and explained that he simply went on a pleasure trip.

UNITY OF CATHOLICS URGED.

Speech by Father Lavelle at Catholic Benevolent Legion Dinner.

District No. 3, Catholic Benevolent Legion, dined last night at the Marlborough Hotel. Mr. James A. MacNevin was toastmaster.

The principal toast was "Catholic Progress in the United States." It was spoken to by the Rev. M. J. Lavelle, rector of the cathedral. He dwelt upon the progress made in the century by the Catholic Church, advocated the unification of all Catholic societies, and declared that the day is almost past "when membership in the Church of Christ will debar a man from the highest office in the gift of the people."

He said that the organization of the Catholic societies into a central body "will mean the dawning of a day of triumph for the Catholic Church, and of greater liberty for the American people than they ever before dreamed of."

The Wanamaker Store

Increasing Your Income

Failure to increase his income may be no fault of the bread-winner of the family; yet failure to increase part of it can only come from sheer carelessness of the offerings of the Wanamaker Store. This is constantly demonstrated by thousands of thrifty women, who by shrewd buying add many dollars to their husbands' salaries.

Some families save money by the heroic economy of doing without many things of real need. Some buy make-shift things that cost less, and make a pretence of the looks and service of the real articles. The latter is false and costly economy; the former is often unnecessary hardship.

Ideal economy is that which procures all articles of need, in the honest quality, and yet saves much of the usual cost. This is the economy which the Wanamaker Store constantly offers, and provides most efficiently during these between-season days. We never offer merchandise that is not above suspicion in the matter of quality. We never tempt to false economy. But day-in-and-day-out this masterful organization spends its brains and energy upon searching out and bringing here worthy merchandise of widely needed kinds, largely new—always new enough to serve some good use; thus presenting broad and constant opportunity for real and positive economy. "A dollar saved is a dollar earned," and dollars invested in Wanamaker offerings mean increased incomes all the year 'round.

Four Offerings of Bed COVERINGS

The worst of the winter is probably still to come; yet blankets and quilts are bought for a half-dozen seasons or more, and are a good investment any time, when they can be secured at such prices as these:

At $2.85 a pair, from $3.50—Beverly white blankets, with wool filling on fine cotton warp; 72x84 inches; weight, 5½ pounds.

At $5 a pair, from $6—Chesapeake white blankets, all wool, warp and filling; 74x84 inches; weight, 6 pounds.

At $3, from $3.50—Sateen-covered Down Quilts, that are remarkable value at $3.50. We have only about 40 left, and make the price a half dollar lower to-day.

At $1.65, from $2.25—Cotton-filled Comfortables, with coverings of printed cambric, tied with ribbon.

Third floor.

Boys' CLOTHING

Heavier, warmer wear is essential for this sort of weather. We're in excellent shape to supply that sort of clothing. Made in the usual Wanamaker way, and priced that way, too. Some of the many good values are here noted:

$5—Double-breasted suit of blue cheviot; double seats and knees; warm, serviceable, good-looking; for boys of 9 to 16 years.

$5.50—Reefers of frieze; double-breasted; storm collar; plaid lining; sizes for boys of 4 to 16 years.

$8.50—Russian hood ulsters; of Oxford or blue frieze; with belt; lined throughout with red flannel. Sizes 6 to 12 years.

Second floor, Ninth street.

House DRESSES

Here's a new arrival of women's attractive and very inexpensive dresses for wear about the house. Some of percales, in newest, prettiest patterns; some of chambray; some of black sateen. Various new ideas in the making and trimming, too. There are two styles in percales at $1; one at $1.50, and one at $1.75. Then there are some better and handsomer dresses of chambray and of black sateen, at $2.25 each.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

BRUSHES

A wide assortment of tooth brushes—French. They make excellent brushes over there. These are very good values—15c to 40c would be fair prices. Instead, they're marked 5c to 25c.

A varied gathering of hair brushes. All with solid backs, with 9 to 13 rows of bristles. 50c to $1 each—very reasonable.

Luxurious OVERCOATS At the Price of the Commonplace

Many a man is endowed with a taste in dress that overleaps his pocket-book. To-day a set-back in price puts style and elegance in Overcoats in touch with even the man who ordinarily refuses to pamper his love of luxury.

This store's constant ambition and endeavor is to have the most elegant ready-made Overcoats in New York. They are made up in the same refined style as custom-made overcoats. Materials, linings, cut and finish are unsurpassed. But stock-taking time is almost here, and the clothing chief wants the cashier to take stock for him. Then after the best season this clothing store has ever known, he is willing to take a loss for a clean stock of his finer goods.

This brings an opportunity for good dressers that has probably never been equaled before. Certainly not with such an assortment—here are sixteen distinct varieties—Overcoats and Raglans—in all sizes from 33 to 46-inch breast measure, though not all sizes in each; and with right fair variety for long and stout men, though the largest quantity is, of course, for regular-size men.

Prices have been $25 to $38. To-day choose for

Twenty Dollars Each

The materials are black and Oxford-mixed cheviots, and a few black and blue kerseys.

Then here is another group of excellent Overcoats and Raglans that have been priced up to $25; to-day marked at fifteen dollars each.

It's a rare opportunity for a fine new overcoat—and you would scarcely buy an overcoat for a single season anyhow.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

SHOES for a DOLLAR Men's and Women's

Not Dollar Shoes, however. The men's shoes are worth $2.50 and $3; but they've been scuffed in handling. That hurts their looks, but a coat of blacking will make them good as new. The women's shoes are $3 values—the cleaning-up of small lots and odd sizes; yet nearly all sizes are in the lot.

A fine collection to pick from for a dollar.

Also a small lot of children's shoes; of stout kidskin, with spring heels; not all sizes, but worth looking over. Worth $1.25; now 65c a pair.

Women's and Children's Shoes in Basement.
Men's Shoes—Fourth avenue, opposite main building.

Plaid DRESS GOODS $1 to $3 Kinds at 50c and 75c

This news looks startling. It is. The goods of the new season are demanding full sway. Winter goods must go. Within these four too narrow, but immovable walls space is extremely valuable, and losses that give space to new goods are gains in the end.

These are radical, perhaps unnecessarily great concessions; but we cut deep to be certain of making our point quickly.

The immediate and generous profit is yours, if you share the goods.

They are all fine plaids—high-priced sorts; in beige and pastel colorings, most of which will be highly appropriate for spring wear. More than sixty varieties to choose from; and to-day prices are absurdly low. These hints of some of the larger lots:

At 50c, from $2.50 a yard—Camel's-hair Polka-dot Foule Plaids.

At 50c, from $1.50 a yard—Mohair Bourette Plaids.

At 50c, from $1.25 a yard—All-wool Cheviot Plaids.

At 50c, from $1 a yard—All-wool Check Cheviots.

At 75c, from $2.50 and $3—Mohair Bourette Overplaid in black and white and high colors, over plaid grounds. Of Foule Vigereaux, in gray, tan and cadet mixtures.

Tenth street.

Wanamaker-Wellington TYPEWRITERS

Did you ever consider that a neatly typewritten letter was as important for business correspondence as a well-dressed man as your business representative?

Shabbiness in either will injure any business. Better pay a hundred dollars and have a good typewriter, if it is necessary to pay that to get the best—which it isn't.

Simplicity gives both strength and speed—vital virtues for a typewriter. It also is less costly than more complex mechanism.

Simplicity is one of the leading features of the Wanamaker-Wellington. The brains of the inventor found the shortest and most direct road to the desired result. He didn't leave it to the skill of the mechanic to make arms to move in mysterious ways to perform the wonderful task.

The Wanamaker-Wellington is rapid, sure, strong. The type face is the best; and it is a powerful manifolder. The price is You'll not be able to find a single reason to pay a dollar more for any typewriter. You'll find few, if any, that will serve you so well at any price.

TALK OF AN EXTRA SESSION

Everybody with a Job to Put Through Said to Favor It.

Conflicting Rumors Follow a Meeting of the Cabinet—House Opposed to Meeting Before December.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Persistent but conflicting reports were in circulation today touching the probability of an extra session of the Fifty-seventh Congress. An idea of the general confusion of mind and understanding is given in one column of a newspaper that says that in a long session of the Cabinet "the consensus of opinion was strongly in the direction of an extra session," and a little lower down declares that "the prospects of an extra session were not increased by any developments at the White House to-day."

The President is referred to variously as having impressed upon everybody who visited him the probable necessity of an extra session, while Representative Payne, speaking plainly and directly on the subject, said that there is no likelihood of an extra session, no necessity for such a session, and that in his visit to the White House to-day the President did not refer to it. If it were likely that an extra session were to be held it is believed that the President would refer to it when absorbed in consideration of the question and talking to the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

There is no doubt that the President and the Cabinet are very much concerned about the situation in Cuba, as well as over the Philippine situation, and that Mr. Root has presented to the best of his information the state of things in Cuba, where the Constitution makers are laboring under the idea that Congress will await the completion of the embryonic Constitution and dispose of it at once. The impression that the Cubans will become restless if the action of the United States is postponed until another session is made the most of by those who are inclined to favor the calling of an extra session.

All the reasons given for immediate action on the Cuban Constitution give rise to doubt as to whether the Congress would easily and promptly dispose of so troublesome a matter. At this time the convention at Havana has submitted no proposition to indicate that the United States is not to be regarded just as any other power. There is no assurance that Cuba's relations to the United States will not permit foreign interference, with no power on the part of the United States to say a word about it. The right to declare war cannot be accorded to Cuba, nor can that island be allowed to make treaties, with Spain or any other country, that may operate against the United States. The disposition of the ruling men, in case immediate and unqualified independence was admitted, would be to create an enormous debt, and this the United States cannot sanction under its interpretation of the promise to see that Cuba has a stable government.

The suggestion is made that if the Cuban Constitution is completed before Feb. 15 an extra session will be imperative, but that if it is not received here for a month, there would be no reason for asking an extra session. It is an unconvincing statement. The matter of a delay of fifteen days, more or less, would not be considered sufficient for the calling of Congress together to criticise the work of the Cubans. The War Department does not now contemplate removing the troops on the announcement that the convention has agreed to a constitution.

An effort is being made to secure from Senators some sort of agreement to vote for a resolution extending to the President the authority to provide rules and regulations for the government of the Philippines until it is decided what elaborate laws shall be accorded to the islands. It is admitted by leading Senators and Representatives that the Congress is not yet ready, partly because it has not been fully instructed by the Taft Commission, to pass permanent laws for the islands. An extra session, called before a policy has been decided upon for the islands, would be a dragging session, and it is deemed wise by the men of experience to allow the needs of the Philippines to become known better before anything more than the Spooner resolution is passed.

The House is represented as being almost to a man opposed to the calling of an extra session, but everybody with a job to put through is frantic for an extra session. All the holders of original or purchased claims find the Cuban and Philippines situations so anxious and demanding such instant attention that they are all for an extra session for the good of the Islanders. Senator Hoar expressed his doubt about the soundness of the reports about an extra session when he answered the remark: "There is a great deal of talk about an extra session," with the calm response: "Any more than usual at this time?"

"It is our duty, in my opinion, to terminate military rule in the Philippines at the earliest practicable moment," said Chairman Cooper of the House Committee on Insular Affairs, to-day. "In the judgment of the Philippine Commission the time has arrived when civil government may be substituted for military rule. If Congress cannot find time at the present session to enact the necessary legislation, I think that an extra session of Congress should be called.

"We have no right to prolong nor be indifferent to unhappy conditions affecting peoples under our control any more than we would if they related to our own citizens."

TAX BILL MAY NOT PASS.

Members of Congress Doubtful Whether Revenues Should Be Decreased.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Senators and members of the House are becoming doubtful about the expediency of cutting down the revenues of the Government to the extent of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 annually. Chairman Cannon's announcement that appropriations for this session promise to foot up $800,000,000, and the request of the Secretary of the Treasury for deficiency appropriations of about $14,000,000, have set them to thinking.

Two conditions are referred to as mitigating against the early and prompt passage of the Tax Reduction bill. One is the question in the minds of Senators as to the wisdom of dropping any revenue with the appropriations creeping up so rapidly, and the other is the hostility manifested by the Ways and Means Committee to the Senate bill. With about four weeks in which to transact all necessary business, and the Senate programme calling for the passage of the Ship Subsidy bill, as well as the tax bill and the Appropriation bills, the tax bill has not been taken up.

Mr. Aldrich says that it will not take much time, as it comes in with a unanimous report. But the House may require a great deal of time to find excuses for defeating it. It is not difficult to find members who assert that it is to be killed in that way, and according to a programme laid out early, the two bills having been constructed so as to assure members of the dominant party that an "honest effort" had been made to carry out certain ante-election pledges.

Mr. Aldrich said this afternoon that he might not call up the tax bill before the end of the week. That is supposed to be in agreement with the promise made by him and other Republicans to Mr. Frye to give the Subsidy bill a chance.

CAPT. CARTER'S REAL ESTATE.

He Transfers Two Lots in Orange Valued at $40,000.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 29.—According to the official records of conveyances of property, Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, the army officer who, after court-martial, was dismissed from the United States Army and sentenced to a term of imprisonment in the military prison, has conveyed to Lorenzo Don Carter certain property located in Orange. The transfer includes two tracts, one at the southeast corner of Highland and Berkeley Avenues, 160 by 225 feet, the other on the south side of Highland Avenue, 349 feet from Berkeley Avenue, containing 225 by 247 feet. The deeds are dated Jan. 25, 1901.

The consideration named is $100, but revenue stamps to the amount of $40 show that the value placed upon the property was $40,000. The property has on it six modern houses, built about four years ago. It was supposed the property belonged to Robert F. Westcott, formerly of Orange, and now of New York, who is Capt. Carter's father-in-law. Who Lorenzo Don Carter is is not known in Orange or in this city.

DAY IN THE HOUSE.

Section of Appropriation Bill Bearing on Agriculture Considered.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The House to-day, in Committee of the Whole, considered the Agricultural Appropriation bill. Mr. Wadsworth, (Rep., N. Y.,) Chairman of the Agricultural Committee, explained the salient features of the measure, which carries $4,377,220 for agricultural purposes, being an increase of $353,750 over the amount of the current law.

Mr. Corliss (Rep., Mich.,) made an attack on the work of the Bureau of Animal Industry. The growth of this bureau and the appropriations therefor, he declared, were altogether too rapid. He made a point of order against the increase of the salary of the Chief of the Bureau from $4,000 to $4,500, and it went out of the bill.

He also moved to cut down the appropriation for this bureau from $1,050,000 to $1,000,000.

Mr. Wadsworth and Mr. Williams (Dem., Miss.,) warmly defended the appropriation. The latter expressed his surprise that Mr. Corliss's attempt at retrenchment should come in connection with the Agricultural Department of all departments, and this particular bureau of all bureaus. This bureau, he said, had done more good than all the others. The South raised no cattle for export, but with the countries which to-day were taking our meat products, especially Germany, inclined to make war upon our meat, there was absolute necessity for the strictest sort of surveillance.

Mr. Mann (Rep., Ill.,) made a point of order against the provision to empower the Secretary of Agriculture to inspect dairy products for exportation. Mr. Wadsworth explained that the provision was designed to prevent the exportation of bogus dairy products under the guise of genuine products, and he appealed to Mr. Mann to withdraw the point of order. The latter declined, however, and the provision went out of the bill.

Mr. Mahon (Rep., Penn.,) raised a point of order against the rearrangement of the Bureau of Plant Industry, the Bureau of Forestry, the Bureau of Chemistry, and the Bureau of Soils proposed by the bill. Mr. Wadsworth then stated that he would be compelled reluctantly to offer in their stead the sections of the current law. At this point the committee rose.

NEGRO CONGRESSMAN SPEAKS.

White of North Carolina Declares His Race Must Be Reckoned With.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—In the House to-day Mr. White, (Rep., N. C.,) the only colored member of the House, made a speech in defense of the political rights of the colored man. Personally, Mr. White said he cared little about the reduction of representation in the South. True, he said, it would further intrench the Republican Party in power and enable it to dispense with the loyal support of the negro race. Some members of the Republican Party, he said, "the lily whites," after receiving the support of the negroes for years, now appeared to believe they had grown a little too good for association with them. But such, he thanked God, were comparatively few in number.

Mr. White declared that the negro on the threshold of the twentieth century was to be reckoned with. He was no longer the negro of forty years ago. Since that time illiteracy among the members of his race had decreased 45 per cent. His race now included 2,000 lawyers and as many physicians; the negroes had $12,000,000 of school property and $40,000,000 of church property; they owned 140,000 homes and farms of the value of $750,000,000, and personal property to the amount of $170,000,000. All this, he said, his race had accomplished in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles—lynchings, burnings, disfranchisement, the slander of the black men and women, and notwithstanding the fact that the door of every trade was closed against the colored man.

The colored man, he said, who had done the country's work for two and a half centuries would not always remain poor. There was plenty of room at the top, and the negro was climbing. In conclusion Mr. White said he was delivering the valedictory of the colored man in Congress. But it was not farewell forever.

The negro, he said, would rise up and come again. He spoke in behalf of an outraged, broken-hearted, bruised, and bleeding people, but a faithful and industrious one. On their behalf he asked no special favors, but only a fair field. As Mr. White finished, the public galleries, which were filled with colored people, applauded vigorously.

AMERICA'S CONSULAR SERVICE.

Secretary Hay Takes Occasion to Commend It—Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The President to-day transmitted to the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State accompanying the annual report upon the foreign relations of the United States. The President himself takes advantage of the opportunity to express his commendation of the Consular reports. He says in his message of transmittal:

"The advance in the general efficiency of our Consular service in promoting trade which was noted in my message of March 1, 1900, transmitting the reports for 1899, was even more marked last year. The promptitude with which the reports of the Consuls are printed and distributed; the generous recognition which is being increasingly accorded by our business interests to the practical value of their efforts for enlarging trade, and the continued testimony of competent foreign authorities to the general superiority of their commercial work have naturally had a stimulating effect upon the Consular corps as a whole, and experience in the discharge of their duties adds greatly to their efficiency.

"It is gratifying to be able to state that the improvement in the service following closely upon the steady progress in expediting the publication of reports has enabled the Department of State this year to submit the annual reports a month in advance of the usual time and to make them as nearly as possible a contemporaneous picture of the trade of the world."

The President concurs in the Secretary's recommendation for the printing of additional copies of the publication.

Secretary Hay in his letter says:

"In accordance with Section 208 of the Revised Statutes, I have the honor of transmit the commercial relations of the United States with foreign countries during the year 1900. These (Consular) reports were prepared, under special instructions from this department, with the object of laying before Congress, with the least delay, a practically contemporaneous statement of the trade, not only of the United States with the rest of the world, but of the various countries with each other. This object, I am happy to be able to say, has been accomplished.

"It may be said that, while a variety of propositions have been under discussion for the improvement of the Consular service, the service has to a very considerable extent improved itself. The practical character of the commercial information obtained by our Consuls, and the celerity with which it is given to the public, continues to excite the emulation of foreign Governments, and during the past year steps have been taken by both Great Britain and Germany to engraft these features of our Consular work upon their Consular systems.

"The general conclusion to be drawn from a survey of the conditions in foreign countries, as described in the reports herewith presented, is that the United States is approaching a position of eminence in the world's markets, due to superior quality and greater cheapness of many lines of its manufactures, which must work great economic changes, and may result in shifting the centre not only of industrial, but of commercial, activity and the money power of the world to our marts. The trade indications of American supremacy during the past year have been so marked that many foreign industries, according to the reports of our Consuls in Europe, are introducing American machinery and labor-saving appliances and remodeling their factory methods, and we may expect, in the near future, a more strenuous competition for which it is important we should prepare ourselves.

"As an aid to such equipment, the study of the great mass of information as to foreign industries and trade conditions which is to be found in the two volumes of commercial relations, will obviously prove most useful to our manufacturers and exporters."

THE NORTH RIVER BRIDGE.

House Committee to Recommend that Time for Building It Be Extended.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The House Committee on Commerce to-day acted favorably on the bill extending the time for building the bridge across the Hudson River from New York City to the State of New Jersey.

FILIPINO LEADERS MAY BECOME PROTESTANTS

Say They Will Not Submit to the Restoration of the Friars.

Meeting in Manila Between the Principals of the Movement and a Presbyterian Missionary.

MANILA, Jan. 29.—Buencamino and some of the other Filipino leaders in Manila have about decided to become Protestants, and are considering the organization of an Evangelical Church. In an interview today, Buencamino said he had learned that the Pope had decided to restore the friars to their former position in the Philippines, and added that the Filipinos would not submit to that, and the effect would be that they would shortly leave the Catholic Church in great numbers.

No public meeting has been held, but the leaders of the movement met privately tonight to discuss the question with the Rev. James B. Rodgers, a missionary of the Presbyterian Board, who advises the establishment of an Evangelical Church.

The principals in the project are Buencamino, Dr. Rosario, Tavara, and Flores. All of these men are members of the Executive Committee of the Federal Party. However, Chief Justice Arellano and Attorney General Torres, the remaining members of that committee, adhere strictly to the Catholic Church, and have distinctly declared that the movement toward Protestantism does not emanate from the party organization and that it is not connected with the organization.

Archbishop Chapelle declined to grant an interview, but his legal adviser reiterated the statement often made that the friars will not be sent into the districts where the people objected to them. He remarked, however, that the Archbishop had received a great number of requests from Filipinos for the return of the friars.

The Rev. Mr. Rodgers was interviewed in regard to the matter. He said there had been no Protestant proselytizing, but that many persons in outlying districts were turning to Protestantism, and that many residents of Manila would doubtless do likewise.

MAY SUCCEED MACARTHUR.

Gen. Wade Is Ordered to the Philippines with Gen. William Ludlow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—A strong belief exists in army circles to-day that the close of Gen. MacArthur's rule in the Philippine Islands is approaching, and that his successor is to be Brig. Gen. James F. Wade. Orders were issued to-day relieving Gen. Wade and Gen. William Ludlow from their present duties and directing both officers to proceed to San Francisco in time to sail on the first transport from that port after March 1. Gen. Wade, who is now in command of the Department of Dakota, is to be temporarily succeeded by Major Gen. Otis.

The terms of the order require that Wade and Ludlow shall report in person to the commanding General for assignment to duty in the Division of the Philippines. At the present time they are MacArthur's subordinates, but that can be changed, and, according to prevalent belief, will be. The new Army bill creates four new Major Generals. It is a foregone conclusion that MacArthur will be one of them, and Wade also is named in nearly all the states. Wade is now the senior Brigadier General, and if the present programme is carried out and he is made a Major General, he will rank MacArthur.

There is no escape from the conclusion that Wade is to supersede MacArthur, except on the theory that the President does not intend to appoint Wade to one of the new Major Generalships. In that case Wade's assignment to duty in the Philippines would simply mean that he is to fill the place of some officer who will lose his rank under the Army bill. As that bill puts an end to the volunteer establishment a number of officers who are now Major Generals and Brigadier Generals will return to their old rank and become Brigadiers, Colonels, and Lieutenant Colonels. There will be a need for Brigadiers in the Philippines, and if Wade is not made a Major General he will be assigned to duty to succeed one of those who lose rank. Gen. Grant, for instance, will lose his standing entirely, being a volunteer officer, while Gen. Ware, who is a Brigadier General of volunteers, will become a Captain again.

There is hardly any doubt, however, that Wade will be one of the Major Generals. He became a Brigadier General on May 26, 1897. Gen. Merriam is next on the list, then Young, and then MacArthur, who did not become a Brigadier until Jan. 2, 1900. Wade also stands at the head in length of service. He received his commission as First Lieutenant of the Sixth Cavalry in 1861, Merriam, Young, and MacArthur receiving their commissions as regular officers in 1860 and Ludlow in 1864. During the civil war Wade was five times brevetted for gallant and meritorious services.

The Cession of Cibutu and Cagayan.

MADRID, Jan. 29.—The cession of Cibutu and Cagayan Islands to the United States has been gazetted.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The President to-day sent a message to Congress recommending the appropriation of $100,000 for the payment of the claim of Spain for Cibutu and Cagayan Islands, in the Philippine archipelago, in accordance with the terms of the treaty recently ratified by the Senate.

TRANSPORT WRIGHT ARRIVES.

Reports at Bermuda About Four Days Overdue from Gales.

BERMUDA, Jan. 29.—The United States army transport Wright, in command of Lieut. H. A. Webber, bound from New York for Manila, arrived here to-day for coal.

The Wright sailed from this port on the 23d inst., and was due at Bermuda about last Friday. It was thought that she might have been driven out of her way by gales, but no fear for her safety was felt.

DR. LEWIS ACTED HASTILY.

He So Declares and Says He Has Made Up with His Wife.

Dr. Norman Lewis of 224 East Twenty-third Street, who appealed to Magistrate Crane, in the Yorkville Police Court, on Monday afternoon, for protection from his wife, who he claimed had beaten him until life was no longer bearable, went there again yesterday in order to ask for a withdrawal of the summons which he had procured the day before. He said that he had acted hastily in procuring the summons and that he had made up his quarrel with his wife.

"She was very much provoked when she threw that egg at me," he said, "and we have decided to make up our quarrel."

Dr. Lewis denied the story printed in some of the afternoon papers that his wife had decided to leave him.

"Our quarrel has been settled peaceably," he said, "and I don't want to say anything more about it."

SORRY FOR MISS HAWKES.

Wife of Bigamist Howard Sympathizes with His Victim.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 29.—Mrs. Howard, wife of George W. Howard, who unexpectedly pleaded guilty to bigamy in a Brooklyn court yesterday and was sentenced to two years and ten months in jail, to-night made her first statement of any kind relating to the case. She says that Howard was a good husband and expresses sorrow for his wrongdoing and sympathy for Miss Hawkes, whom he married in Brooklyn. Mrs. Howard said:

"For the past ten years George Howard always has been a true husband to me and treated me in a noble way in every respect. I have always had what I wanted, and he has been very good to me. One week previous to his wedding with Helen Hawkes he told me that he had a job to place some machinery for a firm abroad. He told me that I could stay in New York or else could go to Cambridge so as to be near my sister. I left New York on Saturday, and on the following Monday he was married. Of course he has done wrong and others must suffer for it, but my whole sympathy is with Helen P. Hawkes, who has severe suffering to undergo."

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

"This community of interest business of which we hear so much in connection with the operations of J. Pierpont Morgan has at last reached at least a portion of the agricultural community. Florida fruit and truck growers have set the pace and the commission men of this city have an entirely new situation to face," remarked one of them. "It has been the custom of growers of oranges, pineapples, and early vegetables to ship to some agent in this city when they thought they saw a good market. Perhaps the stuff would reach here when the market was glutted. There was no demand, a sale at auction for whatever the consignments would fetch, and a very unsatisfactory return to the shipper. He at once charged the commission man with 'doing' him and generally changed to another house.

"Many years ago attempts were made by agents of fruit dealers here who wanted to preserve their reputation for honorable dealing with consignors, to get Florida fruit and vegetable growers to adopt a central office at Jacksonville through which all shipments should be made. In this way they could personally prevent a glutting, as they could always know the condition of the markets here, in Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, and Kansas City, which are the chief distributing points. To that market in need of fruit or truck it could have been shipped, glutting avoided, and a better price secured for the crop. But the bulk of the Floridians were sure that there was a scheme that would operate to their disadvantage back of the plan. They feared that some man in Jacksonville was going to benefit at their expense. So they continued to ship indiscriminately to some firm they fancied without knowing whether the market was overstocked or bare. The result was of course disastrous to them. But they were used to doing business in that way, and would do it in no other.

"In 1894, the year before the freeze there, I know of one man who shipped a big consignment of oranges to a dealer here. He had refused an offer of $1.50 a box on the tree as they stood, the buyer to pay all cost of harvesting and risk of marketing. The owner of the grove, who by the way is still a resident of Brooklyn, argued that if the fruit was worth that to a middleman it was worth a lot more to him. So he shipped his oranges here by freight. They arrived at a time when the market was overflowing and were sold as best I could sell them in a market practically without buyers. After freight, cost of packing, boxing, and commissions were paid the shipper received just 3 cents a box for the fruit for which he had refused $1.50. There are a thousand examples similar to this, though not quite so bad as results perhaps, in the experience of every commission man and grower. One of these was the experience of a strawberry shipper a couple of weeks ago. Fruit had been selling at 30 to 40 cents a quart. But his consignment reached here when the supply far exceeded the demand. That was how hawkers got the fruit and sold strawberries on the street in January for 5 cents a box.

"Florida pineapple raisers are mostly Northern men who know business methods. They saw the danger to their pocketbooks unless the pineapple market was under their control. So last week they met and formed a Pineapple Growers' Association, which will handle the fruit raised in that State. They can select markets and control prices because they have the supply in their hands. Over on the west coast of the State, a correspondent of mine writes, the same growers of three or four counties are forming a similar organization with the expectation of making 'community of interest' work to their advantage in the Chicago and Cincinnati markets, where they deal almost exclusively. It is a mighty good thing for the growers and commission men alike. If the Floridians had opened their eyes to the possibilities they had in their own hands ten years ago, they would have been a rich community, able to control the early Northern markets, instead of being a half-starved and constantly struggling lot of hand-to-mouth farmers as they now are. California fruit growers saw their opportunity a few years ago, and so far as oranges, grapes, and prunes go took advantage of it. The result is that they know to-day the conditions of the markets of the East just as well and perhaps a little better than we know them ourselves. Grapeberry, and truck growers in the Hudson River counties and in New Jersey might learn a profitable lesson if they would drop their jealousies and rivalries and learn a few simple lessons about the laws of supply and demand."

While Delaware is preparing to abolish the whipping post or at least talking about it, Connecticut has a movement on foot to establish it in the land of steady habits. It seems that all the blue laws there have not worked to terrorize as they should wife-beaters and incorrigible boys. For these two classes that peculiarly infest that community the whipping post is the proper remedy according to a faction of the community led by some of the professors in the Yale Law School. They will ask the Legislature to establish punishment with the whip for these two classes of offenders, who they think will be more frightened at the prospect of a whipping than at the fine and imprisonment which are now all they have to face. What the Legislature will do with such a law in the face of the public outcry sure to arise against it remains to be seen. Lawyers say the law works well in Delaware as a preventive of certain classes of crime.

"I had a funny experience with one of the best-known men in this town the other day," said the head waiter at a Broadway restaurant who was discussing the peculiarities of customers. "This man guards his pennies well, even when he is drinking, as he had been doing when he came in here for dinner. He ordered a whole broiled chicken. While waiting he found he was not so hungry as he thought. So he carefully cut the chicken in half, ate half of it, and then announced that he didn't want any more. His check, of course, called for $1, in payment of the whole chicken. He objected and called me over to his table.

"'See here,' said he, 'this waiter has charged me for a whole chicken and I've only eaten half a one; how about it?'

"'You ordered the chicken, didn't you?'

"'Oh, yes, but a man is not supposed to pay for more than he eats here, is he?'

"'No, Sir; of course not.'

"'Well, I've eaten a half chicken, and there's the other half as good as ever it was ready to be served when some one wants a half chicken. The house can have it and won't lose anything by keeping it. Do you think it's right for me to pay for a whole chicken under such circumstances? Whatever you may think I won't do it. But I'll tell you what I will do. I'll pay for the half I have eaten, and you put the other half away in the icebox, keep it for me, and I'll eat and pay for it to-morrow. That's fair, isn't it?'

"I knew there was no use arguing with him, and as he was a regular customer I let him have his own way, paid for half of the chicken out of my own pocket, and allowed him to go without any fuss. I knew he would forget all about the order when he came in again, he was so well 'loaded,' and he did. I was out the half dollar I paid for him, as the manager would not stand the loss, claiming that I should have made the customer pay his full bill. If I had done so he would certainly have remembered it, drunk as he was, and would never have come to the place again. So you see it is not all tips and cigars and beds of roses for a head waiter."

That equestrian statue of Bolivar, once one of the particularly offensive freaks of Central Park statuary, was removed just before the death of the sculptor, as those interested in such matters will remember. But the pedestal, with the date of the birth and death of the South American liberator, remains. The circle where it stands, at about Eighty-fourth Street, is a resort for a lot of young lads from the private schools in the vicinity, who use the Park as a playground. Recently one of these little fellows, wearing an overcoat of cadet gray, cut in the approved army fashion, found a new use for the pedestal. Assisted by his fellows he had clambered to the top of the big granite pedestal and, perched there, to their amusement and delight he did a song and dance, with interludes of broadsword exercise. It was great fun for the boys and for the maids and governesses who were taking their charges about the Park for exercise. Only the untimely arrival of a policeman put an end to the short of the lad who posed as Bolivar in all sorts of grotesque attitudes, none, perhaps, more erratic than the pose of the bronze that has been melted down as old metal.

Message on the Louisiana Lynching.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The President to-day sent a message to Congress renewing his recommendation of last session that Congress make "gracious provision for indemnity to the families" of the two victims of the Tallulah (La.) lynching, July 20, 1899, who were subjects of the Italian Government.

MR. COLER AND THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Controller Issues a Statement Defining His Position.

Cannot Refuse to Pay Marks's Bills Owing to a Decision of the Courts.

Many dealers in Fire Department supplies have during the past two days been making complaints to Controller Coler that they could not furnish the department with any goods because the "combination" by which "Agent" William L. Marks, the close personal friend of Commissioner Scannell, controls the business.

It was said yesterday that the matter would eventually find its way to the Grand Jury room, and that the purchase of fire supplies would be fully investigated.

Controller Coler had experts at work on affidavits and reports yesterday. He will give out in a short time an itemized account showing that the cost of Fire Department supplies to the city is excessive.

Controller Coler gave out the following statement yesterday:

"The Commissioner states that he is 'very sorry for Mr. Coler if he has permitted the department to make such gross expenditures. If the Fire Department has been wasting public moneys, why the fault lies with those who sanctioned the expenditures. I cannot spend $20 for supplies without it is approved by the Controller.'

"This statement on its face would seem to be a true one, but as a matter of fact when the Commissioner enters into an agreement with the contractor for the furnishing of supplies and forwards to this office a bill for the agreed price, the Controller has no recourse but to pay the amount of that bill, in accordance with the terms of the agreement entered into with the head of the department.

"This has been decided time and time again by the courts, when the Controller has attempted to reduce a bill which he considered excessive, even though no agreement had been entered into.

"In the particular case of the Fire Department nearly all of the supplies are furnished under the terms of a contract or agreement and positive evidence as to the excessive prices charged for certain supplies has been placed in possesison of this office, but because of an agreement having been entered into with the department the courts have decided that the city must pay, unless we can prove fraud or collusion. We cannot prove in this case, but Mr. Marks openly admits combination.

"With this provision of the law Mr. Marks is entirely familiar, and in calling at this office in relation to a claim which required explanation, has based his demands for payment on the ground that the supplies were furnished under an agreement.

"As an example of live business talent we can probably all admire Mr. Marks, who by his own admission never sold one dollar's worth of supplies to the Fire Department, and who now softly admits that he receives nearly every contract for supplies from that department.

"This business talent impresses one most strongly when it is stated that previous to the administration of Mr. Scannell there was no competition for furnishing supplies to the department, but that now the supplies were furnished under competition and —he gets them."

ETCHINGS BY MEISSONIER.

Engravings by Famous Workmen After the Paintings of the Master.

The usefulness of the etcher and engraver to an artist, in making his work known to thonsands who can never own and may never see the original painting, was never better shown than in Meissonier's case. Perhaps the fact that he began life as an engraver put him in touch with men of his earlier craft; certainly he must have continued to regard etching and engraving with more interest and of course far more knowledge than the painter who lacked his experience with the burin. The cloud of white sheets printed from copper, wood, or the lithographic stone made him widely known before the photograph seized the field and drove all but the finest workmen with acid and burin to other tasks. It was no bad idea of the owners of the Schaus Gallery to select a portion of this material and form an exhibition of Meissonier's works as they appear when etched and engraved.

Wood cuts, lithographs, fac similes, and photogravures have been avoided, in order to concentrate attention on the etchings and engravings only. As it is, there are nearly 200 exhibits, which include eighteen etchings by the master himself. Here is an illustration to "Les Deux Perdrix," a story in the Contes Rémois, showing a man running with every symptom of terror, and a signed piece dated 1843, one of the "Smokers." Seven soldiers in costumes of the sixteenth century stroll along arm in arm; it is an illustration for the Picaresque novel "Lazarille de Tormes." Then there is a vellum proof signed, and a finished etching of "The Fishermen with Rod and Line," a moored boat with two men; and the "Seated Trout Fisherman." Here is the portrait of the actor Reignier as Annibal in "L'Aventurière," by Augier; and the "Man with a Sword," a gentleman of the time of Louis XIII., trying the metal of a long rapier. The "Story of the Siege of Bergop Zoom," a little picture formerly in the Secretan Collection, is seen in etched reproduction. Two men sit side by side on a bench and one draws the ground plan of a fortification with his cane in the sand.

Meissonier had a high opinion of Meissonier, and not only painted but etched his own portrait many times. Here we see two etchings of him on horseback, a mode of getting about which pleased him all the more because he was very short of leg and looked better ahorse than afoot. One shows him riding to the right, the other to the left. Most of these etchings are "remarques" to be printed in the margin of large etched reproductions of his paintings. Thus, one of the portraits of himself is for the margin of a reproduction of "La Rixe," the famous quarrel over cards, given by Louis Napoleon to Albert, the Prince Regent. An Imperial Eagle was etched for the black and white reduplication of "1807," and a couple of hussars on Japan paper belong to the white border of the etching after "La Partie de Piquet."

The bulk of this little exhibition is work by no less than sixty-eight etchers and engravers after Meissonier's masterpieces. L. Flameng is seen in "Le Porte Drapeau," Jules Jacquet in celebrated etchings after "Jena—1803," and "Friedland—1807," so well known over here, and "La Campagne de France—1814." There are four specimens of the art of that capital etcher, Jules Jacquemart, including a "Reader" and the "Lover of Engravings." Of course Le Rat is represented, as well as Paul Rajon, nor is Henri Vion wanting to the long list of men who have popularized Meissonier, nor Felix Bracquemond, who etched "La Rixe." The latest of all is Waltner, from whom we have two portraits of Meissonier, an artist's proof on vellum, and another likeness, a remarque proof on vellum, signed by Mme. Meissonier and the etcher and dated 1880. It was the last portrait. One sees the famous beard that recalled Michael Angelo's Moses and finds that as he aged Meissonier became handsomer—at least under the hands of his friends.

VINDICATED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Lieutenant Dismissed in 1867 Is Retired on Lieutenant Colonel's Pension.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 29.—Thomas P. O'Reilly of 304 High Street, who for thirty-four years has been fighting for a vindication of his good name as a soldier, received word to-day that Congress had passed a bill yesterday placing him on the retired list as a Lieutenant Colonel.

In 1867 O'Reilly, who was then a Lieutenant, was court-martialed for alleged insubordination to Col. E. S. Otis, now Major General, and was dismissed from the army. He claimed his dismissal was unjust, and he never let up fighting it. It is said that Gen. Otis has admitted that he made a mistake in the charge he made against O'Reilly.

Rear Admiral Kautz Retired.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Rear Admiral Albert Kautz, who has just been relieved from command of the Pacific station, was placed on the retired list to-day on account of age. He has had a long and distinguished career, of which nearly eighteen years were spent at sea. During the Samoan troubles about two years ago, Admiral Kautz was in command of the American forces in that quarter, and it was largely through his firmness and conservatism that serious international complications were averted.

CLANWILLIAM, Jan. 29.—Bethune's column, after a heavy march, has joined De Lisle's column.

Col. Bethune is now in command, and it is understood that he will undertake what is recognized as the extremely arduous task of attempting to drive the Boers out of Cape Colony.

CARNARVON, Jan. 29.—It is reported that the Boers are intrenched at Calvinia, which serves as their base. The district affords them plentiful supplies of victuals and remounts.

THE JAMESON RAID LETTERS.

Evidence as to How They Were Made Public Adduced in a Libel Suit Heard in London.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Some curious evidence was presented to-day during the trial of a suit for libel brought by R. K. Turnbull, an American newspaper man, against B. A. Hawksley, counsel for the British Chartered South Africa Company. The latter accused Turnbull of having, while employed by The Daily Mail, instigated a confidential clerk named Wallis to abstract confidential letters referring to the Jameson raid from Hawksley's office. These are the letters which were published some time ago by the Indépendance Belge.

Turnbull denied the assertion. He declared he had not bribed Wallis, but only gave him newspaper rewards for information. All he had done was on behalf of The Daily Mail, and with the full approval of Mr. Harmsworth. The money was not paid to Wallis for stealing documents, but for copying them.

In the course of the testimony Turnbull said he was approached by Messrs. Massingham, Stead and Labouchère in connection with the letters. He told Mr. Stead the documents could be purchased for £1,000. The letters finally, through Wallis, reached the hands of Dr. Gavin Brown Clark, the former Radical member of Parliament for Caithness and ex-Consul General of the Transvaal in London, and appeared in the Indépendance Belge and The Daily Chronicle.

Under cross-examination Turnbull admitted he had been discharged by Mr. Harmsworth; but, through the instrumentality of Mr. Hawksley, Mr. Harmsworth gave him another trial, announcing this intention in a letter to Mr. Hawksley, in which he said:

"Seeing that Turnbull has expressed regret, and as his serious offense was really due to his American training, I will give him another trial."

After further similar evidence the jury stopped the case, and a verdict was entered for Mr. Hawksley.

LONDON TIMES GIVES WARNING.

Calls Attention to England's Excess in Imports Over Exports.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Times, in an editorial dealing with an important and perplexing question of true significance, the excess in value regularly exhibited by England's imports over her exports, especially looking to the fact that during the last three and a half years the United States have exported over £400,000,000 more merchandise, gold and silver, than they imported, says:

"It is not easy, yet it is a matter of the utmost moment, to ascertain whether as a nation we are still saving and living within our income, or whether we are beginning to live on the accumulated savings of former times. If the latter is correct, the outlook is distinctly disquieting for the country's commercial future. Considering that some three-fourths of the American excess exports have come to this country, it is very desirable to get accurate and definite statistics as to our 'invisible exports.'

"Mr. Gage has thrown out this idea of ascertaining the movements of securities between the two countries. It is all the more important for England, and the suggestions of a financier of Mr. Gage's experience should not be lightly set aside as impracticable."

STRIKE ON PARIS RAILROAD.

Employes of Underground Line Demand Higher Wages.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—A general strike of the employes of the underground railroad has been declared. The stations are occupied by troops. There is a general congestion of passenger traffic, especially among shoppers and people traveling to and from business.

The strike is due to the demands of the employes for higher wages and the reinstatement of dismissed men. The strikers are quite orderly.

The company has posted advertisements for electricians and conductors, but unless it re-engages the strikers it is not likely to be able to resume traffic within a fortnight.

The railroad thus far has been very unfortunate. There have been frequent breakdowns and the present stoppage is causing great inconvenience.

The strikers have issued an appeal to Parisians, declaring that the company and not the men is responsible for the stoppage.

Much Damage by Storms in Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The severe weather continues throughout Germany. The damage seems to have been greatest in the East Frisian district. At Lear and Emden floods have wrought enormous injury, although there has been little loss of life. The new harbor at Leer has been destroyed. In the Prussian Diet to-day Dr. Lotz asked Government aid for 1,000 victims, and relief committees are already being formed.

This evening a heavy snowfall is reported in Northern and Central Germany, blocking the roads and destroying telegraph wires. Communication in Berlin itself is largely interrupted.

ASKS FOR CHANGES IN FRANCHISE TAX LAW

State Tax Board Makes Recommendations to the Legislature.

Wants Power to Equalize Special Franchise Valuations—Discusses the Law.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The State Board of Tax Commissioners to-day recommended to the Legislature that several amendments to he Franchise Tax law be made. The principal amendments recommended are as follows:

First—Restoration to local assessment of property upon highway crossings where the occupation is less, longitudinally, than 250 feet.

Second—The law should authorize and direct this board to equalize, after hearings, special franchise valuations found by it to conform with the local assessment of other real estate in the tax district where special franchises exist, upon such proofs and information as the board can obtain.

Third—That certiorari proceedings be taken directly to the Appellate Division on appeal.

Relative to the proposed changes in the law, the board in its annual report submitted to the Legislature to-day, says:

"A year's practical working has disclosed some changes which can be made in the special franchise law to its betterment, in execution. The principle has thoroughly approved itself. There are several variations in administrative details which we shall ask your honorable body to consider in the form of proposed amendments. These relate chiefly to the procedure prescribed.

"It is quite apparent that a provision that returns to the writs of certiorari be made to the Appellate Division in the first instance, and the first hearing had in that tribunal would go far to facilitate the speedy administration of the law. Delay necessarily incident to hearings at special term would be avoided and much time and expense saved to the State and corporations. Moreover, it would put beyond question or controversy what the courts have held up to this time that matters relating to the assessment of special franchises must be heard in the judicial department in which the Capitol is situated. This would not only greatly subserve the convenience of this department, but that of the law officers of the State, upon whom the execution of this law in part devolves, without in any wise detracting from the rights of any person or corporation interested.

"We are advised that by reason of an incomplete statement in the sub-division of the tax law authorizing the assessment of special franchises, the assessment of bridges over and cables under water is of doubtful legality, although apparently the statute intended to provide for the assessment of such bridges and cables as special franchises. We recommend such an amendment as will render this requirement more certain.

"The taxes resulting from purely highway crossing valuations are not adequate to the cost to the State of making the same. The expense for clerical and other work to the corporations exceeds the taxes they can be fairly called upon to pay in this particular. The labor to the State and corporations is considerable; the ascertainment of exact data difficult; identification of many highway crossings impracticable. Irritation and hardship to those affected are the chief gains over local assessment in this class of valuations."

As to the second recommendation, the board says:

"Such authorization will afford the warrant of law for supplying a remedy in the first instance to corporations. The corporations are now compelled in every case, involving great or small amounts, to resort to a court proceeding for a reduction which this department may be willing to admit is equitable, but is not by the law, in its present reading, permitted to make.

"The suggestion, sometimes advanced, that the special franchise tax law should fix a graduated scale of percentage tax upon gross receipts is untenable and cannot be seriously maintained. A careful consideration of this proposition will convince one that unless the percentage is made so low as to be ridiculous, and to practically do away with the special franchise tax, it would do grave injustice. It would allow the large corporations, which should pay and are able to pay a just and reasonable tax, to escape the payment of such a tax, while, on the other hand, it would compel many of the smaller and poorer corporations throughout the State, whose franchises have but little or no value, to pay an unjust burden of taxation.

"Taxation of net receipts is impracticable, because salary lists would be so magnified as to leave no net receipts. The door to fraud would be pushed wide open by any such scheme not only in undue swelling of salaries, but in other ways obvious.

"Of the trolley roads in the State, only some 10 per cent. have been enabled to earn dividends during the last three years. Many of the trolley roads have, to greater or less extent, increased their floating indebtedness by borrowing money with which to pay interest upon their bonds. Increased tax upon the gross earnings of such corporations would not be taxation upon special franchise values, as we understand the same.

"The excessive bonded indebtedness of some of these trolley roads represents, to some extent, two or more constructions. We find instances where seemingly excessive capitalization is in large part explained upon grounds other than promoters' profits, or 'water.' In some instances we have found tangible property in the streets being underassessed by the local Assessors. In other cases overvaluations were being made, with the purpose of including special franchise value, before passage of the special franchise act.

"In reference to the public hearings of this board upon special franchise valuations made by it, the press from time to time has announced that this board has arbitrarily refused to disclose its method of making valuations. It would have given more correct general impression to have stated the fact, repeatedly made public by the board, that it had adopted no inflexible, hard-and-fast, cast-iron rule by which to measure the values of all or any class of properties in the streets. The conditions are not the same in any two instances. Each case must be individually considered, with the elements and factors affecting it, and such has been the treatment, to the full extent of the information reported or obtained.

"It is not probable that final decision upon the constitutionality of this law, or validity of the grounds of valuation under it, will be had for several months. In an initial adjudication at Buffalo, Justice Kenefick sustained the constitutionality of this law in a thoroughly digested opinion, which received the praise of press and people.

"The Appellate Division in the Third Department has held that the 'grounds' for a valuation need only be set out in a return by this board to a writ of certiorari, and not the 'methods' or workings of the Commissioners' minds while the valuation was in process of production. Returns to writs are being now prepared and served at the rate of several per day."

DISAGREE WITH GOV. ODELL.

State Tax Commission Does Not Think Abolition of a Direct Tax Is of Any Importance.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Something of a laugh is going around this afternoon over the variance of opinion between Gov. Odell and the State Tax Commission on the question of a direct State tax. Gov. Odell has urged the abolition of a direct tax as one of the most advantageous of things and has had tax bills prepared so as to meet the State expenses indirectly. The State Tax Commission, in a report to-day, says that the State tax is an "item of minor moment," and that if those who desire to aid the overtaxed real estate owners in the State would take an intelligent course they must devote themselves to the reduction of local taxation. The board says:

"It must be borne in mind that the direct tax imposed by the State upon counties is, relatively speaking, an item of minor moment. The average tax rate of the State is, say, 2½ per cent. The State tax rate, 1.96 mills this year, may average 2 mills, or one-fifth of 1 per cent.

"Of all direct taxes paid in the State, it is safe to assert, ten dollars go to local use to one for the State's needs. For illustration: The total direct State tax latest apportioned among the counties, and being now paid, was $10,704,152.30, the tax rate being 1.96 mills. Of this total direct State tax Greater New York pays $5,922,652.45, or 64 per cent. of the whole. Compared with the total annual budget of that city, amounting approximately to $100,000,000, it will be noted that the State's demand amounts to less than 7 per cent. The gain of $7,000,000 in direct State taxation to our big metropolis will be more than offset by the loss of explanation by the local Tax Department of the cause of heavy taxation.

"It is now the ever-ready and emphatic assertion of that local department that the burdensome taxes of New York City are due to the unjust and oppressive rural majority of the State Board of Equalization. Were New York to pay the entire $10,000,000 of direct State taxation, it would leave some ninety millions to be accounted for to the people of that great community.

"Since local taxation is so very much greater and heavier than State taxation, the deduction is inevitable that any remedial legislation failing to comprehend this local status must fall far short of ameliorating the condition of the real estate owner, or tenant, who is at this time concededly most largely concerned and hopeful of help."

THE TRANSFER TAX BILL.

Measure Will Be Reported To-day with Over Fifty Amendments.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The Senate Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment will report out to-morrow morning for amendments and reprinting the Krum bill taxing transfers of property. Over fifty amendments were made at the committee meeting, most of them being purely technical, a word of two having been omitted in the original draft. The principal amendment is made in Section 230 regarding expectant estates. It reads as follows:

Estates in expectancy which are contingent or defeasible, and in which proceedings for the determination of the tax have not been taken or where the taxation thereof has been held in abeyance, shall be appraised at their full undiminished value when the persons entitled thereto shall come into beneficial enjoyment or possession thereof, without diminution for or on account of any valuation theretofore made of the particular estates for the purpose of taxation, upon which said estates in expectancy may have been limited.

When property is transferred, devised, or bequeathed in trust or otherwise for persons or corporations in succession with are liable to taxation at the same rate, such tax shall be fixed at such rate, and when so imposed shall be due and payable forthwith by the executors or trustees out of the principal of the trust fund or property. And when property is transferred, devised, or bequeathed in trust or otherwise for persons or corporations in succession who are not liable at the same rate or where some of the persons or corporations taking in succession are exempt, the tax on such contingent or expectant estates shall be immediately fixed at the rate of 2 per centum on the value thereof, and when so imposed shall be due and payable forthwith by the executors or trustees out of the principal of the trust fund or property.

Another amendment provides that the Surrogates of New York County may jointly appoint or at pleasure remove assistants as follows:

Section 224—Kings County, a transfer tax assistant at $4,000, a transfer tax clerk at $2,000, with $500 for necessary expenses. In Queens, a transfer tax clerk at not more than $1,500. In Westchester, a transfer tax assistant at not more than $2,000; Suffolk at $720; Oneida, two clerks, $1,200; Ulster, $720; Onondaga, two clerks, $1,200; Monroe, two clerks at $750 each and not more than $200 expenses; Erie, a clerk at $1,800. Such salaries shall be paid monthly.

TO AMEND TAX BILLS.

Gov. Odell Says Measures Will Have to be Changed.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The indications are that all of the new taxation bills of Gov. Odell will have to be amended. The Governor himself makes this statement about them:

"The bills were drawn to initiate the ideas conveyed in my message, and they may have to be changed considerably in phraseology."

The bill taxing savings banks upon their surplus is the first one to be found deficient, and suggestions have already been made to Senator Krum's Committee on Taxation for amendments designed to so define the word surplus that there may be no escape from the measure.

The amended section provides that every savings bank liable to pay the 1 per cent. tax shall, on or before Aug. 1 in each year, make a written report to the Controller of its condition at the close of business on June 30 preceding, stating the actual amount of its surplus, and containing such other data as the Controller may require. No portion of such surplus shall be deemed to be invested in non-taxable securities unless such non-taxable securities, together with such surplus, exceed the whole assets of such savings bank, in which event, for the purposes of this act only, the excess of such assets above the amount of such non-taxable securities shall be deemed surplus.

MIDWIFERY IN NEW YORK.

Mr. McKeown Introduces a Bill to Regulate the Practice.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The practice of midwifery is to be regulated and restrained in New York City, according to the provisions of a bill introduced this morning by Assemblyman McKeown of Kings County. The Board of Health of New York is authorized to appoint, on or before July 1, a Board of Examiners in Midwifery, who shall have been licensed to practice physic and surgery in this State. The board is to consist of the Sanitary Superintendent of the Board of Health, the Assistant Sanitary Superintendents of each city, borough, and the Chief Inspector of Contagious Diseases in Manhattan.

The examiners are to meet on the second Monday of July, October, January, and April of each year, and other days the board may appoint, in the Borough of Manhattan. They shall examine all candidates, who must be of good moral character. A certificate will be issued to successful candidates, the fee for which shall be $10.

All persons authorized to practice midwifery are authorized to do so only in cases of normal labor, and shall not assist labor by any artificial, forcible, or mechanical means, nor prescribe or employ any dangerous drug, nor attempt the treatment of disease, except where the attendance of a physician cannot speedily be procured.

The Board of Examiners shall have power after a proper hearing to recommend to the Board of Health the revocation of a license issued. All licensed midwives must register annually at the office of the Board of Health before July 1. The penalty for practicing midwifery without a license shall be a fine.

PROVIDES FOR A NEW PARK.

To be Paid for by Bonds to be Issued by the City.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Assemblyman James E. Smith to-day introduced a bill to ratify the laying out of the property bounded by Fifty-second Street, Fifty-fourth Street, Eleventh Avenue, and Twelfth Avenue, in the Borough of Manhattan, as a public park. The bill provides that the total expense incurred in the laying out of the park shall be borne by the City of New York, and shall be paid from the proceeds of bonds and stocks of the City of New York, which the Controller of New York City is directed to issue under the act to provide for the location and improvement of additional public parks in the City of New York.

It is further provided that such bonds and stocks shall be in addition to the amount heretofore authorized to be issued and expended for park purposes in any one year. Local assessments heretofore made for defraying part of the expense of locating and improving the park are vacated.

TO AID POLICE TELEGRAPHERS.

Bill, If Passed, Will Make Them Eligible for Promotion.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Senator Fuller of Brooklyn this morning introduced a bill designed to benefit the telegraph operators connected with the Police Department of Greater New York, giving them the actual rank and pay of a Sergeant and making them eligible to try the examinations for Police Captain. Prior to the enactment of the Greater New York charter, Senator Fuller says, the telegraph operators ranked as Sergeants, but under the new charter they are simply telegraph operators, drawing a salary of $1,000 per annum, besides losing the chance for promotion and their eligibility to try examinations for the Captaincy.

If the bill becomes a law the telegraph operators will receive $2,000 per annum, $100 more than at present.

Bills Aimed at Gas Companies.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Julius Harburger of New York introduced in the Assembly today two bills aimed at the gas companies. One provides that the inspection of gas in New York City shall be made by the Commissioner of Public Buildings and lighting as often as he may see fit. The other provides that every corporation, firm, or individual manufacturing and selling illuminating or fuel gas in the State of New York and distributing the same to consumers through pipes laid under avenues, streets, highways, or public roads, shall report twice each year to the State Board of Health on the amount of gas made, in cubic feet; amount of gas sold, in cubic feet; amount of gas consumed in works or offices, in cubic feet; amount of gas unaccounted for, in cubic feet; length of mains in use; average diameter of mains in use; gas unaccounted for per mile of main, in cubic feet, and percentage of gas unaccounted for to total output.

$350,000 for Canal Repairs.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Assemblyman T. D. Lewis of Oswego to-day introduced the bill appropriating $350,000 for extraordinary repairs and improvements to the canals of the State.

MISCELLANEOUS BILLS.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Among the bills introduced in the Assembly to-day were the following:

By Mr. KNIPP—Prohibiting the transfer of misdemeanants from the Industrial School at Rochester to the Elmira Reformatory unless they have been convicted of a felony.

By Mr. MARSON—Fixing the close season for wild deer from Nov. 16 to Sept. 15, both inclusive; also providing that wild deer or venison shall not be possessed or sold from Nov. 21 to Sept. 15, both inclusive.

By Mr. HOLSTEN—To close that part of Sea Breeze Avenue in Brooklyn lying between the easterly side of the Ocean Parkway and the westerly side of East Fifth Street.

By Mr. BRYAN—Providing that in case of total loss by fire of any building in this State, it shall appear that the total fire insurance on said building exceeds the actual cash value thereof at the time of said fire, and if the insurers are liable for said loss and shall pay less than the amount of the insurance on said building, there shall be paid to the assured on the surrender of the insurance policies a pro rata return of premium on the excess of insurance over value, from the date of said insurance to the expiration thereof, and each insurer shall pay its pro rata share of said return.

By Mr. SEYMOUR—Amending the Civil Code in relation to distribution of personal property of an intestate which provides that if there be no husband or wife surviving, no children, no representatives of a child, and no next of kin, then the whole surplus shall be distributed equally to and among the next of kin of the husband or wife of the deceased.

The following bills were introduced in the Senate:

By Mr. WILCOX—Authorizing Auburn to expend $25,000 for the Fire Department.

By Mr. STEWART—Authorizing the Ithaca Board of Health to adopt a Sanitary Code.

By Mr. SLATER—Amending the Act incorporating the "New York Christian Home for Intemperate Men" so that the site may be situated outside of New York City.

By Mr. WAGNER—Directing the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York to allow interest on assessments for paving Logan, Berriman, Richmond, and other streets in the Borough of Brooklyn which have been refunded. The bill was passed a year ago, and was vetoed by Mayor Van Wyck.

MR. ROOT URGES LEGISLATION.

Asks Lieut. Gov. Woodruff to Push the Bill to Cede Under Water Land to the Government.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—In the Assembly today the bill introduced by Mr. Wilson giving authority to the Commissioners of the Land Office to grant and convey to the United States certain lands under the water at Governors Island, and to cede jurisdiction over the same to the United States, was ordered to third reading, with an immaterial amendment proposed by Mr. McKeown of Brooklyn.

There was strong opposition to the bill on the part of some of the Brooklyn members. This oppsition was checkmated by the tactics of Leader Alids. Under Mr. Alids's lead the majority showed a disposition to make no concessions to the opposition. His tactics led all the opponents of the bill to rally in support of Mr. McKeown's amendment, leaving it to the discretion of the Land Commissioners as to whether they would make the grant, instead of directing them to make it, as the bill provided. When the whole opposition had dwindled down to a fight for this amendment and the majority had been practically commited to the bill if this change were made, Mr. Alids blandly announced that he had no objection to the amendment. It was then quickly adopted, and the bill was ordered to a third reading.

During the debate on the bill Mr. Wilson referred to a letter which the Secretary of War had sent to Lieut. Gov. Woodruff asking for the passage of the bill. Then this letter was obtained from Lieut. Gov. Woodruff. It is as follows:

"I inclose bill to cede jurisdiction to the United States of the land under water south of Governors Island. The bill is precisely the form of the bill by which land under water at Governors Island and other points in the neighborhood of New York were granted in May, 1880. This merely extends somewhat to the south of the land under water granted at Governors Island at that time. I am very anxious to get the matter through in such shape that filling will afford the means of disposing of the material taken out of Buttermilk Channel, thus reducing the cost of that enterprise and making it easier to accomplish.

"The benefits to the entire City of New York will be very great, and the benefits to Brooklyn will be especially so. The improvement will enable us to make permanent arrangements for transacting business at that point, to maintain a more respectable garrison, and to provide for interior defense by establishing batteries of rapid-firing guns, a matter of great importance because, as the defenses of the harbor are now arranged, if a fast little boat were to get up through the Narrows with rapid-fire guns she would have the City of New York at her mercy.

"I hope the thing will swing through without much delay, because I want to use this and the Buttermilk Channel deepening to help each other, and, as there are but a few weeks of the session of Congress left, there is not much time for action before the committees."

The permanent arrangements for transacting business to which Secretary Root refers are said to be arrangements which will enable the shipment of freight to the Philippines to be made from the Harbor of New York instead of from the Harbor of San Francisco, as is now done.

HOSPITALS AND MALPRACTICE.

President of the State Medical Society Holds that Institutions Should Be Held Responsible.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The State Medical Society met in its ninety-fifth annual session here to-day. Dr. A. M. Phelps, President, in his address to the society, attacked the bill of Senator Grady which provides that hospitals shall not be liable for malpractice cases. He said:

"Recent decisions in cases of malpractice suits brought against hospitals have been decided against the latter on the ground that any hospital that treats patients for pay and has private rooms where private patients are treated is the principal defendant. This is right. The surgeon is simply the agent of the hospital, and very grave injustice has been done to faithful surgeons and doctors on account of the neglect of some of the internes or nurses, and to my knowledge such men have been prosecuted for malpractice. The hospitals have turned their backs on them; and they have been mulcted in large sums. Now, this bill introduced by Senator Grady is vicious and should be defeated, and the Chair recommends that this society should pass a resolution asking the Legislature to defeat it, and that, in the event of its passage, the Governor veto it. It is to be hoped that the legislative committee will take the matter in hand and see that this piece of vicious legislation is defeated."

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Medical Society of the State of New York heartily indorses the report of the Tenement House Committee appointed by Gov. Roosevelt and urgently requests the Legislature to adopt its recommendations regarding the improved housing of the poor and the further control of the spread of infectious diseases.

OPPOSE THE BELL BILL.

Druggists and Patent Medicine Men to Fight Against It.

The passage of Assemblyman Bell's bill to prohibit any person other than a registered physician to prescribe for the sick and ailing was opposed and condemned at a meeting of druggists, pharmacists, and proprietary medicine men of the city in The Mail and Express Building yesterday.

Assemblyman Bell's bill, the drug men said, had been drawn up by the County Medical Society and was directed against Christian Science practitioners, but its provisions had been made so sweeping that if passed it would become a misdemeanor for any druggist or other citizen to prescribe by printed or written word or orally any remedy for a trifling ailment.

"Why," said Dr. William Muir, "nobody could recommend to a friend a hot foot bath for a cold without danger of arrest."

Col. E. W. Fitch of the Parke-Davis Company presided. In attendance were representatives of all the large wholesale and retail druggists in the city. President Felix Hirseman of the State Pharmaceutical Association, opposing the measure, said that he believed in passing a bill which would give the administration of medicine to legitimate physicians, but that the Bell measure would never be enforced if passed, and would open the doors to blackmail and persecution.

The patent medicine men present stated that the bill, if passed, would have the effect of practically ruining many wholesale druggists and manufacturers throughout the State. A Committee of Fifteen was appointed to appear before the Assembly Committee on Public Health to-day and oppose the bill.

The Optical Society of the city at a meeting Monday night protested against that provision of the bill placing "in the hands of less than 200 ophthalmologists the exclusive right to designate where and whom eye glasses shall be sold to the six million citizens of this State." A committee was appointed to appear before the Public Health Committee of the Assembly.

AUTONOMY IN SCHOOL AFFAIRS.

Commissioner Waldo of Brooklyn Takes Such a Bill to Albany.

Commissioner of Records George E. Waldo, Chairman of the sub-committee of the Republican Executive Committee of Kings County, who was intrusted with the drawing up of a bill for the amendment of the school law so as to provide home rule in the different boroughs, took to Albany yesterday a bill embodying his ideas and those of George Freifeld, Chairman of the Special Committee on Charter Revision of the Brooklyn School Board.

Autonomy in school affairs is strongly favored in Brooklyn. The provisions of Mr. Waldo's bill are:

For a Central Board of Education of the Greater New York, composed of delegates from the boards of each borough, the board to have power to make by laws and fix salaries of its employes, and generally look after the educational system of the Greater New York, and make the same uniform, so far as practicable.

The Borough School Board in each borough to be appointed by the borough President, to have entire control of school matters in their respective boroughs, subject to the requirements of the State school law and to rules and regulations of the central board.

A City Superintendent to be appointed by the central board, whose duties shall be to supervise and visit from time to time the schools, and supervise the general educational system of Greater New York.

A Borough Superintendent and Board of Associate Superintendents in each borough, to be appointed by the borough School Board, whose duties shall be to supervise the schools and educational system of their respective boroughs.

Board of Examiners, consisting of a chief examiner and four examiners. They must hold examinations as often as once a month, except during the month of July.

All Principals and teachers shall be appointed by the respective borough boards from an eligible list.

Each borough Board of Education is to report direct to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment its estimate of the amount which it deems necessary for its borough for the ensuing year.

Teachers' salaries are to remain upon the schedule now adopted by the School Board, pursuant to the Davis law, and a maximum has been fixed in accordance with the suggestion of Gov. Odell's message.

MEETING WAS NOT HELD.

Post Office Had Failed to Send Out Church Workers' Notices.

The fifth annual meeting of the Federation of Churches and Christian Workers in New York City, which was to have been held in St. Mark's Church, at Tenth Street and Second Avenue, yesterday afternoon, was peremptorily adjourned until Feb. 7 because of an alleged act of negligence on the part of the postal authorities.

The association has a membership of more than 1,100, and John Seely Ward, Jr., is the President.

On Saturday a representative of the Secretary went to the General Post Office with about 1,150 copies of the annual report, the programme of exercises, and the notices of the meeting. Handing in the three documents in one package, he inquired the amount of postage it would take.

According to the statement made at the church, the official at the window is alleged to have replied: "Two cents." The Secretary's representative purchased stamps to the amount of $23.50, and after affixing one to each package, delivered the documents for transmission, with the expectation that the persons addressed would receive them not later than Monday morning.

Late on Monday evening a member of the society called up the Secretary on the telephone and inquired about the meeting. The Secretary expressed surprise that he had not received his notification and hastened to the Post Office, so it was stated at the meeting, discovered that all of the matter had been held for short postage, and that stamps to the amount of 3 cents should have been affixed to each package.

When the meeting was called to order there were less than a dozen persons present. Among them were President Ward, the Rev. L. W. Batten, rector of the church, and four ladies. The Secretary explained what had happened, and an adjournment was ordered until Feb. 7.

According to the programme officers were to have been elected for the ensuing year, and among the other features were addresses by Controller Bird S. Coler and ex-Mayor Charles A. Schieren of Brooklyn.

Postmaster Van Cott had left the Post Office when inquiries were made there, and no one there professed to be in a position to speak officially on the subject.

McDONNELL IN THE TOMBS.

Magistrate Zeller Commits Him in Default of $5,000 Bail.

Not having obtained a bondsman at 3 o'clock, when his case had been adjourned in the Harlem Police Court on the day before until 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Miles McDonnell, the gambler, who is charged with felonious assault for the shooting of Edward Courtney in the Onawa Café, in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, a month ago, was committed to the Tombs yesterday by Magistrate Zeller, in default of $5,000 bail.

When McDonnell's examination had been concluded on Monday, Magistrate Zeller held him for trial, but released him on the $2,000 bail which had been given at the time of the arrest after the shooting. McDonnell was told to be on hand yesterday with a boudsman to give $5,000 bail. At the hour set McDonnell was not in court, but was in front of the Court House, waiting for some one to come and bail him. The Magistrate was angry at 3 o'clock at McDonnell's failure to appear, and sent a policeman to look for him. The officer found his man in front of the Court House and took him up stairs.

"What do you mean, Mr. McDonnell?" inquired Magistrate Zeller, angrily. "You were ordered to appear here at 2 o'clock. It is now 3. I had to send for you. Do you think this Court is to be trifled with? You stand committed."

McDonnell was angry and remarked as he turned away in charge of an officer: "Well, that's all that's to be expected of you."

Two persons appeared later to go on McDonnell's bond, a Mrs. Aldrich and a man named McCarthy. Neither was accepted. Magistrate Zeller said he wanted $10,000 equity. Mrs. Aldrich had $6,500. McCarthy was on some other bonds and the Magistrate would not accept him.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON RELIC.

Historical Society Gets Monument that Marked the Spot Where He Fell.

When Alexander Hamilton was killed in a duel with Aaron Burr on Weehawken Heights, N. J., July 7, 1804, the St. Andrew's Society of New York State erected a marble monument on the spot where he fell "as an expression of affectionate regard to his memory and of deep regret for his loss." But the monument was allowed to stand only for about twelve years, as it became a favorite meeting place for men who had duels to fight.

The monument disappeared one day, and was lost sight of until 1850, when it was discovered behind the bar of a New York saloon. Hugh Maxwell, the President of St. Andrew's Society at that time, purchased it and presented it to his friend, James G. King, who lived on Weehawken Heights. Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer came into possession of it recently as one of Mrs. King's heirs, and has presented it to the New York Historical Society.

After More of Miss Duryea's Furniture.

The Sheriff yesterday received another writ of replevin against May Duryea of 124 West Thirty-sixth Street, for $1,700 worth of furniture, in favor of Mabelle Simpson, whose husband, Dr. William L. Simpson, committed suicide on Saturday.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

A Weird "Symbolical Drama" Given by Mr. Sargent's Pupils.

"The Tragedy of Death" at the Empire Theatre—Gossip of the Stage.

Musical rather than dramatic, primarily, was the performance of "The Tragedy of Death," a symbolical drama by René Peter, done into English by Edwin Star Belknap, at the Emperie Theatre, yesterday afternoon, but until it has the advantage of performance by a larger and better-equipped orchestra, more closely in touch with the spirit of the work, and of singers of greater vocal and interpretative skill than those employed yesterday, Mr. Harvey Worthington Loomis's ambitious music may be fairly dismissed with no further word of comment than a polite announcement of its ambitious character.

Theatrically and pictorially, the performance by Mr. Sargent's pupils, in the presence of a crowd of spectators who were certainly decorous if not exactly appreciative, was weird and occasionally strongly impressive. Mr. René Peter's "symbolism," done into English by Mr. Belknap, is often vague enough to the common mind, however, to explain, if not to justify, any ribald jests the humorists of the press nowadays, as it seems, devoting all their energies to the task of dramatic criticism, may be impelled to make at its expense.

Yet it is a serious and aspiring work of art, and surely deserves a polite and attentive hearing. It was not offered as diversion to the multitude, and the dull-witted, half-developed persons who contend that the sole province of art is to amuse were not asked to take note of it.

In the first scene, a mother wept and sang sad lullabies over the cradle of her ailing child. In her dooryard, as it seemed, Night, thickly veiled, sat listening. A storm arose and, while the thunder rolled, the voice of a wayfarer was heard demanding admission to the mother's hut. She let him in, an old, poor man, who was as silent as the grave after he had entered, and who, while the woman closed her heavy eyes in slumber, stole the child and fled.

When the woman woke she knew the stranger was Death and started madly in pursuit. But, in the doorway Night accosted her and promised to tell her which way the thief had gone, if she would sing again one of those lullabies Night loved to listen to.

This fondness of Night for music may suggest to the humorists a reason for the melodious disposition of gentlemen who stay out late, and, it is just possible, that in trying to get at the base of the rainbow, this new symbolist has accidentally discovered the origin of "We Won't Go Home Till Morning."

Paying the price of information, and with great difficulty to the tall, pale woman, whose black veil suggested the first act of "The Climbers," the mother sped along the road until she came to a lake which she could not cross. The Rhinemaidens, who converse with Siegfried in the last act of "Die Götterdammerung," however, were jealous of "the jewels that are her eyes" and promised to ferry her all the way to the Garden of Death if she would give them up.

So it was that in the last scene the blind mother was wandering among the flower beds of the Garden. Death found her there and opened the eyes of her soul so that she might see the destiny that awaited her child on earth. Thereafter she was reconciled, and her own hand plucked the flower in which his heart was beating and gave it to the gray old man who was to transport his soul to the Garden of God.

As for the interpretation of this symbolism, each person must supply his own. But it seems that the attempt on the programme to associate it with Christian doctrine is mistaken. There is no clear hint in it of the true spirit of Christianity. Still, it may not be the less beautiful for being pagan.

Pictorially, the production was as good as possible under the circumstances, while the arduous rôle of the mother was carried with abundant zeal and energy, and doubtless with sympathy and understanding, by Teresa Tompe. Night, in the person of Julia Mary Taylor, was also comely and impressive.

The long programme included a performance of Mrs. Burton Harrison's clever adaptation of Octave Feuillet's "Portraits of the Marquise," which was acted by amateurs some years ago at the Madison Square Theatre. This piece was originally written for the Empress Eugénie, and was first acted by her and some of her Court at Compiègne. It was afterward admitted to the repertory of the Comédie Française.

SUIT OVER "L'AIGLON."

Mr. Frohman Seeks to Restrain Its Production at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 29.—Vice Chancellor Emery heard argument to-day on an application in behalf of Charles Frohman for a preliminary injunction to restrain the production by Manager Jacobs of the Columbia Theatre of the play "L'Aiglon." Affidavits were presented by Mr. Jacobs denying that his play is an infringement on the play written by Edmond Rostand and translated by Louis W. Parker, such as is used by the Frohman companies.

Mr. Frohman's counsel asserted that the production of "L'Aiglon" at the Columbia had injured him financially. Counsel for Mr. Jacobs, on the other hand, contended that the title "L'Aiglon" could not be appropriated by any one, as it was a common French phrase.

Decision was reserved.

WILL CURTAIL ENCORES.

Mr. Damrosch's Idea for Metropolitan Concerts—Tribute to Verdi.

Walter Damrosch, who conducts the popular Sunday night concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House, has suggested to Maurice Grau that the encores which heretofore have served to prolong the performances to an unseasonable hour, be in the future curtailed.

Mr. Damrosch's idea will be put in operation for the first time on Sunday night, when the programme which he is arranging will contain fewer soloists than formerly, but more orchestral numbers. The public's attention will be called to this change by a printed notice, which will appear at the top of the programme.

No definite arrangements have as yet been decided upon for a musical tribute to the memory of Giuseppe Verdi, but Sig. Mancinelli, who has the arrangement of a programme in hand, stated yesterday it is probable that the great musical composer's "Requiem" will be given, with the prominent soloists of the company, the entire chorus, and orchestra participating.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Walter Damrosch's last musical lecture will take place at Daly's Theatre on Friday, when he will treat on Wagner's love dream, "Tristan and Isolde."

Henry Miller's managers, Wagenhals & Kemper, will probably make an arrangement within the next few days for another play by this author for Mr. Miller's use next season.

George Marion, stage manager for Anna Held, will sail for Europe next Saturday to witness two new musical pieces upon which Manager F. Ziegfeld, Jr., has secured an option for the American rights.

Madeline Lucette Ryley, whose permanent residence is in London, will sail for England on the first fast steamer leaving after the first performance of her new play, "Richard Savage," at the Lyceum Theatre next Monday night.

Miss Annie Russell, who closes her engagement on Saturday night at the Lyceum Theatre in "A Royal Family," will return to that theatre next season on Nov. 9, and offer the same play for a limited period before she produces a new play which will be ready for her.

Arrangements have been made for the return to Daly's Theatre of the musical comedy "San Toy," which will begin its second engagement on March 4. This will in no way interfere with the present successful engagement of "Lady Huntworth's Experiment," which will continue up to that time.

Manager B. F. Keith of the Union Square Theatre expects to have ready for production next Monday an artistic series of studies in art. These pictures have been in the course of arrangement and scenic construction for more than a month under the personal direction of Mr. Gleindenning, the English artist.

It was decided yesterday to postpone the opening of the new Clyde Fitch play, "Lovers' Lane," at the Manhattan Theatre until Wednesday night of next week. This has been done in order to avoid conflict with other new productions arranged for the two nights preceding, allowing Wednesday night to this new production alone. Seats sold for the earlier date announced will be exchanged at the box office upon presentation.

JASPER AFTER MAXWELL.

Former Sends a Circular Letter to Principals Asking for Information.

After lying dormant for months the old feud between John Jasper, Superintendent of Schools for the Borough of Manhattan and the Bronx, and City Superintendent William H. Maxwell seems likely to blaze up with renewed vigor. Caustic criticism by Dr. Maxwell in his second annual report on the school system of the whole city, in the course of which he declares that the method of teaching English and manual training in the local schools is wrong, called forth the following circular letter from Mr. Jasper to all Principals under his supervision:

New York, Jan. 26, 1901.

Principal P. S. ——, Department:

In view of certain adverse criticisms of the work of the schools in Manhattan and the Bronx, publicly made by City Superintendent Maxwell and based on his observation, and in order to ascertain the extent to which these criticisms apply, please furnish me, without delay, the following information:

Has he ever visited your school?
Date or dates of such visits.
The classes visited on these dates respectively.
With regard to each of these class visits state:
Length of time spent in the class.
Subject or subjects observed by him.
Comments made by him.

JOHN JASPER,
Borough Superintendent.

N.Y.A.C. WON HOCKEY GAME

Quaker City Team Beaten by a Score of Five to One.

TEAM PLAYING WAS A FEATURE

Philadelphians Lacked This Essential, but They Showed Strong Defensive Tactics at Times.

In defeating the Quaker City Hockey Club of Philadelphia by a score of 5 to 1 at the St. Nicholas Rink last evening the hockey team of the New York Athletic Club again gave evidence that it needs a stronger opponent to bring out the mettle of its play and to make it put forth its best efforts. The wearers of the Mercury Foot improved the opportunity by getting in some practice in team play, and they gave a pretty and interesting exhibition. In the second period it required Devine's goal, which brought the score to 2 to 1, to incite the athletic club to hard work, and then Howard in rapid succession gained three points on long and speedy shoots.

The Philadelphians started the game by getting the puck as far as Fenwick, but the New Yorks quickly took the rubber, and Howard and Hornfeck carried it down the ice, where the Quaker goal stopped Howard's shoot. Hornfeck made the first score on a pass from Howard. On the next face-off Hornfeck scurried down the ice, and after a brief scrimmage scored the second point for the Mercury Foot on an acute angle shoot. Then for the first time the visitors kept the puck near the local seven's goal net. The Quakers shot poorly, and this, combined with the New Yorks' superb defense, prevented a score. The New Yorks by their system of team play appeared to be everywhere with the puck, while the Pennsylvanians could not keep it circulating among themselves long enough to get a clear track to the net. When the half was over the Quakers had the disk in uncomfortable proximity to the New Yorks' goal.

In the second half the visitors again dashed down the ice, but the New Yorks were playing a speedy game, and by beautiful team work and a clever system of passing they made splendid tries for goal, but the Philadelphians showed a better defense, and in the forward line especially they were showing an ability to keep their opponents from getting the puck in the net. Finally, after there had been a considerable siege at the visitors' goal, the Philadelphians put some aggressiveness in their play, and worked the rubber down the ice. Devine carried the disk within a foot of O'Donnell, and forced it into the net. Then Howard, helped by Hornfeck, scored the Mercury Foot's third point on a low, swift shoot that Rhoades could not touch. He gained the fourth point in a like manner. Shortly after Orton was laid out temporarily as a result of falling on his head. Howard made another score for his side after repeated tries, giving the Mercury Foot their fifth point. Line-up:

LADIES SEE FANCY BILLIARDS.

Miss May Kaarlus and Amateur Champion Townsend Meet at the Hanover Club.

Amateur and professional billiards were played last night at the Hanover Club, Brooklyn, before a large and appreciative crowd, half of whom were ladies. It was ladies' night at the club, and practically added the finishing touch to the recent two weeks' championship tournament of the National Association of Amateur Billiard players. The spectators had the pleasure of witnessing a sample of the new champion's cue work, Arthur Townsend, who also holds the Hanover Club championship. All of the six competitors in the recent tournament were present except J. Byron Stark, who has gone to his home in Wilkesbarre, Penn. Miss May Kaarlus, the fifteen-year-old girl who can play fancy shots better than any man, gave an exhibition of some of her most difficult plays.

Ferdinand Poggenburg and Edward Gardner opened the billiard features of the evening with an exhibition 100-point game. Poggenburg began the play, making 1, and Gardner made 3. Then the former gave a reminder of his old championship form by a pretty run of 37, while Gardner, to the disappointment of the ladies, made nothing. In the fourth inning, however, the latter did his brilliant part of the game by rolling up 54 points, which was 2 better than his highest run in the championship tourney. The fair portion of the gallery applauded as heartily as the men, and Gardner felt quite like a billiard lion. In the seventh inning he made a run of 30, and went out in a run of 9 in the eighth inning, to 76 for Poggenburg. The scores were:

Edward Gardner—3 0 2 54 1 1 30 0. Average, 12 4-8.

Ferdinand Poggenburg—1 37 1 8 11 3 0 13. Average, 9 4-8.

Miss May Kaarlus was then introduced to the spectators by President James A. Sperry. Her father, Prof. Kaarlus, called the various shots she was to play, and Arthur Townsend had the difficult position of trying to imitate the shots. He did his part brilliantly and in several cases succeeded far better than his friends expected. Miss Kaarlus executed fifty-five different plays, including the whole gamut of draws, follows, two and more cushion carroms, force draws, masséd of various kinds, and trick shots, in one of which the ball was made to jump from the cushion fully three feet back over the table. Miss Kaarlus catching it in a baseball fashion, throwing it over the table, and then shooting the other ball after it. It was a decidedly spectacular shot and called forth loud applause. Mr. Townsend failed to make his ball jump more than a few inches. Some of the more difficult massé shots he did not attempt. He emerged from his task in very fair shape, for of the fifty-five he beat his young mistress of the cue in three shots and equaled her in eight.

Miss Kaarlus used a twenty-four-ounce cue, and she hit the balls with tremendous force. Townsend used about a twenty-ounce cue, the same one with which he played all of his championship games.

Frank A. Keeney and Frank A. Gardner closed the billiard events with a 100-point game, Keeney winning in 100 to 58.

Supper was served after the games, and the social features of the evening were as well managed and as enjoyable as the billiards. Some of those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sperry, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew D. Baird, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Moenhauer, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Gunnison, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hubbell, Mr. and Mrs. William Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Keeney, Mr. and Mrs. F. Sedgwick Seeley, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Daly, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Slosson, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Mollenhauer, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert J. Kitching, Mr. and Mrs Mathew Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Julius De Long, Mr. and Mrs. George Wyncoick, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Culhane, the Misses Culhane, J. D. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Vackiner, F. M. Price, Dr. and Mrs. E. Rodney Fiske, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sperry, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Grim, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Starkey, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Mc-Millan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McKee, John Baxter, Miss Alice Baxter, R. P. Lethbridge, the Misses Lethbridge, Mrs. Charles C. Tompkins, Mrs. Rose [illegible] John Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. George Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Lyon, F. C. Stillman, Charles B. Andrews, Charles S. Gaubert, J. D. Donald, Charles Stoppani, N. H. Evans, Otto F. Struse, Charles F. Nahmmacher, and George W. Piper.

The Billiard Committee of the club will give a dinner on Saturday evening to the players in the recent tournament, when the prizes will be presented. The array of silver and gold trophies was on view in the parlor last night and attracted considerable attention.

Pardello Won Wrestling Match.

SCRANTON, Penn., Jan. 29.—Leo Pardello of New York was defeated by M. J. Dwyer of Scranton in a wrestling match before the Scranton Bicycle Club to-night. Dwyer won the first fall, catch-as-catch-can, in 23 minutes, Pardello won the second, Graeco-Roman, in 24 minutes, and Dwyer won the third, catch-as-catch-can, in 7 minutes. Pardello weighed 203 pounds and Dwyer 165. They are to wrestle again.

GOOD SPEEDWAY SPORT.

Trotters and Pacers in Many Close Brushes on the Famous Course.

Close finishes marked the majority of the brushes on the Harlem River Speedway yesterday afternoon, when there were so many road drivers and their fast steppers in evidence that one would have thought a series of matinée races were in progress. Pre-arranged brushes, however, could not have been any better or more hotly contested than those that followed in rapid succession yesterday, the horses being paired off according to their records, thereby making the contests more interesting. The handsome little trotter Johnny Agan, 2:05¼, driven by A. C. Bostwick, carried off the honors of the day by winning the majority of the brushes in which he was started. His first encounter was with the trotting mare Louise Mac, 2:09¾, driven by her owner, A. B. Gwathmey. After a poor start, Johnny Agan took the lead and held it until the head of the stretch was reached, when the little mare began to crowd him rather close. A touch of the whip encouraged Louise Mac to make a spurt that carried her a head in front of her opponent, an advantage which she held until close to the finish, when Johnny Agan made one of his periodical finishes and landed a winner by a nose. On the next trip down the stretch the green trotter Crystal Chimes, driven by D. McClary, tried Johnny Agan's speed, and although she held him for three-quarters of the length of the stretch, fell rapidly behind when nearing the post and lost by an open length.

A newcomer on the Speedway that attracted much attention by her form and speed was the green mare Ila, driven by Dr. Tuggle. About the only well-known horse Ila was started with was Oakland Belle, driven by F. De Ryder. Three heats were trotted, Ila winning the first by a head and Oakland Belle taking the second by a good half length. The final was a nip-and-tuck race from start to finish, and honors were about even when the finish post was passed.

Freeland, 2:17¾, driven by David Goodman, trotted several fast heats and won a very pretty race from the old favorite Commodore Porter, 2:13, driven by Hugh Reilly. This did not please Mr. Reilly at all, and, watching his opportunity, turned to a good start with Freeland, bent upon having it out for good and all. Oscar, 2:20½, driven by B. Zahn, joined in the brush, but broke, and the two original competitors fought it out. The pace set by Commodore Porter was a furious one, and the pair came down the stretch under the whip, like whirlwinds. Both drivers were leaning over the dashboards of their light Speedway wagons urging their animals to their utmost speed, and both horses were on even terms and an inch advantage was everything to be desired. The tilt ended in the closest finish of the day, but Commodore Porter had the better of it by a whisp.

Louise Mac, 2:09¾, led Edward W., 2:21¼, a merry chase, beating him by a half length, and Margaret Worth, 2:15, driven by B. Ives, defeated the pacer Nettie B., 2:16¾, driven by David Lamar. In a brush with Laura G., driven by Dr. Woodbury, Nettie B. made a much better showing, and defeated her opponent by a length and a half. Nathan Straus had the famous trotter Cobwebs on the road and worked him out several times, but did not enter any brushes.

DALY HORSE SALE OPENS TO-DAY.

Turfmen from All Points Here for the Big Offering.

The greatest gathering of turfmen and breeders of thoroughbred race horses that New York has known since the racing season of 1900 closed is now in the city, in anticipation of the biggest sale of thoroughbreds that has taken place since the disposal of the Belmont breeding and racing establishments, ten years ago, the opening to-day in Madison Square Garden of the dispersal offering of the Bitter Root Stud Farm, the property of Marcus Daly's estate. For nearly a week turfmen from the South and far West have been coming to this city, but yesterday they were coming in even greater numbers. A special train, which reached New York early last evening from Kentucky, carried the latest prospective buyers from the South, the visitors promptly going to the Hoffman House, where they will make their headquarters. Other horsemen came, singly, in couples, and in groups, from forenoon until late at night, and from the interest those who went to Morris Park showed, there will be little slackness in the bidding when the offering is made to-day. The horsemen in New York already represent every breeding section from New York to California.

The sale which will begin this morning will be of all the stallions, eight in number, including the great and famous horse Hamburg, more than a hundred broad mares, and a splendid collection of three-year-olds and two-year-olds, in training. The Fasig-Tipton Company will conduct the sale.

Road Drivers Call a Meeting.

A special meeting of the New York Road Drivers' Association, which all members are requested to attend, will be held at the Rossmore Hotel Saturday night at 8 o'clock. Many very important matters will come up for discussion, such as changes in the Constitution and by-laws, the question of a movable Directorate, increase in the initiation fee, matters relative to the parade to be held in the Spring, and the question of an open horse show later. Every member of the association who has the interest of the light-harness horse at heart should feel it his duty to be present, as there will undoubtedly be a large turnout, and opinions from every one are desired. The call for the meeting was issued yesterday by Dr. H. H. Kane.

N.Y.Y.C. HONORS J.P. MORGAN

NEW HOUSE IN GALA ATTIRE

Over Two Hundred Yachting Prizes Loaned by Owners on Exhibition in the New Clubhouse.

The formal housewarming of the New York Yacht Club's new house, in Forty-fourth Street, is still to be, but the warming, in fact, took place last night, when the members presented to the club's ex-Commodore, J. Pierpont Morgan, a silver loving cup, in a purely informal manner. The understanding in the matter was perfect. All agreed with the wish of Mr. Morgan to avoid formality, but the general desire to please the former head of the club could not prevent much preparation for the event, though this was excused by the pretense that the preparations were for the first ladies' days in the new clubhouse, to be held to-morrow and Friday.

The presentation took place in the model-room, which beforehand had been decorated in magnificent style, the chief decorations, however, being the cups and trophies won by the yachts of the club in the many years of its existence. Most important of these, and the collection was said to be worth in money about $100,000, was the America's Cup, which English yachtsmen have so fruitlessly tried to capture in the years since the famous schooner America brought it to this country. There were many other interesting trophies, however, and in addition to these, the room contained models of all the most celebrated and fastest yachts that have been raced by or against members of the New York Yacht Club in the past twenty-five years.

The meeting of yachtsmen which greeted ex-Commodore Morgan included about all the yachtsmen who are prominent in the sport. All day long the preparation of the model room was in progress. Trophies were arriving from morning until late in the afternoon, and as fast as they came they were quickly transferred to the room in which it had been planned the reception and presentation should take place. More than 200 separate cups and trophies were displayed when the yachtsmen began to assemble, to await the arrival of Mr. Morgan, fully 300 persons being present.

The plans of informality for the occasion were carried out to the letter. Commodore Morgan entered the clubhouse a short time before 9 o'clock and was at once surrounded and escorted to the model room. There, in the presence of the crowd, the room glittering with the trophies that the club had gathered for this occasion, Commodore Lewis Cass Ledyard stepped forward, and, in the briefest manner possible, presented to Mr. Morgan a handsome and costly silver loving cup about three feet in height, the gift of the members of the club. Even the understood condition of infirmability could not prevent the ex-Commodore from expressing in very brief terms his appreciation of the compliment paid to him. The club members then crowded about him and congratulations on the prosperous condition of American yachting and of the New York Yacht Club in particular were exchanged.

Among those present were W. Butler Duncan, manager of the Herreshoff-built cup defender; Commodore David Banks, James D. Smith, David H. King, Jr., Francis T. Bowles, Royal Phelps Carroll, L. A. Fish, Theodore C. Zerega, Elbridge T. Gerry, J. Frederick Tams, Henry C. Ward, Lloyd Phoenix, Bern Keating, S. S. Nicholson Kane, W. Gould Brokaw, Dr. Morris Asch, Amzi L. Barber, George R. Fearing, and Frederic Gallatin.

The decorations in the model room will remain just as they were for the presentation to Mr. Morgan for the ladies' days and receptions, which will be held to-morrow and Friday, except that additional yachting trophies are expected to arrive to-day.

ENGLISH CRICKETERS INVITED.

All Philadelphia Team May Go to England Next Year.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29.—Considerable disappointment was manifested in American cricket circles last Autumn because the usual international matches had to be abandoned at the last moment, as a result of a misunderstanding concerning the leadership of the English team. In order to avoid any such undesirable termination of this year's negotiations, the International Committee has decided to complete its arrangements at an earlier date, and, with this object in view, Secretary R. D. Brown has written to C. Wreford-Brown, a prominent English amateur cricketer, inviting him to bring a team of English amateurs to the United States about the middle of September.

It is known that Mr. Wreford-Brown is anxious to bring a team to the United States, and it is expected that his side will be largely composed of youngsters who have already gained their "blue" at Oxford or Cambridge, or who have the good fortune to secure that honor during the coming season.

Should the committee secure definite information to this effect, it is more than likely that in addition to two matches with the gentlemen of Philadelphia and one with the colts, a game may also be arranged for the visitors with a representative eleven of the American colleges, composed of the best players from Harvard, Haverford, and Pennsylvania, as well as games with picked teams in Boston, New York, and Baltimore. A trip to England in 1902 by an all-Philadelphia team is on the tapis, and the knowledge that those who excel in the coming season's games will have the best chance of selection for the trip in 1902 will lend additional interest to the contests.

WHITNEY'S SPECIAL FOR DOGS.

Ballyhoo Bey Challenge Cup Added to Coming Show's Premiums.

Industrious efforts by the members of the Ladies' Kennel Association have resulted in several attractive additions to the list of special premiums offered for the Westminster Kennel Club's coming dog show in Madison Square Garden, to be held from Feb. 19 to 22, inclusive. Chief among these is a champion prize, presented by William C. Whitney, who will give what is styled the Ballyhoo Bey Challenge Cup, for the best American-bred dog of either sex and any breed, owned and exhibited by a member of the Ladies' Kennel Association. Two other noteworthy specials are the Harris and Nixon Challenge Cup, offered by Harris and Nixon for the best bull terrier of either sex owned and exhibited by a member of the Ladies' Kennel Association, and the American Spaniel Club's offer of the President's Trophy, for the best brace of cocker spaniels.

The Westminster Kennel Club has made additions to the regular premium list as follows: Class 19A, for Newfoundland dogs and bitches; Class 170A, for griffon dogs and bitches; 222A, for beagles, open to dogs and bitches not exceeding 12 inches; 320A, for King Charles spaniel puppies, and 329A, for King Charles spaniels, novices, dogs, and bitches.

The managers of the show have received notification from the Duchess of Newcastle, who, it was tacitly understood, would attend the New York exhibition, to judge the classes for Russian wolf hounds and fox terriers, two breeds in which she is specially interested, that she will not come, as she had previously agreed to act as a judge at the dog show in Agricultural Hall, London, and later had found that the New York and London shows came so close together that she would be unable to reach New York in time to fill the engagement.

President Eliot on Harvard Athletics.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 29.—President Eliot of Harvard in his annual report to-day pays particular attention to athletics, and especially to the fact that American colleges are now conducting them in a reputable manner. Harvard's rules governing eligibility, he says, have been adopted in all the other colleges, and he expresses great satisfaction that at last athletics are placed on a basis where scholarship receives sufficient attention.

President Eliot expressed his interest in the improvements which have been made at Soldiers' Field, and suggests the erection of permanent and good-looking seats along the side of the football field. "The university grounds on the south side of the Charles River," he says, "can be made beautiful in the course of the next twenty years, and they should not be defaced by unsightly banks of cheap wooden seats."

SHOOTING AT LIVE BIRDS.

New Handicap Rules Operated Successfully at the Inter-State Park Traps.

The trap shooting competitions held at Inter-State Park, Queens, L. I., yesterday, under conditions that let in gunners of all classes and from all points, drew the largest attendance that any open event of the season has brought out, and as an all-day shoot was the most conspicuous success in its line that the Pigeon Shooting Association has had this year. The weather was bright and clear, the light excellent, and the birds fast and strong, the only drawback to perfect sport being that the wind blew steadily, straight through the day from nearly the same direction. This was from back of the clubhouse, and the natural result was that the pigeons, released from the traps, were lifted by the breeze and went with it, all taking to more or less degree the course that they were started on and becoming drivers or right quarterers, a fact that the shooters realized early in the day, with results extremely disastrous to the birds.

The chief event of the day was for the Wright Special Prize, sixteen men, representing nearly as many gun clubs taking part in this. The race was a handicap under the new handicap rules of the Inter-State Association, the rules that from this time on will govern all shoots at the park except when special conditions are stipulated. The new rules worked satisfactorily, at least to the low men in the race, for with the allowance that being placed on the twenty-seven-yard mark gave him, J. F. Wellbrook had two extra birds to shoot at, two misses counting as no birds, and by bringing down one of these Wellbrook made a tie with a thirty-yard man, Dr. A. A. Webber, who had killed straight, and a division of the stakes resulted. The working of the handicap was far less satisfactory to the back-mark men than it was to those who received an allowance, but as a means of equalizing the chances of pigeon shooting the new scale generally was considered a vast improvement on the old order of handicapping, whereby proximity to the traps was supposed to place on equal terms an expert and a novice. To further prove the strength of the new system of handicapping, two twenty-seven-yard men and a twenty-six-yard man, with their allowances, finished in a tie for the second money. Following the Wright Special, a ten-bird event was shot off under handicap rules somewhat similar to the conditions governing the first event, but slightly modified to suit the smaller number of birds shot at, this again producing a close contest, resulting in a tie and a division between a thirty-yard man and a twenty-seven-yard shooter. Two smaller sweepstakes were shot off. Summary:

The Wright Special, fifteen live birds, handicap rise from twenty-five yards to thirty-three yards, handicaps at twenty-eight yards, one miss to count as no bird; twenty-seven yards, two misses to count as no bird; twenty-six yards, one miss no bird, and one miss as a kill; twenty-five yards, two misses as kills.

PRIZEFIGHT A NUISANCE.

State of Ohio Will Prosecute Promoters of Jeffries-Ruhlin Contest.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 29.—Suit was brought before Judge Howard Hollister today, of the Common Pleas Court, to enjoin the proposed Jeffries-Ruhlin contest here Feb. 15. This proceeding is in the name of the State by Attorney General Sheets at the direction of Gov. Nash. It is understood, however, that the real instigators are the ministers and others of this city who are opposed to having the fight take place here, and who resorted to every other means before this proceeding in the State court. The petition that was filed to-day declares the proposed prize-fight to be a nuisance, and a restraining order is wanted on that account rather than under any of the sections of the Ohio statutes pertaining to prizefights.

The petition avers that the contest would cause the gathering of "toughs" and idle and vicious people, whose presence in crowds would be a menace to life, good order, property, and the general welfare of the community.

It is expected that the attorneys of the Saengerfest Athletic Association will not only accept service immediately, but also request as early a hearing as possible.

Those seeking to prevent the fight have engaged a formidable array of legal talent, including Judson Harmon, who was Attorney General under Cleveland; Gustave Wald, John W. Warrington, Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., formerly Solicitor General of the United States; E. W. Kittridge, and J. W. Herron. The attorneys for the Saengerfest Athletic Association are ex-Judge Hiram T. Peck, Alfred Hertenstein, ex-County Solicitor; Bettinger & Geotzel, Wilson & Wilson, and Herman J. Witte. These attorneys have been advising the Saengerfest Athletic Association from the beginning that they were proceeding within the bounds of law and could conduct the fight here without the violation of law.

Jeffries and Ruhlin, who were arrested last night and held in $1,000 bond, will have their nearing on Thursday.

CHANGES IN RACING RULES.

Important Legislation Anticipated at Coming N. C. A. Annual Meeting.

Some important questions will be decided and considerable new legislation enacted at the annuel meeting of the National Cycling Association to be held in this city on Feb. 5. Several suggestions for changes in the racing rules have been proposed to make them more definite, particularly in the matter of motor-paced racing, which from a small beginning became an important feature of the sport during the past season. A proposition has been made to abolish the standing start in moter-paced races and to substitute the flying start, which is not only much more pleasing to the spectators, but also much faster.

The matter which is likely to give the most trouble is the awarding of the franchises for racing in certain districts where there are several applicants. The franchise for Providence, R. I., is sought by three different promoters, and at Waterbury, Rochester, Syracuse, Pittsburg, and Cleveland there are two or more claimants. Philadelphia capitalists are anxious to build a colosseum there, but are unable to do so while Woodside Park holds the franchise for that district.

The present Board of Control will probably be re-elected, as its work has given general satisfaction. The number of official referees is likely to be increased, and provision made for official timers as well.

The past year was a very satisfactory one financially for both racing men and track owners, and the coming season is expected to suppass it. The motor-pacing machines, which proved the greatest attraction during the past season, have been much improved, and are expected to be even more popular this year.

THE TERMS WITH CHINA.

The question before the conference of Ministers at Peking on Monday was, specifically, whether the death should be demanded of Prince TUAN, of Gen. TUNG-FUH-SIEN, and of Duke LAN. Really, it was the question whether the Chinese Government should or should not be required to do what it notoriously could not do. It was the same question that arose in the case of the Empress Dowager herself. In that case it was decided that the Chinese Government should not be required to commit suicide, and to hand China over to anarchy, tempered only by "punitive expeditions."

What any "Christian" nation expects to gain by making demands upon China with which China cannot possibly comply is more than we pretend to know. But the "line of cleavage" among the Ministers on this question is disappointing as well as instructive. Against the demand for the capital punishment of these dignitaries, Japan, Russia, the United States, in favor of it, all the other Powers. It is not a gratifying showing. Russia we all partly understand. She has got her pay in advance. Manchuria is her retaining fee. And besides, as Mr. KIPLING has reminded us, she is much more an Asiatic than a European Power. Japan is frankly Asiatic, and in taking the side of good sense and moderation. She has heightened the reputation she had already won of behaving better than any European Power. But everybody who has studied the case must regret to see Great Britain siding with the majority. What is she doing in that galley?

FOR THE PARTY ALL THE TIME.

The Legislature at Albany has no respect for its own creations. The Charter Revision Commission was created by the Legislature, (Chapter 465 of the Laws of 1900.) Such representative men as GEORGE L. RIVES, CHARLES C. BEAMAN, FRANKLIN BARTLETT, JOHN D. CRIMMINS, CHARLES A. SCHIEREN, GEORGE CROMWELL, JAMES L. WELLS, JAMES MCKEEN, and WILLIAM C. DE WITT served on that commission. The result of their labors, which were prolonged, arduous, and faithful, was before the Legislature at the opening of the session. A few days ago Gov. ODELL found time formally to call the attention of the lawmakers to this important project of legislation. Nothing whatever has been done about it. The Legislature appears to be entirely indifferent to a work accomplished at so great a cost of time and energy by a commission appointed under the authority of its own act and representing the people of this city in a matter that most deeply concerns their welfare.

But the Legislature and the Governor are not indifferent to the subject matter of the commission's report. Oh, no. They are rushing to its enactment a stupid and vicious bill dealing with one of the serious evils of the present municipal system, for which the commission recommended a proper and effective remedy. The commission's amendments to the charter would have established the Police Department under a single head, intelligently organized throughout, and made acceptable to the instructed public opinion of the city. To that expert recommendation the Legislature pays no attention, and the Governor gave it the benefit of a disapproving kick in his message on the revision. But a bill privately prepared for the Republican organization has been received by the legislators with all the honors of precedence, and the favor of the Governor and the powerful influence of his political organization help it to its passage.

Public opinion in this city sustains the view expressed by Mr. RIVES in his remarks at the dinner of the Hamilton Club Tuesday evening, that the power and the responsibility of the City Government should be centred in the Mayor. The Stranahan Police bill defies this sentiment, and by giving to the Governor also the power of removing the Police Commissioner violates principle, and degrades all three of the offices with which it is concerned. It degrades the office of Police Commissioner to such an extent that it will be difficult to find a capable, self-respecting man willing to put himself in that humiliating position. It degrades the Mayor by making him subject to the caprices and intrigues of a hostile political power at Albany. It is most of all degrading to the Governor, for it invites him to mix himself up in the choice of subordinate officials in one of the municipal divisions of the State. A Governor who appreciated the dignity of his office would spurn the petty business.

No Republican Governor of New York, however, can be got to spurn anything that promises to help his party. The men of that organization are for party all the time, just as Tammany is for its own pockets. Public opinion and the public welfare, principle, decency, everything, is put second to the partisan consideration. There is no assurance that the Charter Revision Commission's report will be taken up at all. Certainly there is no prospect that the proposed amendments will ever get through the Legislature, except, perhaps, after partisan distortion that will totally destroy their value. Albany can increase the assessments of New York and pile tax bills without number upon a community that already pays three-quarters of the cost of the State administration, but it refuses to let that community enjoy the privilege of governing itself.

UNSOUND INSURANCE IN ENGLAND.

A curious phase of profit insurance comes to light in the following dispatch from London: "The shares of some of the insurance companies have fallen because of the heavy payments to be made as the result of the insurance of the Queen's life by theatrical managers and others. It is estimated by some that the total amount of insurance was $1,250,000."

It is difficult to understand how this form of insurance could be conducted on a legitimate actuarial basis. It is a proverb in underwriting circles that any risk can be taken if the rate is large enough and the volume of business to be done great enough. This applies very well to fire and marine insurance, and no doubt to profit insurance as well, under conditions which warrant the assumption that out of a given number of risks, however hazardous, only a certain proportion will materialize as claims, and that it is possible to fix the rate high enough to pay losses from premiums. This, however, would scarcely seem applicable to life insurance, especially in the case of an aged lady with pronounced and increasing physical infirmities; nor to any class of business in which all risks must become claims at once when an imminent event happens.

There has been no time in several years when the venerable Queen could have been considered a legitimate insurance risk. The theatre managers could not, we think, have found it advantageous to pay rates of premium for protection against loss of profits resulting from the closing of their places of business between the day of the Queen's death and the end of the period of public mourning to follow it, sufficient to enable the insurance companies to write that kind of policy with safety. It looks at first glance like very reckless insurance gambling, and it is not surprising that the shares of companies incurring liability to that sort of losses should drop when the facts became known. Altogether, it is a curious and instructive incident, and one calculated to startle the conservative policy holder who cherishes no illusions as to the nature and object of life insurance.

DEATH AND TAXES.

It used to be a maxim in the rural districts of this State that there was nothing so "sure as death and taxes." Death is as sure as ever it was—though the statisticians contend that its arrival has been delayed somewhat—but the ingenuity of man, stimulated by the possession of wealth, has not only rendered the payment of taxes uncertain, but has actually made death in some sense an ally in the operation. It is currently reported that the portion of the estate of the late Mr. ARMOUR which was disposed of by his will was only about one-fourth of the amount of which he had been possessed and which would have had to pay a succession tax had he retained it until his death. Whether in this case the property was disposed of during his lifetime for the purpose of protecting his heirs from the payment of this tax, it is not, of course, for us to say. But instances are by no means rare in which men have made no secret of their motive in resorting to this device. In England it has been publicly stated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that he was obliged to reckon with the tendency referred to in making his estimates of revenue.

The general impression made by the spectacle of a man of sufficient wealth to be exposed to a large succession tax giving away his wealth in order that it may not bear the proportion of the public burdens assigned to it by law, is not favorable. The principle of the succession tax is sound and practical. Since a citizen cannot carry his wealth with him, and since the transfer of it to others after his death is made possible only by the free action of the State, it is assumed that property, the title to which depends solely on the State, may properly be required to pay a considerable contribution to the State's expenses. And it is assumed that in this country, where an income tax is not now levied, and where, therefore, the revenue from property has escaped taxation in large measure, the tax on the transfer of property at death is peculiarly fair. If, as a matter of fact, personal property were generally and equitably taxed under our laws, the succession tax would lose some of the plausible reasons on which it is based. It is unquestionably a device of the Legislature to make up the loss of revenue from the property during the life of its owner, and would be less excusable if he had already paid his fair proportion.

But whatever may be the motive of dying millionaires in arranging that their property shall suffer no diminution in passing to their survivors, or however that motive may be regarded by the public, the fact remains that neither before nor after the death of its owner can personal property be effectually taxed. The practical failure in conspicuous cases of the succession tax is likely to have two results. It will greatly reinforce the sentiment in favor of an income tax, and, though there have heretofore been found Constitutional obstacles in the way of the income tax laws actually passed, it is the opinion of lawyers of high standing that these can be overcome. The effort to do so will certainly be greatly stimulated by the general practice of evading the succession tax. Another effect that may come from this tendency is in our judgment a much more desirable one. The public mind may be directed toward a wiser and more practical form of taxation by which collection will be more certain and equitable distribution will be secured. We refer to the taxation of real property only. The more other ways are pursued, and the more ingenious, exacting, and imperative they are, the more evident is their failure. The tendency not only of scientific opinion, but of all sensible and practical opinion, is strongly in the direction of the taxation of real property in the first instance, with confidence that in the end all forms of property will in this manner be most nearly completely reached. But it is probable that before that intelligent method is adopted, there will be further attempts, in the Federal Legislature at least, to try again the experiment of a tax on income.

THE SENTENCES IN PATERSON.

Those were very admonitory sentences that Judge DIXON passed yesterday upon the four wretches who have occupied too much of a disgusted public attention since their crime was discovered. It is to be hoped that they will occupy no more of it until their sentences have been served. And yet it is to be hoped that the example of their punishment may sink deep into a community in which it has been clearly shown that such an example is imperatively necessary.

We have all been horrified by the revelations that have come to us from China of the depths to which men will descend who have been absolved from all domestic duties, from all restraints imposed by the opinion of their neighbors. KIPLING had already reminded us that Single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints.

The peculiarity, and the peculiar horror, of this case was the showing that men respectably brought up, respectably connected, even men with families, could emulate and almost outdo the savage beastliness of unrestrained and undisciplined soldiers half the world away from home.

No wonder that a jury should have punished these wretches beyond their seeming and intended crime, and that a just Judge should have refused to abate a jot of the rigor of the law in their behalf. In fact, the one redeeming point about the case is the exemplary and admonitory celerity, dignity, and solemnity with which, when it was at last brought into court, justice was administered according to law.

EXAMINING ARCHITECTS.

We fail to see any sense in the bill which has been introduced into the Legislature providing for the examination and registration of architects. Doubtless there are a large number of incompetent architects now practicing in the State, and there will continue to be, so long as anybody can be found to hire them. But the architects now practicing seem to be exempted from the examination which must be passed by architects desiring to practice hereafter. This gives the measure the appearance of a trades-union regulation "to limit the number of apprentices," rather than of a measure intended for the protection of the public.

A law providing that nobody should henceforth practice architecture without undergoing a sufficient examination as to his capacity would have something to be said in its favor. The cultivated public of this town would welcome the appearance before an examining board of HORGAN and SLATTERY, the official architects of Tammany Hall for all municipal purposes, with a view to finding out what they know about the art they pretend to practice, historically, scientifically, and artistically. But to exempt from examination all persons now practicing architecture, on payment of fees, is the same as saying that all quacks who are now killing people without a license shall go on till they die. A purely proactive precaution, in either profession, impeaches in advance either its own necessity or the sincerity of its proposers.

JOAN OF ARC (KANSAS.)

That interesting female crusader who has excited the attention of Kansas by first hitting with a hatchet every head she saw of a barrel supposed to contain ardent spirits, and then by bearding the Governor of Kansas in his den, has succeeded in concentrating the attention of Kansas upon herself. As that was evidently one of her objects, she must be pronounced a successful woman. A fatigued Western journal refers to her as "Dame NATION." This is a pardonable unloading of a burdened spirit. But we prefer to see in the viraginous lady a modern and Western reincarnation of a female crusader, and to consider her as a Joan of Arc (Kansas,) or of "Arkansaw."

It is a queer reincarnation. A lady who goes about smashing the property of other people with an axe, on moral grounds, who first "takes the law" of persons who assault her therefor, and then proceeds to denounce the Governor of her State as a "lawbreaker," occupies altogether a curious position. She is not quite unprecedented or unique. A good many years ago there were some ladies in the State of Ohio who felt it to be incumbent upon them to destroy the "rum power" by just such measures as she has adopted. This female fanatic does not even differ in her aims from the women and the men who have just succeeded in breaking down the discipline, promoting the drunkenness, and endangering the health of the United States Army by destroying the canteen. She is more respectable than they, inasmuch as she has the courage of her convictions, and would be now in jail if the Governor of Kansas had any more spinal vertebrae against one class of lawbreakers than he has against another. It is true that the law against disorderly conduct is easier to be enforced than the law against the unlawful sale of spirituous liquors. But, in refusing to use any more serious terrors of the law than mild deprecation against this virago, the Governor has explained why he could not be trusted to enforce any other laws to the enforcement of which anybody was opposed. To that extent the mission of Mrs. NATION may be called successful.

Chief Examiner IRELAND of the Municipal Civil Service has done well in publishing one of the letters received by him intimating the belief of the writers that money can aid them in passing the examinations. He adds: "When such a communication is received, the writer's name is noted and no application from him for any position whatever is thereafter accepted." This action is within the discretion of the examiners, and is, of course, imperative. Yet, as Mr. IRELAND points out, the men who make this sort of suggestion are the victims of real offenders of a much worse type, whom it is impracticable to reach. If it were possible to lay hands on one of the scamps who try to get money for their pretended aid in securing an appointment through corrupting the examiners, and send him to jail, that would be very desirable. Meanwhile it is well to remember that the belief among the ignorant that the civil service law can be "beat" by the use of money is, after all, only a survival from the time when all appointments were a matter in part of favor and in part of direct or indirect purchase. And who shall say that this theory and practice are no longer prevalent? Practice, if not theory, of this sort pervades and devastates the civil service of the United States under a President pledged to extend the merit system. Appointments by his nomination, with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, are a matter of trade and dicker from which the element of payment is absent only in form. That, of course, is only a reason the more why every effort should be made to preserve from abuse or misrepresentation the actual administration of the merit system when it is pure, honest, and intelligent, as it undoubtedly is under the examinations of the Municipal Commission of the City of New York.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—"Distortionless currents," it seems, is the proper term to use in speaking of the end attained—or sought—by the use of the device recently sold by Dr. PUPIN of Columbia for such a pleasing number of dollars, and The Electrical Review, in discussing the probable results of the Doctor's discovery, says that though the possibility of telephoning over a transatlantic cable is the most striking of them, the greatest actual value of the invention will doubtless lie in the betterment of telephone service on land lines of all lengths, and in making feasible rapid machine telegraphy over submarine cables. With "distortionless currents" the land radius of the telephone will be vastly increased, while at the same time the expenses of line construction and maintenance will be diminished, thus certainly adding to the value of the service from the standpoint of the public, and at least making it possible, if the companies choose, to lower the scale of charges. Whether they do so or not, will, of course, depend upon the amount of compulsion brought to bear upon them by competitors and legislatures. As for the Atlantic cables, there are now fourteen of these, and with the best of the devices hitherto used only twenty-five words per minute can be sent over each of them, a total transmitting power of 350 words per minute. "If it is possible," says The Electrical Review, "to construct a cable that would permit telephony through it, the same cable will most easily carry Wheatstone or other automatic signals at the rate of 700 or more words per minute, so that one such cable would be equal to double the entire system now in operation under the Atlantic." This would permit of such reductions in tolls that no business men with really important messages to send would think of using the steamship mail service, which puts from fifteen to twenty days between question and answer.

—With its natural preference for private as against public hospitals, The Post-Graduate in its current issue uses the Bellevue scandals as a reason for declaring unwise the policy some time ago adopted by the present City Government of endeavoring to force all the sick or injured poor into the city hospitals. The editor of the magazine seems disposed to believe that the evils existing in Bellevue were exaggerated, for he dwells at length on the danger of accepting as true the uncorroborated evidence of insane and alcoholic patients against those whose duty it is to restrain them, but enough has been proved, he thinks, to show that there is some basis for the common belief of the poor that patients in private hospitals are well treated, while those sent to the public ones are likely to suffer abuse. Really, he declares, there are no private hospitals in New York except a few boarding houses for surgical patients, owned or controlled by the surgeons who operate in them, but the term is employed to designate hospitals which, while subject to inspection by the State Board of Charities, and taking in a greater or less number of patients at the expense of the city, are managed by Boards of Directors selected without regard to politics or politicians. The Post-Graduate ascribes all of Bellevue's troubles to the division of authority between medical and non-medical staffs, and it asserts that the recent changes, though in the direction of improvement, do not go far enough to preclude the possibility of further scandals. "The Commissioner of Charities," it says, "has appointed a Doctor of Medicine as Superintendent of Bellevue. Unfortunately he retains the political Superintendent as an understudy to his party boss. This is a fundamental omission. Party should have nothing to do with the management of a hospital. Until competency, honesty, and good temper are the grounds for appointments in Bellevue, abuses and neglect may and probably will predominate in the management. Think of the appointment of a nurse because he or she is the dependent of a ward heeler!" Mr. KELLER would doubtless deny that any such appointments are, or ever were, made by him, but evidently the system was wrong somewhere, and the opinion of The Post-Graduate has weight.

—That correspondent of ours who objected because we spoke of Messrs. MASON and SLIDELL as "rebels" found offense where none was intended or even given. When an Englishman—Mr. MORLEY, say, or Mr. KIPLING, to name only two out of the very many that might be mentioned—calls PAUL JONES a "pirate," he brands with criminality of a particular sort a man who is known to have been guiltless of that crime. History, with pages open to everybody able to read, tells just what PAUL JONES did through almost every day of his life, and never a one of these doings constitutes piracy as defined in any dictionary ever published or as understood by any people. Whoever applies the word to PAUL JONES does so either in unpardonable ignorance of the truth or because he prefers to ignore it, and in one case as in the other he is guilty of a mean and cruel slander. But just as history and the dictionary defend PAUL JONES from the accusation of piracy, so they convict Messrs. MASON and SLIDELL of rebellion, and justified us in calling them rebels. What of it? The same evidence brings the same conviction against PAUL JONES and WASHINGTON himself, and both those objects of our profound esteem undoubtedly were rebels at a certain stage of their careers. Now, rebels are good men or bad, according to circumstances, and there is nothing intrinsically opprobrious in the term. To be sure, if you think the rebel was right in rebelling, you usually use another word in describing him, but even that is not always done, and, unless success turned the rebellion into a revolution, those who do think it was justified have no cause for complaint if people who disagree with them continue to use the one word which fits an uncompleted movement against constituted or recognized authority. A pirate is of necessity a bad man; a rebel is good or bad, as may happen, and the mere fact that he is a rebel has nothing to do with the determination of his status. In a country the very foundation of which was rebellion, only the hyper-sensitive need worry much if they or theirs are denominated rebels. It puts them, at least, in extremely good company, as good company is defined in both the Americas.

—One RICHTER, evidently a man with a real genius for inventing absurdities, has introduced at Albany a bill providing that front doors on surface and elevated cars in this city shall be closed as against passengers between Oct. 15 and April 15 of each year. It is to be presumed that Mr. RICHTER is a man with a horror of fresh air—which he always speaks of as a "draft"—and that he is happier in exact proportion with the increase in the number of microbes in each square inch of the air he breathes. But whether this is so or not, his scheme would certainly add much to the terrors of travel in the big cars now used on the surface lines, and as for the elevated roads, why, there it would inevitably lead to evils innumerable, frequent homicides among them. Mr. RICHTER'S bill ranks well up with that of the other inverted genius who wants a medical diploma obtained in other States to give the right to practice in this one, no matter how lax the laws of the other State may be in regard to the qualifications of physicians, and he is not far behind the unutterably dreadful person who, the other day, gravely proposed the passage of a law under which nobody who had ever served in the legislative bodies of municipalities or the State would have to pass a civil service examination when he wanted a public job. That was probably the worst suggestion, in some ways, that was ever made in Albany, but Mr. RICHTER'S is well within sight of it.

INEQUALITIES OF TAXATION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Leonard Tuttle is respectfully informed, in regard to my article on "equal taxation," that the quoting of Mr. Thomas G. Shearman's opinion does not dispose of the matter of the known inequalities of taxation that exist. The question is still a most vital one. His further assertion that "the personal tax is a huge failure," and that it is "a premium on perjury and a punishment on truthfulness," I would not be willing to accept as by any means true. Nor can his final positive declaration that "the law is a disgrace to the State" or that "it is the duty of all good citizens to help to wipe it off the statute books" be accepted as emanating from a citizen who is himself "good" or animated by a sincere desire to promote the wellbeing and prosperity of his State.

I strongly suspect that he is a mortgage owner himself, or that his interests are affected by the said tax, for his opinions are evidently not those of an unprejudiced mind, as shown clearly in his most untrue statement that "it almost confiscates the property of the truthful, straightforward, and honest and permits those who are willing to perjure themselves to go scot free."

Has Mr. Tuttle ever heard of any man who has returned a true statement of his taxable property to the Assessor being ruined thereby? Will he attempt to show that a tax, which only asks from him so small a part of what he receives from the borrower without the risks that attend ordinary business, is an injustice, while the man upon whose shoulders rests the burden of meeting the entire taxation often of an unproductive and often valueless property, that must be constantly improved and made available as a means of support for himself and his family, must toil all the harder to meet the 6 per cent. or the 5 per cent. which the law allows the money-lender to charge merely for the use of money which he can frequently obtain for half those rates?

I repeat, and I think actual conditions bear me out in my former statement, that a light tax upon the known toiler and man of small means, who only possesses a moderate share of worldly wealth, and a heavier tax upon the speculator, the banker, and the corporation, in accordance with the magnitude of their possessions and the ease with which they are acquired, and a graded income tax upon all men having fixed salaries, unaffected by the course of regular business such as the paid employee in all municipal, State, and National positions, the clergy and other Church officials and dignitaries, professors, teachers, and other salaried officials in the educational, charitable, and religious organizations of the country would very largely augment the receipts of our governing bodies, and ease the burdens resting upon the poor and hard-working citizens of our country.

THE BANK TAX BILL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Are you strictly correct in your editorial of to-day on "The Bank Tax Bill"? You say the bill imposes "an annual tax of 1 per cent. of the actual value of the shares of stock" of all State and National banks in the State when you say that the effect of such a tax will be to reduce the earning value or dividend-paying power of the Chemical Bank shares to 3.15 on the market value of the stock. Does this very moderate sum which the bill calls for as the proper amount a bank should pay toward the cost of State Government really become such a source of loss and "confiscation" as your article would lead an average subscriber to your paper to believe?

I sincerely hope you credit your readers with a better mind than that which would accept your theory that an annual taxation of 71.817 would at once cause a shrinkage in share value of $1,767,000, or say about twenty-five times the sum the bank has paid.

Or are you "juggling with figures"?

The effect on the Chemical Bank would be simply that the enormous surplus that has accumulated since its organization will merely be reduced by a little less than $72,000. Dividends to shareholders will not be affected in the slightest degree, or need not be. They may still receive their $150 per share. They may still enjoy the fruits of their toil (!) free from being molested or made afraid. This tax merely calls for an assessment of $23.93 out of a market value of $4,000, or three-fifths of 1 per cent. on the value of the shares. Even this need not come out of his dividend, as the surplus will stand it perfectly well, the tax requiring only the difference between a surplus of $8,881,700 and $6,891,883 to meet it. Trust the bank officials not to charge this to the stockholders individually.

Is not this making "much ado about nothing"?

THE WRAPPING PAPER QUESTION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The spitting nuisance having been ably discussed in your columns without touching the wrapping paper question, quite as important as the floors of public places, I think the Board of Health should take up this phase of the subject and learn something of the habits of the clerks of groceries, bakeries, and delicatessens. It will be observed, almost invariably, that these people wet their fingers with spittle in taking up a sheet of wrapping paper, not excepting the unabsorbent paraffine paper, the moisture nearly every time coming on the bread, butter, or other food. It was but a few days ago at a high-class grocery not far below Harlem River that, in addition to this nuisance, a clerk deliberately used his earspoon, made an effort to clean it with his thumb and finger, and then, putting them on the lump of butter while removing it from the tub with the knife.

Another matter should receive attention—that of consumptives occupying flats over and contiguous to places of business for the distribution of food; for, if sensitive people refuse to buy their newspapers in a store where consumption is known to exist and sputa is known to contaminate the distribution, it may be presumed that the dust from the contaminated flats injures the stock and wrapping paper of groceries, &c.

THE LAW AS TO THEATRES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's issue you published a letter on box office abuses, which, theoretically speaking, suggested an excellent remedy. Practically and legally, however, it could amount to no more than a suggestion. Theatres, whatever interest the public might have in them, are private property. A manager can refuse admission to any one, whether with or without cause. Even where a person has peaceably entered a theatre, the manager may lawfully eject him therefrom, and only be liable for a breach of contract. This is true irrespective of the statement, which is generally printed on tickets, that they are merely personal licenses to enter the theatre, and may be revoked by the management. How, then, can the Legislature interfere in the regulation of this private property? Under what theory or law can it compel the theatrical management to stamp tickets with any special price? They cannot be bound by any scale of prices. Such a law would come within the constitutional prohibition against depriving persons of their property without due process of law.

As to compelling the management to keep a chart or plan of the seats, stating which are sold, since the law is as I have stated it to be, the fallaciousness of such a proposition is obvious. Our friend cannot contend that a manager could be obliged to show his receipts for the evening to every stranger, and yet could refuse him admission to his theatre. No, our friend's suggestion would not hold if tested in court, as it most certainly would be.

The only manner in which it could be carried out would be to arrest the speculators, on the theory that they are within the constitutional prohibition against gambling, or that they are engaged in a lottery, not knowing whether the purchaser would be admitted to the theatre; and thus bringing themselves within the rule laid down by our Court of Appeals that when any pecuniary consideration is paid and it is to be determined by chance what and how much he who pays money is to receive for it, that is a lottery. This suggestion is, I admit, somewhat far-fetched, but it may serve our purposes. A BOHEMIAN.

BLAMES THEATRE MANAGERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to add a few words regarding the "Box-Office Boor." "A Three-Nighter" praises the Empire employe. Recently I had occasion to purchase seats at that theatre and was very rudely treated, and only through the courtesy of the manager did I get anything at all. My experience has taught me that the Garrick and Daly's are the theatres where patrons receive the most polite attention. The Bijou and Wallack's are fairly good, likewise the Herald Square and Criterion, Broadway and Knickerbocker. But the Manhattan, Empire, and Casino ticket sellers seem to think they are doing the public a great favor to take the money. As for Weber and Fields, a prospective purchaser is almost insulted if he dares ask for anything nearer than the twelfth row.

The one remedy for this evil is to stop the ticket speculation. But don't strike at the poor speculator; he is not to blame. Compel the managers to be satisfied with the regular ($2) price. I have been told that several of the speculators pay $2.25 for their pick of seats, and that the managers "stand in" with them. A REGULAR.

BOY'S ACT IN CRUEL DILEMMA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That is a very pathetic story in to-day's TIMES about the boy who left the drowning girl whom he did not know to save the life of his friend. You say that the question whether his conduct was right or wrong is not a simple one. I think that, looked at simply, it is. Precedents for his action are not to be looked for in the annals of skating, but in every phase of human life since the world began, since men or women left all others to come to the aid of those they loved, with physical or moral support, with strength of arm or mind, with help of weapons or wit or good name or money, in business or in battle. This is the first impulse in average humanity, and it is probably more right than any argument can prove or disprove.

But let us look at the case on its unsentimental side. One human life is as valuable as another until reason to the contrary appears, and a life, like any other thing whose value is known, is to be preferred to one whose value is not. Then surely the boy was justified in preserving a life that he knew to be valuable to himself and to others rather than one about which he knew nothing.

Furthermore, as this courageous youth is probably too young and too much overwrought to realize that the mere fact of the question being open to discussion justifies his action in so sudden and cruel a dilemma, and as you say that he is "half mad with doubt as to whether his conduct was right or wrong," I trust you will take care that he sees this, either by printing it or otherwise, so that his anxiety may get what tempering it can from the sympathy of at least one person who can give a reason for his writhing. WALLS OF TALL BUILDINGS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial on the problems of tall buildings in to-day's issue is, to my mind, very instructive to lay readers. Such questions intelligently presented are vital and valuable, since they touch the housings of our commercial populace—only secondary in importance to their domestication "after hours."

The walls of these buildings are not high, however, but practically only from story to story, say twelve feet or so, where the wind strikes them with any force. Where there is a facing of stone or terra cotta on the fronts it should be anchored to the metal in each story. We often see several stories being built independently, and it is perfectly logical to build from the cornice downward.

The cyclone which visited St. Louis some years ago made no impression on several first-class office buildings in its track, and I believe that there is so great an elasticity in a metal frame as to defy the effect of any earthquake liable to come hereabout.

The main thing to care for is the metal frame. Every precaution should be taken to prevent oxidization, for this is the danger of its ultimate deterioration.

The Weekly Sunday School Lesson.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to add my word of praise to the many I am sure you must be receiving regarding the masterly expositions of the Sunday school lessons that appear in your Saturday's issue. My Sunday work compels me to read many comments on the same subject. In none do I find the clearness, the fullness, and the depth of thought as in these articles in THE TIMES. Especially am I pleased at the high note the author strikes on such subjects as the atonement and the divinity of Jesus Christ. In these days, when so many hold Him up as a mere teacher, it is refreshing to hear these certain sounds that "truly this is the Son of God."

Hypnotizing the Bosses?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Has "Boss" Platt been hypnotized as well as "Boss" Croker by the Metropolitan Railroad trust? It would certainly seem so when he favors John D. Crimmins for Mayor, who, it is well known, is one of the magnates of this unpopular trust. If Mr. Platt forgets, the public does not, that Mr. Crimmins was a supporter of Tammany until he lost the city work through McNaughton & Co. Tammany was as bad then as it is now; therefore, it appears that Mr. Crimmins, if he is sincere now, subverted principle to personal interest. Hence, if elected Mayor, how could the public expect him to do otherwise in regard to the Metropolitan Trust. It is evident that "Boss" Platt has been hypnotized or knows so little of city affairs as to make his judgment unworthy of consideration. A candidate for Mayor should be a man without any axes to grind through which he could use his office for his own aggrandizement and profit. CITIZEN.

Mr. Smith's Bill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Bishop Potter in a lately published address, told his hearers how much better they did "abroad," for there any one aggrieved, or with news he thought of public interest, just wrote to The Times, and everything was set to rights, or words to that effect. Now let the New York public recognize their TIMES as the organ of the kickers and others who would see reform, and perhaps results may follow as good as they do abroad, don't you know.

Your journal of yesterday on its editorial page spoke of a Mr. Smith and his bill relating to taxation, and gave the good news "it is not likely to pass." The bill in its many discreditable features is a copy of the California Tax Law which has done more to drive capital out of that State, to decrease its population, to increase its perjurers, and generally to make it a back number, than its many other crank laws together. A Business Method Not Appreciated.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will any one sympathize with me in my efforts to discourage a popular method of selling books, tickets, &c.? Whenever goods are sent to me with a polite request to return if not desired, I make it a rule not to take them. If this goes on much longer, the dry goods houses may dump velvets and clothes upon us, "to return if not wanted." There is no reason why I should be forced either to take goods or go to the trouble of writing that I do not wish them. I have received large bail tickets, which were to be "returned if not wished," and for which I had no envelopes. I have had social registers and other books dumped on me in this way, and I am supposed to keep them carefully in a safe place, until a month or two later some one finds it convenient to call for them. Car Companies and Expectoration.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Smallpox may ravage the city from end to end and every disease under the category of contagious, but, packed like herrings in barrels, the public will continue to ride in surface, elevated, and steam railroads because the dear corporations own the law makers of both parties body and bones. The railroads of the United States spend thirty million dollars a year in bribing Judges, packing conventions, controlling Legislatures, and Congress.

The man who chews tobacco can remove his quid when he enters a car; the man afflicted with catarrh cannot prevent expectorating, nor the man with bronchial trouble, nor the dreaded consumptive. The fetid breath of all interchanged in close proximity in these sardinelike public conveyances is far more dangerous than all the expectoration in the world. There are 200,000 cases of grip in New York, the bulk of which probably was caught by the close contact in crowded cars.

Newspapers of all shades of opinion should get a move on them and agitate and agitate to stop car crowding, fining passenger and company alike and compelling companies to provide spittoons. They can well afford it.

The Boadway cable road is capitalized for $2,225,000 per mile and can be duplicated for $100,000 a mile, so enormous is the watering of stock to reduce percentage on dividends and avoid just taxation.

Would Provide Spittoons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial about the enforcement of the laws against spitting suggested to me that the only way to prevent public expectoration is not to prevent it, but to provide for antiseptic, hygienic spittoons on all public conveyances, and at short intervals on the streets.

The prevalence of catarrh causes the spitting. If the catarrh germs are kept out of the air and the disease diminishes, which causes a good deal of unpleasantness, the first cost would be more than repaid. Correction is always better than repression. W. McA. JOHNSON.

"Is That So?"

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The smallpox excitement has subsided, and the grip seems to be on the decrease, but there is one epidemic in New York from which there is apparently no hope of relief. I refer to the asking of that tiresome and meaningless question, "Is that so?" As the old song hath it, "Where e'er I go, where e'er I roam," (within the confines of this city,) I seem to hear nothing else. When I first had it asked me after my arrival here, I was somewhat indignant, fancying my veracity impugned, but since learning that it has no meaning whatever, I am only wearied by its constant repetition.

Cannot some leader of fashion be prevailed upon to substitute some other senseless saying just for the benefit of those listeners who are not to the manner born? It would at least be a change.

THE BABY'S SMILE.

From The Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times.

Like to a floweret freshly set
Where Spring its revels keeps,
The baby's visage peeps.
Dear sleeping bud of promise!

And as he sleeps his dewy lips
Are wreathed in a smile,
And all his sweet pink finger tips
Clutch at the air, the while.
How far his thoughts are from us!

Perhaps in that celestial land,
Which he forsook for earth,
Once more he walketh hand in hand
With angels, Shares their mirth,
And joineth in their frolic.

Perhaps, adown some fragrant aisle
Of Slumberland where he—
Here Nurse looks in, and notes the smile
And restless hands. Quoth she:
"Poor child! He's getting colic."

SOCIETY AT CHARITY BALL

Annual Function at the Waldorf a Brilliant Spectacle.

Three Generals Take Part in the Grand March—Some of the Beautiful Costumes and Their Wearers.

The Charity Ball, which is now a social institution, took place last evening at the Waldorf-Astoria. New York society takes an active interest in the Charity Ball. The boxes are quickly sold, and each year a very substantial sum is realized by the committee for the benefit of the Nursery and Child's Hospital. One of the features this year was the taking of boxes by some of the popular dancing classes, such as the Knickerbocker, the Wednesday Cotillions, the Bachelors and Spinsters, and others. The army and navy were particularly well represented, and fashionable people were there in large numbers.

There is very little to describe in a Charity ball. The locale makes a little difference, but that is all. Some years ago it was held at the Metropolitan, and then Carnegie Hall was tried, and eventually the Waldorf-Astoria. Here, as in several previous years, the entire ballroom suite was utilized. The patrons had the use of the private entrance on Thirty-third Street, as is done at the Assemblies. The large ballroom was reserved for the general dancing and the Myrtle Room and Astor Gallery for promenading.

There were no decorations. There never are any at a Charity Ball. The old familiar legend "Charity" burned brightly in electric lights over the platform where the patronesses sat.

The only drawback to the affair was the absence of Gov. Odell, who could not be present. The ball was quite punctual, and it was a little after 10:30 when the grand march began, followed immediately by the quadrille d'honneur, which opened the festivities of the evening. At that time the rooms were very well filled, and the occupants of all the boxes had arrived, and presented a brilliant sight. The very absence of palms and floral decorations accentuated the beauty of the gowns, and the ballroom itself, with its paneling and skilfully combined colors, was found to be a very excellent background.

The grand march was opened and led by the Floor Committee, walking four abreast, followed by the Board of Governors of the Nursery and Child's Hospital. Then the three Generals—Gen. Joseph Wheeler, Gen. George Gillespie, and Major Gen. Brooke—marched abreast, Gen. Wheeler and Gen. Gillespie being in civilians' clothes and Gen. Brooke in full uniform.

The following was the order of the marching of the Board of Governors, who walked in pairs:

Mrs. Algernon Sidney Sullivan and Mrs. William Kingsland.
Mrs. William C. Egleston and Mrs. Thomas Hicks.
Mrs. Robert Nicol and Miss Patterson
Mrs. George Lewis Gillespie and Miss Hunt.
Mrs. Frederick N. Goddard and Mrs. Edward J. Berwind.
Mrs. Joseph Suckney and Mrs. William Barbour.
Mrs. E. Pope Stanton and Mrs. Lewis F. Whitin.
Mrs. Henry Mills Day and Mrs. Joseph Milbank.

Mr. Francis P. Magoun and Mrs. David Meriwether Milton.
Mr. Gano S. Dunn and Mrs. Francis P. Magoun.
Mr. James Clarke McGuire and Mrs. Samuel Spencer.
Mr. Alfred Lee Manierre and Mrs. Alfred Lee Manierre.

The march was from the small reception room into the great ballroom and around the room. Immediately following the march came the quadrille, which was witnessed by a large audience of beautifully gowned women and black-coated and white-gloved men. After the last figure of the quadrille had been danced the orchestra began a Strauss waltz, and in a minute the floor was crowded with couples, dancing to its bewitching measures.

One individual point of this Charity Ball above all others was the presence of so many young people. This Winter they have almost usurped the general entertaining, and last evening they were greatly in evidence.

EMERALD ASSOCIATION BALL.

About $6,000 Realized for the Brooklyn Roman Catholic Orphan Asylums.

The sixty-third annual ball of the Emerald Association was the occasion for a brilliant gathering at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, last evening.

The decorations were on an elaborate scale. The boxes were massed with greens, and about the proscenium arch and balconies trailing vines were suspended.

American Beauty roses added the note of color, while amid the foliage hundreds of canary birds piped and whistled, their voices mingling with the music of the orchestra. The musicians were placed on the stage, the back of which was completely hidden by a wall of palms. A concert preceded the dancing. Miss Mary Louise Clary sang, and a male quartet rendered several selections. Shannon's Twenty-third Regiment Band provided the music.

A feature of the entertainment that evoked much enthusiasm was the drill by 250 boys from St. John's Home. An ovation was also given to the boys' band from the same institution.

The dancing began at 11 o'clock, and the ball was in full swing an hour later. Many beautiful costumes were worn, and the ballroom, with several hundred couples on the floor, presented a picture of extreme beauty. Supper was served in the assembly rooms, which were also decorated with palms and roses.

The ball was given in aid of the Brooklyn Roman Catholic Orphan Asylums, and it was estimated that about $6,000 were realized for the charity.

Among those in the boxes were Edward M. Grout, President of the Borough; James Shevlin and Mrs. Shevlin, John Guilfoyle, Commissioner of Buildings; James McMahon, President of the Emigrant Savings Bank, Commissioner of Charities Adolph H. Goetting, Assistant Corporation Counsel Luke D. Stapleton and Mrs. Stapleton, ex-Senator Eugene F. O'Connor, Miss O'Connor, Miss Virginia O'Connor, and Miss Josephine O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Broadway Rouss, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Gilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. William Cromwell, Judge William A. Hurd, Judge and Mrs. John J. Walsh, Judge John Courtney, exSheriff William J. Buttling, Edward H. Langdon, and James J. Byrne.

MAY BUY MARLBOROUGH HOUSE

Possibility that W. K. Vanderbilt May Be Able to Purchase It for the Duchess of Marlborough.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—There is a great deal of surmise as to what disposal will be made of the King's late residence. Both the King and Queen Alexandra are devoted to Sandringham, so his Majesty will probably retain that place, but it is thought that Marlborough House will be given up.

In the event of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York not desiring to reside at Marlborough House, it is considered likely that William K. Vanderbilt will purchase the place for his son-in-law and daughter, the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough.

The main wing of Osborne House will, it is expected, become the residence of Princess Beatrice, (Princess Henry of Battenberg,) in her capacity as Governor of the Isle of Wight. The other part of the house will be reserved for the King.

It has been frequently reported that the repurchase of Marlborough House for the family from which the building takes its name is "the dream" of the Duchess of Marlborough.

The house is one of the finest palaces in London. It was built by the great Duke of Marlborough. It was bought by the Crown in 1817 for the Princess Charlotte and Prince Leopold, subsequently King Leopold I. of the Belgians. Queen Adelaide, widow of William IV., lived in Marlborough House before the Prince of Wales occupied it.

GERMAN PAPER'S DISCOVERY.

Says King Edward Was In a Hurry to Pay Back to the Kaiser a Loan of $5,700,000.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The Vorwaerts (the Socialist organ) to-day printed a remarkable story to the effect that Emperor William's sudden departure for England was not only due to a desire to bid farewell to his dying grandmother, but still more to the Prince of Wales's urgent wish to settle a private debt to the Emperor before ascending the throne.

This debt, the Vorwaerts asserts, amounted to 24,000,000 marks, ($5,700,000,) which Emperor Frederick, immediately after ascending the throne, loaned to the Prince of Wales in order to place the latter in a position to pay accumulated debts to that amount. The loaned money, it is further asserted, was part of the savings, amounting to 50,000,000 marks, left by Emperor William I. Count von Stolberg, then Minister of the Imperial Household, the Vorwaerts also says, vainly opposed the paying out of the 24,000,000 marks, and thereupon resigned.

In official circles here the Vorwaerts's story is characterized as a ridiculous hoax.

The Kaiser Not In Debt.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—From the most trustworthy sources it is ascertained that there is no foundation whatever for the rumors frequently appearing in the German press that Emperor William is largely indebted to Herr Krupp and other German capitalists. On the contrary, the Kaiser is not only without debts, but he is saving money yearly for his children.

GERMAN-BRITISH FRIENDSHIP.

Russian Press Alarmed at the Evidences of It—Mixed Comment in Berlin.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 29.—The newspapers here comment lengthily on Emperor William's appointment as a Field Marshal of the British Army. The Svet says:

"The appointment and the naval display at Spithead demonstrates the offensive and defensive character of the Anglo-German alliance. It is now clear that Mr. Krüger was not received at Berlin because Germany needed the alliance of Great Britain in order to assume a predominating position in the Balkans, Asia Minor, and the Far East."

The Svet considers the rapprochement distinctly injurious to Russia.

The Bourse Gazette is of the opinion that another stage has been reached on the road which is leading Germany into the arms of Great Britain, "who is now hunting for alliances instead of boasting of her splendid isolation."

The Novosti regards as fantastic the idea of an Anglo-German alliance being a "panacea for sick England," and doubts if the alliance is practical, or if the directors of German policy entertain the schmes ascribed to them.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—Regarding the appointment of Emperor William as a Field Marshal of the British Army, the Berliner Neueste Nachrichten says:

"It is gratifying that the excellent relations which King Edward has always fostered with the Czar find a complement in the good, friendly, personal relations between Emperor William and the ruler of England."

The Post says:

"This spontaneous mark of honor proves that the suggestion of certain papers that the coolness between the Prince of Wales and the Emperor would not be without influence on the relations between the two countries is destitute of all foundation."

The Berliner Tageblatt says:

"A man like the Emperor will know, when a fitting occasion appears, how to breathe life into his position of a Field Marshal of the British Army, which, in itself, is purely ornamental. It may fairly be affirmed without exaggeration that Emperor William to-day is the most popular man in England, and there is no need to add that the fact is to the advantage of the 100,000 Germans living under the British flag and otherwise bound to Great Britain by the closest commercial ties."

At the same time there is much head-shaking in regard to Emperor William's alleged Anglomania, and the whole tenor of his world policy, which, however, without the good-will of Great Britain, is generally recognized as an impossibility.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—King Edward's speech to Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, when investing him with the insignia of the Order of the Garter, is approved on all sides as furnishing additional proof of the friendly relations between the new monarch and Emperor William.

Americans in Constantinople Meet.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 29.—The Americans in Constantinople met to-day at the United States Legation, under the Presidency of the United States Chargé d'Affaires, Lloyd C. Griscom, and adopted a resolution of sympathy with the royal family and people of Great Britain proposed by Dr. Washburn. The resolution concluded as follows: "We are proud to share in the mother country's admiration and affection for Queen Victoria, and we owe her a special debt of gratitude because of her unvarying sympathy with and friendship for our own country."

DUKE OF CORNWALL ILL.

Is Suffering from the German Measles—Court Doctors in Attendance.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Duke of Cornwall and York has been confined by illness to his room at Osborne House since Thursday.

The malady from which the Duke is suffering is the German measles; and this, The Court Circular announces, is the explanation of his failure to visit Emperor William on the anniversary of the latter's birthday and of his absence from the ceremony of investing Crown Prince Frederick William with the insignia of the Order of the Garter.

Sir Francis Laking, for many years surgeon to Queen Victoria, is attending his Royal Highness. Sir James Reid is also in attendance.

THE KING BACK IN LONDON.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—King Edward and the Duke of Cambridge arrived in London at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A large crowd welcomed the King at Victoria Station. For the first time since his accession the King's train yesterday was preceded by a pilot engine.

His Majesty was vociferously cheered on his way to Marlborough House.

The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain was among the King's visitors in the afternoon.

King Edward received Lord Salisbury, Mr. Chamberlain, and several other members of the Cabinet later in the afternoon. He will hold a Privy Council at St. James's Palace to-day to sanction finally the arrangements for the funeral, and will then return immediately to Osborne.

Salutes to be Fired at Manila.

MANILA, Jan. 29.—Gen. MacArthur has issued orders that all duty throughout the division, excepting the necessary guard and field duty, be suspended the day of Queen Victoria's funeral. At reveille a National salute will be fired, and single guns will be fired half hourly between sunrise and sundown, when a salute to the union jack, of forty-five guns, will be fired.

May Be Master of King's Household.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Gen. Sir Dighton M. Probyn (Controller and Treasurer of the Household of the Prince of Wales since 1877) is mentioned as likely to succeed Lord Edward Pelham-Clinton as Master of the Household. The office is in the personal gift of the King.

German Command for King Edward.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The Militair Wochenblatt, the official army organ, announces that Emperor William has appointed King Edward VII. to be Chief of Queen Victoria's Dragoon Regiment of the Guard.

Sir Percy Sanderson, British Consul General, and head of the committee having in charge preparations for memorial services to be held here by members of the British community, announced late yesterday the date and place of some of the various services.

The principal service will be held in Trinity Church at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday. Admission will be by ticket only, and the doors will be thrown open at 2 o'clock. Ticket holders are requested to be in their seats by 2:45 o'clock. So great has been the demand for tickets that no further applications can be considered. Similar services, for which no tickets will be required, however, will be held at the same date and hour at St. Paul's Chapel, St. Agnes's Chapel, in West Ninety-second Street, and in Grace Church. In Brooklyn there will be a union service of Congregationalists at 3:30 o'clock in the Central Congregational Church, Hancock Street and Spencer Place.

A service at which a requiem will be sung will be held at 10:45 Friday morning at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, in Forty-sixth Street, near Sixth Avenue. At 11 A. M. on Saturday services will be held at St. Andrew's Church, Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, and on Sunday there will be a service in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. At 8 o'clock Sunday evening the order of the Sons of St. George will hold memorial services at St. James's Church.

Sir Percy Sanderson states that owing to the large number of applications for tickets of admission to Trinity Church, he is unable to personally reply to all. He states that no further applications for tickets can be considered.

Exchanges Will Be Closed.

At a special meeting of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange yesterday it was decided to suspend business Saturday in respect to the late Queen Victoria, whose funeral takes place on that day. The Consolidated Exchange will also close. This action rescinds the previous action, taken some days ago, resolving to close only from 10 A. M. to 11 A. M. on the morning of the funeral.

FLAG RESOLUTIONS SHUT OFF.

Municipal Assembly Did Not Wish to Embarrass Mayor Van Wyck.

The sessions of both branches of the Municipal Assembly were adjourned precipitately yesterday because of resolutions introduced by members requesting Mayor Van Wyck to lower the flag to half-mast on the City Hall as a tribute of respect to Queen Victoria. Councilman Stewart M. Brice had a resolution prepared. He spoke to some of the Tammany members before the meeting, and the result was a hurried conference. Councilman Oakley, the Tammany leader, tried to induce his fellow-member not to offer the resolution, because it would embarrass Mayor Van Wyck. During this discussion Councilman Murray said he wanted to go home, and moved to adjourn. The resolution which Councilman Brice rose to introduce was as follows:

Resolved, That, as a mark of respect, the Mayor is hereby requested to lower the flag, at least over the Council Chamber, to half-mast until after the funeral of her late Majesty Queen Victoria.

The session of the Council lasted only five minutes. Enough members were present to transact business, but the Tammany members did not want to listen to the scathing remarks which Councilman Brice was ready to utter. After the meeting Councilman Brice said:

"Some of these people will find that there are gentlemen in the City of New York in a short time. I think this flag episode is a disgrace to the city."

At the session of the Board of Aldermen the Tammany members also heard of the proposed introduction of the resolution, which would embarrass Mayor Van Wyck. It was in the possession of Alderman Oatman. A resolution authorizing the expenditure of $313,000 for a pumping station in Jerome Park was passed. A few minutes before 3 o'clock Alderman Muh moved that the board adjourn. There was a vigorous protest from many of the members, who did not understand the political move.

A resolution was on special orders to be considered at 3 o'clock, but in a few seconds President Woods banged his gavel and declared the meeting adjourned. Alderman Oatman acknowledged he had a resolution in his pocket that he wanted to introduce, so as to put the members on record as to whether they favored keeping the flag at full mast on the day of Queen Victoria's funeral.

REQUIEM OVER FATHER MAHONEY

Three Hundred Priests Chant the Office of the Dead.

A requiem mass was celebrated yesterday morning in the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel, Brooklyn, over Father P. Mahoney, the rector of the church, who died on Saturday. The body lay in state from 6 to 10 o'clock Monday night, in a black cloth-covered casket, on a catafalque placed in front of the sanctuary. The dead priest was robed in mass vestments of purple, his arms crossed on his breast, and his hands held his rosary. Several hundred members of the parish and friends of the dead priest took a farewell look at his face. When the church doors were closed the members of the various societies connected with the church kept watch at the bier for the remainder of the night.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning the office of the dead was chanted by nearly 300 priests, representing every church in the diocese. At the requiem mass the celebrant was Mgr. John D. Barrett; deacon, the Rev. Daniel Cherry; sub-deacon, the Rev. James F. Higgins, and master of ceremonies, the Rev. Father Lyle. The sermon was preached by the Rev. John L. Belford. The burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

THE REV. H. R. HAWEIS DEAD.

Famous London Preacher and Author Expires After an Illness of One Day.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Rev. Hugh Reginald Haweis, incumbent of St. James's, Marylebone, died this afternoon. He preached twice on the subject of Queen Victoria on Sunday, and was stricken with illness yesterday. He became unconscious, and remained so throughout the day.

To a very large number of Londoners the death of the Rev. Hugh Reginald Haweis will seem like the loss of a personal friend. He possessed, more perhaps than any other of the well-known English preachers, the art of endearing himself to his audiences, of making them hang on every word he uttered. The broadest of broad Churchmen, he occasionally gave vent to opinions which shocked other ecclesiastics, but in so great personal esteem was he held he escaped censure for utterances for which another man would have been brought sharply to book.

Mr. Haweis was born in 1838. He was educated at Cambridge, but before he took orders he had seen active service as a volunteer in Garibaldi's army. In the final campaign which brought about the liberation of Italy he displayed great heroism, and at the siege of Capua exposed himself so carelessly that he nearly lost his life.

On returning to England Mr. Haweis was ordained, and went at once to work in London. Soon afterward he married Miss Mary Eliza Joy, daughter of the late S. M. Joy, the artist. Mrs. Haweis has herself made a name as an artist and writer on art.

In 1866 Mr. Haweis became incumbent of St. James's, Marylebone, which position he held till his death. The story of his activities in connection with his pastorate can hardly be told in any detail. He made St. James's one of the most popular churches in London; he started the famous "evenings for the people"; he formed a choir unsurpassed in the United Kingdom, and made his church a power in the agitation for various social reforms.

But Mr. Haweis was a good deal more than an able and popular clergyman. He was a musician, an author, a lecturer, and editor. His book, "Music and Morals," has run through many editions. He lectured all over England, and in various parts of America. He came to this country as the delegate from the Anglican Church to the Parliament of Religions at Chicago, and was Lowell lecturer at Boston in 1885. Ten years later he went on a preaching and lecturing tour round the world.

As editor of Cassell's Magazine, Mr. Haweis proved that he possessed even other gifts, and afterward he edited the series of classics known as "Cassell's World Libraries." He wrote various volumes of essays on subjects ranging from cremation and vivisection to the music of Eastern peoples and tobacco. He frequently preached in Westminster Abbey, and whenever he was announced to do so the building was crowded.

The story of the resignation by Mr. Haweis of the Chaplaincy of the Twentieth Middlesex Rifles was a famous one in its day, but it is now old enough to bear repetition. An afternoon parade service had been arranged, and the streets were lined with people. At the last moment the commander declared that the weather being showery, he had decided that the troops should not turn out. Mr. Haweis thereupon got into his pulpit and resigned the Chaplaincy, telling his astonished congregation that he considered it no honor to belong to a corps which could not go out without umbrellas.

COUNT GOURKO IS DEAD.

He Made a Great Reputation by Leading Russian Troops Across the Balkans In the Winter of 1878.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 29.—Field Marshal Count Gourko died to-day on his estate at Scharow, near Tver.

Count Joseph Vassilyevitch Gourko was one of the most distinguished Generals of the Russo-Turkish war, and commanded the vanguard of the imperial army. On June 25, 1877, with a detachment of cavalry and a single battery, he took by assault the strongly occupied town of Tyrnovo. On July 5 he occupied Kazanlyk and the village of Shipka, and after occupying and defending the passes of Shipka, Hanko, and others, he, with Gen. Radetzky, traversed the Balkans in the middle of the Winter snowstorms and frosts, and led the victorious troops into the fertile valleys beyond, thus occupying Sofia, Philippopolis, and Adrianople. This hazardous and almost impossible feat of traversing the Balkans in midwinter will forever be regarded as one of the greatest deeds performed by the soldiers of Russia, and it has been immortalized in military history as "Gourko's Raid."

Count Gourko was of Lithuanian origin. He was born in 1828, a descendant of a race of patrician soldiers. At the age of fifteen he was enrolled in the corps of imperial pages, and three years later received his commission as Lieutenant in the hussars of the Imperial Guard. Promotion followed rapidly until 1867, when the Emperor named him Major General. In 1874 he was promoted to the

The lawyer tried to ascertain from Carley what his private means were since last May. Carley maintained that he had not any and that anything he had had since then was held by him as trustee. COTTON.—It was not a lively day on the local Cotton Exchange, nor were there sensational new developments in connection with the January deal. The talent was suspicious throughout the session and slow to take on new responsibilities while the January manipulation was in progress. The speculative public quietly settled accounts and withdrew in order to be on the safe side. There were all sorts of sensational and conflicting rumors in circulation concerning the purpose of the bull clique, but these lacked substantial backing and failed to more than keep the market in a fever of unrest and uncertainty. On the first call the feeling was about steady, with the general list unchanged to 2 points higher, while January, after opening at an advance of 20 points, scored an additional bulge of 40 points on the initial call. Soon afterward a jump to 11.75 occurred, but later there was a reaction to 11.50 under profit taking by local longs. By noon another spasm of covering had advanced that option to 11.95, around which it swung until the last hour, when there was a quick rise to 12.50 and a break to 11.85. The later months were listless and stuck tenaciously to about the closing figures of yesterday. Any notable advance invariably brought out long stuff, while any decline of importance started generous buying for a rally. The South was a fair Summer buyer, this being chiefly hedges against sales of spot cotton to exporters. Wall Street covered near month shorts, and went long of the January and August postions. The early cables from Liverpool were about as expected, and before the close that market displayed tolerable stability on Continental support. Receipts considerably overtopped general ideas, and led to some nervousness on the part of bulls in the morning. But estimates for much smaller receipts to-morrow dispelled this uneasiness in the afternoon. The semi-weekly interior-town figures were not sufficiently out with predictions to have special effect upon the market. Callable private telegrams stated that Fall River parties had shipped 4,500 bales of cotton to New York shorts and had loaded 3,500 bales more. In Baltimore spot cotton jumped up 2 cents on urgent demand from New York, to 12 cents, or to a parity with prevailing quotations here. The other Southern spot markets remained about unchanged. The New York stock increased something over 9,000 bales, to about 80,000 bales. Some 20,000 bales additional were looked for before delivery day. The inspection department of the New York Cotton Exchange reported 28 sample weighers and 2 samplers at work in warehouses, and expressed the belief that the department would be able to inspect fully 10,000 bales per day from now on. Express shipments of cotton to New York reached 608 bales; steamer arrivals in the immediate future were estimated at about 18,000 bales. It was reported that several thousand bales had been taken from a New York steamer about to sail for Liverpool, the owner being able to secure a very handsome profit by selling to parties here at the prevailing abnormal prices. The close was barely steady, with January net 80 points higher, and other months 2 points higher to 7 points net lower. Spot cotton closed dull and irregular with quotations unchanged on the basis of 12c for middling upland and 12¼c for middling Gulf. Sales, 605 bales. Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: New Orleans quiet, unchanged, at 9¼c; Mobile quiet, unchanged, at 9 5-16c; Savannah quiet, unchanged, at 9 7-16c; Charleston steady, unchanged, at 9¼c; Wilmington steady, unchanged, at 9¼c; Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 9¼c; Baltimore dull and nominal, 2c advance, at 12c; Augusta steady, unchanged, at 9¾c; St. Louis quiet, unchanged, at 9¼c.

Original Capital.....$200,000 Increase to.....$1,000,000
CONSISTING OF
Preferred, Eight Per Cent. Cumulative.....$500,000.
Common.....$500,000.

The Company is in active operation, having obtained written contracts with consumers sufficient to assure success, and making necessary the increase in capital stock in order to enlarge its sources of supplies, purchase additional equipment and be prepared to meet the increasing demands of its customers.

Dock Facilities Have Been Secured.

The belief is justified that the following annual estimate will be realized, based on delivery of 301,136 tons of Ice to wholesale and retail consumers:

Gross Receipts, one year.....$1,042,611.96.
Net, for Dividends and Surplus..... $188,177.64.

This statement is carefully prepared by the Company's Treasurer, Mr. Edmund A. Smith (for 23 years treasurer and an active manager of the late Knickerbocker Ice Co.), and it has been verified by other experts in the ice business, who are unanimously of the opinion that the Company is able to earn a large surplus in excess of 8 per cent. dividends on the preferred stock. Office of the Company, 874 Broadway,

The Company has received assurance of a very large patronage from all classes, and it stands as a protector of the people of this city against its one formidable rival, the so-called "Ice Trust." It is the one company on which citizens must depend for satisfactory assurance of permanently fair prices for a life necessity.

FREIGHT BY A TROLLEY LINE.

Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Rochester Railway May Run 20-Car Trains.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Since the hearing here last week before the State Railroad Commission of the arguments pro and con in the matter of the Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Rochester Electric Railway great interest has been caused, both locally and all along the proposed line of construction. The State Railroad Commission will go over the line prior to the continuation of the hearing, Feb. 14, and in all probability will be accompanied by Engineer Gray of the new road.
A study of the specifications of the road reveals some features unusual in trolley lines. The steel used in the tracks is to be of the same weight as that used by the steam roads. All of the bridges will be of steel, and the tracks will be built to bear the heaviest loads carried on a common railroad. Another feature will be that no short curves, such as are common in trolley lines, will be necessary.
In busy times it is the intention of the company to run trains of not less than twenty cars for freight traffic. The motors specified are of sufficient power to haul a loaded train of this length at a speed of twenty miles an hour. Immediately after the franchise is granted the company will file an adequate bond and proceed at once with the construction of the road.

BOSTON, Jan. 29.—It was announced today at the Shoe and Leather Exchange that a compromise had been reached in the controversy between the shoe manufacturers and the shoe machinery combine over the terms required by the combine for a lease of their machines. Under the agreement the shoe machinery company offers a choice between the lease as originally drawn or a modified lease which contains among the several important concessions the right to use metal fastening machines other than those owned and leased by the United Shoe Machinery Company.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 29.—Boston had about the quietest and most uninteresting market in six months. There was no animation whatever in home specialties. Scarcely 3,000 shares of all kinds of mining stocks changed hands in the morning. A little interest was shown in Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and Federal Steel, and here and there somebody would trade gently in Sugar or Tube. Dominion Coal was marked down ½, to 35; Iron and Steel held at 23; Gas and Coke was firm at 12½ for stock and at 87½ for the 5s. It would be difficult to pick out anything else from the record of the morning dealings worth noting. In later trading American Telephone was firm, touching 163, with most transactions at 162½; Franklin hardened ½ to 17. The market continued dull, but as a rule held steady.

On call, money rules from 3 to 4 per cent., mostly 3 to 3½ per cent. One of the strongest borrowers says he has no call loans here, but is borrowing in New York at 2 per cent. Time money is in large supply at 3¼@4 per cent. for four to six months, according to collateral. There is not a large supply of commercial paper, while the demand is urgent. Best names range from 3¼ to 3½ per cent., and good names from 3½ to 4 per cent.

At the Clearing House this morning money was in large supply at 2 per cent. New York funds sold at par and 5 cents premium for cash. A bank official bid 5 cents premium for $500,000.

Closing bid and asked:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29.—There was considerable activity in the stock market to-day and prices were steady and higher. Philadelphia Electric fours moved up 1⅜, to 70¾, one block of $50,000 being traded in at the latter figure. Bethlehem Iron was strong at 60. United Gas Improvement was off a point. United Transportation moved up 3 points, to 38½, the rise being based largely upon increased earnings. Choctaw, Philadelphia Company, and Pennsylvania were higher. There was more good buying of Western New York and Pennsylvania general mortgage bonds. Allegheny Valley preferred was bid up $4, to 25¾.

Demand is light in the local money market and many call loans are being made at 3½ per cent. Four per cent. is asked for time loans, and good commercial paper is taken as low as 3½.

The stock market's close was steady at the following bid and asked prices:

Columbus and Hocking Coal's Officers.

The Board of Directors of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company, at a meeting held yesterday at Columbus, Ohio, ratified the action taken by their Executive Committee in accepting the resignation of John E. Knapp as President. Mr. Knapp has been in ill-health for some months, and is forced to give up all business for the present. William H. Ziegler of New York City was elected as his successor in the Board and as President, and John M. Shaw of New York City was chosen Second Vice President.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

The outside market yesterday was again irregular, with transactions about as small as they were on Monday. In some parts of the list a good deal of weakness showed, but elsewhere there was compensating strength, and a few substantial advances showed at the end of the day. Not a single issue showed special activity, and even in the case of the relatively active issues trading fell short of 1,000 shares.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS preferred was one of the strong issues of the day. It was traded in to the extent of 600 shares or more up to 75, and it closed at 75 bid, a net gain of three-quarters of a point. For the first time in some days St. Louis Transit showed some activity. About 500 shares of the stock sold up to 19⅝. It closed with practically no change, at 19⅜ bid. The bonds were quiet.

***

ELECTRIC VEHICLE sold at the lowest price recently recorded for the stock, and as low as it has sold since the first advance, which occurred in the stock about two years ago. Several hundred shares changed hands at 14, and the stock was offered at this price at the end of the day.

***

NEW ENGLAND TRANSPORTATION was the only one of the group that showed any activity. It was traded in to the extent of about 500 shares at 3, a slight advance over recent prices.

***

ROYAL BAKING POWDER preferred was in some demand, and sold to the extent of 300 shares at 95. It closed at 94½ bid.

***

PITTSBURG, BESSEMER AND LAKE ERIE was fairly active at 30¼ and 30⅝. For the past few days the stock has been strong at about these figures.

***

CENTRAL FIREWORKS has recently shown considerable strength, and within the last few days both issues have advanced to the best prices on record. A report of the company's business for the past year, secured yesterday, shows that the business of the company for 1900, as shown in the gross as well as in the net earnings, was much in excess of that for the year 1899. The demand for the company's product, the largest in its history, obliged three of the subsidiary companies to enlarge their factories. The report shows that the company's surplus earnings at the end of the year, after the payment of all dividends, amounted to $200,184.72, out of which amount the dividends for the current year, requiring about $117,000, will be paid. A semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent. on the preferred stock and one of 1 per cent. on the common have recently been declared and are payable Feb. 9.

***

INTERNATIONAL SILVER preferred at the close jumped up to 47, an advance of about 5 points over the bid quoted for some days past. Odd lots sold as high as 47½.

***

TWO LAWYERS PUNISHED.

Father and Son Condemned to Pay Fines of $250 Each for Contempt.

Two lawyers were yesterday adjudged in contempt of the Supreme Court, and unless they each pay a fine of $250 they will have to go to jail. They have, however, thirty days in which to appeal to the Appellate Division. The lawyers are Joseph and William Martin, father and son, and the Justice declaring them in contempt is Justice Leventritt.

The trouble grew out of a receivership of the Order of Chosen Friends, an assessment insurance society. The Martins were attorneys for Samuel Popper, who asked for a receiver in the Supreme Court of New York County. Justice Leventritt appointed the receiver, and the next day the lawyers went before Justice Maddox in Brooklyn and had the action discontinued. A day later they appeared before Justice Smith, in Nassau County, and there the son, William Martin, was appointed receiver. The receiver appointed in New York County objected, and on the order of Justice Leventritt the other proceedings were declared not proper.

When the lawyers appeared before Justice Leventritt yesterday, they asked leave to file affidavits setting forth their position in the matter. The Justice declined to receive the affidavits, which were offered for the purpose of establishing the record on appeal.

Joseph Martin said it was his opinion that the punishment should be considered in the light of surrounding circumstances, and therefore there should be a full review of the proceedings before Justices Maddox and Smith, with a view to having the record properly before the Appellate Division.

"The proceedings before them," Justice Leventritt said, "relate only to matters which transpired subsequently, and cannot therefore affect the contempt which arose in this court."

MAN AND WIFE ARRAIGNED.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartol Alleged to Have Committed Several Burglaries.

Louis and Margaret Bartol, man and wife, were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields on a charge of burglary alleged to have been committed in Washington, D. C. The pair had been arrested on Monday by detectives of the Central Office. The police of Washington sent word here on Saturday that numerous burglaries had been committed in that city, and that there was every reason to believe that the perpetrators, a man and woman, had come here. A description of them was sent to Capt. Titus, and Detectives Boyle and Charlton were put on the case. Among the numerous victims of the thieves was Charles D. Stott of 311 Eighth Street, from whose place twenty-seven fountain pens were stolen. On Monday afternoon the detectives saw a woman trying to pawn a fountain pen in a pawnshop on Sixth Avenue. She was arrested and taken to Police Headquarters, where she admitted her identity. Bartol was arrested in the evening at the rooms in which the couple had been stopping.

The detectives say that Bartol and his wife have been traveling over the country passing as Galveston flood sufferers, and it is thought that a number of burglaries can be traced to them. The woman is of more than ordinary intelligence and speaks several languages.

Bartol and his wife waived examination and said they were willing to go back to Washington without a contest. They were taken back to Ludlow Street jail and will be sent to Washington to-morrow.

TRIED TO KILL HER BROTHER.

Minnie Seibert, While Insane, Attempted to Cut His Throat.

After brooding for three months over the death of her mother, Minnie Seibert, thirty-five years old, was seized with a fit of insanity early yesterday morning at her home and made a desperate effort to kill her brother Gustave, an engraver, with whom she lived at 2 Hall Place, the little street alongside the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory.

Since the death of their mother Gustave has had constantly to cheer his sister, who seemed mentally to be wasting away with grief over their affliction. Shortly after midnight yesterday morning he thought he heard his sister crying. He got up and went to her, to find her in one of the rooms taking his razor from a bureau drawer.

She turned upon him fiercely and before he could defend himself she had drawn the razor across his throat. He fell in a kind of faint, but recovered before she could resome the attack, and a desperate struggle ensued in the semi-darkness. The hands and faces of both became slippery with blood from the brother's throat as they fought about the room, the woman in a kind of hysteria, laughing and fighting like a wild animal. The brother finally got possession of the weapon, but, finding that he could not subdue his sister, shouted as loudly as he could for the police.

A neighbor heard him cry, and ran with the alarm to the 47th Street Station. Policeman Burke went to the house, and the two men with difficult subdued the madwoman and she was taken to Bellevue in a straitjacket. The brother, although suffering from shock and loss of blood, was not dangerously hurt.

The Auction Room.

The sale of properties belonging to the estate of the late Philip Herrman, conducted yesterday by Auctioneer Bryan L. Kennelly, attracted a large crowd to the salesroom and was successful in that the entire offering was disposed of at satisfactory figures.

Judging by the number of those who remained to bid on the Hoboken lots which were also included under the auctioneer's announcement, that part of the sale attracted fully as much attention as did those parcels owned by the estate in Manhattan. The Hoboken lots comprised the entire block bounded by Park and Willow Avenues, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets. P. Skelly bought the southeast corner of Fourteenth Street and Willow Avenue, 20 by 95, for $4,500. Two adjoining lots on Fourteenth Street went to the same buyer for a total of $4,500, and two on Willow Avenue for $1,100 each. The southwest corner of Park Avenue and Fourteenth Street, 20 by 95, brought $5,100. Other inside lots on Willow Avenue were struck down for $1,100 each, and on Park Avenue for $1,350 each. The total amount realized from the sale was $317,350.

Detailed results of this and yesterday's other auction offerings will be found below:

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyance should therefore show the true consideration:

JENNIE BOSSCHIETER'S SLAYERS SENTENCED

Thirty Years at Hard Labor for McAlister, Death, and Campbell.

Fifteen Years for Kerr, Despite Influential Petition on His Behalf—Prisoners Issue a Statement to the Public.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 29.—Walter McAlister, William A. Death, and Andrew J. Campbell, convicted of murder in the second degree in connection with the death of Jennie Bosschieter, were sentenced this morning to thirty years each in State prison, and to this sentence Judge Dixon added hard labor. George J. Kerr, whose plea of non vult to the charge of criminal assault was accepted yesterday, and who thus escaped trial on the charge of murder, was at the same time sentenced to fifteen years in the State prison, and again Judge Dixon added the words "with hard labor." These three words mean that each of the men will have to work as laborers, and deprive them of the chance of securing clerkships in the prison, which trusty convicts are allowed to fill.

The dingy little courtroom was quickly filled when the doors were thrown open shortly before 10 o'clock, and among the spectators were nearly all the jurors who had sat upon the trial of McAlister, Death, and Campbell. Just before the proceedings began Mr. and Mrs. Bosschieter entered with their little son, Johnnie, and took their seats in the centre aisle. Mrs. Bosschieter was dressed in deep mourning.

Judge Jonathan Dixon, always prompt and stern, took his seat upon the bench a few minutes after 10 o'clock, and at 10:07 the four prisoners were marched in, handcuffed, two by two. They were very pale, their eyes were sunken, and Kerr looked as though he had been weeping. They walked straight to the seats that had been prepared for them, without looking to the right or left. Kerr took a seat near McAlister. Prosecutor Emley sat at the table he occupied during the trial, but had nothing to say during the whole proceedings. Lawyers Michael Dunn, Hoffman, and Scott of the prisoners' counsel and Judge Kerr, a brother of the prisoner and one of his counsel, sat near their clients.

Lawyers Dunn and Hoffman opened the proceedings with earnest pleas for leniency. During their addresses McAlister, Death, and Campbell kept their eyes anxiously riveted upon the impassive face of the Judge. Kerr sat with his gaze fixed upon the floor, a picture of hopeless misery. He had heard Judge Dixon's scathing denunciation of himself and his companions yesterday, and knew there was no hope.

In the case of Campbell Mr. Dunn said he wished to introduce a petition signed by 123 business men of Paterson, and he produced the document and read it to the court. It represented that the signers had known Campbell for years, and that previous to this affair he had always borne a good reputation. On account of the death of his father he had to go to work early in life in order to support his family, and he had worked hard and won the respect and trust of his employers. He had always been of good character and had not been inclined to associate with those who were bad. The petitioners prayed that he might receive a sentence that would allow him to serve his term of punishment and soon come out into the world again to become a good man. Among the signatures were those of Mayor John Hinchliffe, State Senator Wood McKee, City Controller John Donaghue, Tax Receiver Chester D. Ely, Assistant Tax Receiver Charles May, Secretary of the Board of Education Charles Ridgway, Secretary of the Board of Health James McNair, Assistant City Controller James Parker, and Dr. F. J. Van Nordt.

Judge Dixon listened patiently to all the lawyers had to say, and then gave the signal for McAlister, Death, and Campbell to stand up, which they did.

THE JUDGE'S WORDS.

In passing sentence, the Judge spoke in a low, solemn, and impressive tone of voice, and at times seemed to show some emotion, but these times were when he was alluding to the dead girl and her pitiable fate. He said:

"You stand convicted of the crime of murder in the second degree. The crime of which the evidence proved you guilty was murder in the first degree, for you killed Jennie Bosschieter by administering poison to her for the purpose of committing an assault. From time immemorial the legal penalty for a crime of that nature has been death, but the leniency of the jury in the exercise of their lawful authority has saved you from the gallows, and no further leniency can be expected in this tribunal, whose proper function is not to make the laws, nor to carry out personal sentiment, but to administer the laws as they are framed.

"It is true that the sentence which I am about to pronounce will destroy your lives, it will obliterate every prospect that once, perhaps, was so bright before you, of an honorable existence among your fellows, and all for the deeds of that dreadful night. I cannot make distinction among you, for I am not to punish or reward you for your previous conduct, but for this crime of which you are convicted, and for which action is sentence to be imposed, and I cannot say that in the commission of that offense there was any difference among you.

"I trust, therefore, that the fearful consequence of that awful night may help to teach the young men and the young women of this community that, no matter what may be their ambition, no matter what may be their intellectual qualities, they cannot hope for secure happiness outside of the paths of virtue and honor.

"The judgment of the Court is that you shall each be imprisoned at hard labor in the State Prison for the term of thirty years."

There was an audible sigh in the courtroom, but nothing else to break the absolute silence which obtained when Justice Dixon ceased to speak. The three did not move a muscle when sentenced, and then sat down in a sigh from their counsel.

The Judge then ordered Kerr to stand up, and resumed:

"The evidence adduced in this case did not warrant the conclusion that you were implicated in the administration of the drug, but it was convincing that you participated in the ravishment of Jennie Bosschieter; and in the commission of that offense there is one aspect of the case that makes your conduct worse than that of your associates, for you were older, and you had more obligations to virtue—a wife worthy of your highest and purest affection, children whose welfare should have been your constant concern—but you disregarded the lessons of experience; you broke the ties that bound you to home; you permitted yourself to drift away from the moorings of domestic life and love, and now you are upon the rocks of vice and crime.

"And such a crime! No wonder that its revelations shocked the community. No wonder that its revelations stirred in every manly and every womanly heart intense indignation. That pitiless ride, that dastardly outrage! And then, when the poor victim of lust and murder lay dead, you cast her by the roadside, reckless whether her fair form should first be visited by gentle human hands or by fangs of beasts. Poor Jennie Bosschieter! She did not deserve that fate.

"And now how gladly would I spare your relatives the grief that they endure, but human wisdom has not yet devised a plan whereby the guilty may be adequately punished and the innocent saved from sorrow. In the exercise of my official duty I cannot withhold from so heinous an offense any measure of that personal suffering which the sentence of the law must bring to you.

"The judgment of the Court, then, is that you be imprisoned at hard labor in the State prison for the term of fifteen years."

Kerr had stood with head bent and stooping shoulders while the Judge was speaking. When sentence had been pronounced he sank into his seat in a state verging on collapse. The Judge remanded the prisoners, and they arose and were led away to jail. The three younger men walked with firm steps and seemed unmoved. Kerr tottered as he arose, but braced up in a moment and followed the others out of the room. As they passed her seat in the centre aisle Mrs. Bosschieter glared at them scornfully.

When the men reached the jail each had a friend waiting; James McAlister, father of Walter; Judge John F. Kerr, brother of George; Mrs. William Death, William Death, Sr., and Mrs. James Sigler, sister of Campbell. The friends evidently expected the men would collapse and need sympathy, but in the words of Constable O'Neil they kept "a stiff upper lip" and seemed to take rather unkindly to the presence of their friends, as they seemed to want to be alone.

DEATH'S WIFE WILL STAND BY HIM.

Mrs. Death and Mrs. Sigler were crying bitterly when they came out. Mrs. Death was told of a bill introduced at Trenton today under which she can, if it becomes a law, obtain a divorce. When its provisions were explained to her she was indignant and said:

"It is a shame. I have already said that I believe Will innocent and refuse to desert him. I will stick to him because I love him and because I do not believe he had anything to do with any of the things he is blamed for."

The bill referred to provides that conviction of a felony, followed by a sentence of two years' imprisonment or more, shall constitute a cause of divorce against the offending party.

The prisoners shortly after being sentenced sent the following signed statement to an evening paper here for publication:

We are resigned to our fate and propose to face the future, dark as it is, with brave hearts. We have felt heretofore that it was useless to say anything to relieve our situation, as the storm of public indignation was so violent that anything said by us would have been misinterpreted. We have no resentment and no criticism, but we want to thank the newspapers of Paterson for their sense of fairness and absence of malice in dealing with this case.

We could say many things that would tend to abate the public indignation, but we propose to bear our punishment in silence. We propose to earn the three days a month which the law remits for good behavior in State's prison, and we hope and pray the community will suspend final judgment until, by good conduct and proper lives, we will earn their commendation.

We are content to suffer ourselves, but we keenly feel the awful sorrow brought upon our families and friends who have stood so nobly by us through it all. Never at any time was there any ill-feeling between ourselves, and we never had occasion to say things about each other in an effort to secure individual advantages.

We feel that we have been victims to a great extent in the unreasoning outside opinion, which was based upon the wild and inflammatory reports printed in the metropolitan papers to satisfy a morbid taste. We are thankful to the counsel in our cases—Francis Scott, Michael Dunn, John W. Harding, John F. Kerr, and Judge Hoffman—who made every sacrifice at the peril of their reputations and even of their lives, and stood nobly by us.

WALTER C. McALISTER,
GEORGE J. KERR,
ANDREW J. CAMPBELL,
WILLIAM A. DEATH.

It is quite probable that the four men will be taken to Trenton on Thursday or Friday to enter upon their terms of imprisonment. They must be removed from the jail within ten days, but not within forty-eight hours after sentence. The law allows this time in order to enable the prisoners to settle up their affairs.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 29.—The officials at the New Jersey State Prison said tonight, in answer to an inquiry, that the thirty-year sentences of McAlister, Campbell, and Death will be reduced by good behavior to twenty years, and that Kerr's sentence will be reduced to eleven years. The time off for good behavior is arranged on a sliding scale and increases each year.

TROUBLE AT SANDY HOOK.

Officer Complains of Pilotboats and the Commissioner's Retort.

There has been more sharp correspondence between Capt. E. B. Babbitt of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, who is the commanding officer of the Sandy Hook proving ground at Fort Hancock, and the New York and Sandy Hook Pilot Commissioners. The matter was a subject of debate at the regular weekly meeting of the Pilot Commissioners yesterday afternoon.

Capt. Babbitt complains in his letters that the Sandy Hook pilot station boat New York and the small sailing pilotboats owned by the New York and Sandy Hook Pilots' Association and others owned and operated by the New Jersey and Sandy Hook Pilots' Association continually trespass on the proving grounds, which are south and west of the Scotland Lightship, and that in consequence of this intrusion along the usual course of incoming Southern steamers United States gunners are frequently compelled to remain idle and inactive until some vessel shall have passed out of the range of the guns. This, Capt. Babbitt maintains, is a hardship, owing to the heat in Summer and the cold and damp in Winter, as the men are unprotected from the weather.

In reply the Pilot Commissioners assure Capt. Babbitt that the pilots have frequently been requested to keep away from the proving grounds as much as possible, but that it is impossible to keep off the grounds all the time, as foreign vessels frequently hoist a signal asking for a pilot. In that event the pilotboat must respond, and put a pilot aboard the incoming vessel, even though such vessel may be within range of the guns and on the course of the range.

The Pilot Commissioners have suggested that the Government erect an observation tower at or near Sandy Hook or Fort Hancock, and thereupon hoist signals which the pilots may see when vessels need the services of a pilot.

Capt. Babbitt has replied that he thinks favorably of the erection of such a tower of observation, and that the Government may build one in the near future. In the meantime he keeps sending in complaints that pilotboats cruising south for five miles off the Scotland Light and nine miles west cause great inconvenience and loss of time and opportunity of proving Uncle Sam's guns.

In reply to this the Pilot Commissioners assert that the jurisdiction of the United States or of any other maritime nation is limited to a marine league, or three nautical miles, and add that Uncle Sam's proving grounds practically range over the high seas.

LEGAL NOTES.

USURY.—Jacob Greenbaum, in June, 1898, gave Pauline Rosenmeyer a six months' note for $500, and as security for the loan made an assignment of his interest in certain real estate. This assignment was recorded as a mortgage, and the loan was extended from time to time. In March, 1899, a payment of a certain sum was made, and a note for $375 and interest, due in six months, was given for the amount said to be unpaid. Then, the note not having been paid, an action was begun to foreclose the mortgage. The defense was set up that the original loan was usurious and that when the three-hundred-and-seventy-five-dollar note became due a tender was made of the amount and was refused. Mrs. Rosenmeyer was given judgment at Special Term, upon the ground that she was unaware of the usurious character of the transaction, which had been had with her son, Joseph. It was not disputed, however, that only $462 was received for the five-hundred-dollar note. The Appellate Division has now reversed the judgment, saying, by Justice Rumsey, that it appeared the money was not Mrs. Rosenmeyer's, but belonged to her son, who made the loan and took the usury. Although the loan was made in the name of Mrs. Rosenmeyer, the only conclusion to be reached was that she was a mere figurehead, the actual party in interest being her son, Joseph. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the note was usurious and void.

HABEAS CORPUS.—The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, has sustained the decision of the Special Term dismissing the habeas corpus proceedings instituted by Mrs. Elizabeth Baxter, who charged that Alfred T. Baxter was restraining his brother, Charles H. Baxter, her husband, of his liberty. The brother, Alfred, set up that his brother Charles was in Nichols, Tioga County, where he went of his own free will, to secure a residence, he said, after he was told by his wife to go away and not return until he could provide her a home. He told his brother, Alfred said, that he had been ordered to produce him in court, but he absolutely refused to come, though told his expenses would be paid. Justice Woodward, giving the opinion of the Court, holds that the law was fully satisfied when Alfred Baxter had placed before the court facts from which it might properly determine that the person was not restrained of his liberty. It appeared that Charles Baxter was not only not in the custody or control of his brother, but that he had not been in his custody or in any other person's, and the return not being traversed or contradicted in any manner, must be taken as true. Charles Baxter not having been deprived of his liberty, the Court was without jurisdiction to issue a warrant of attachment, which was intended merely as an aid to the Court in rendering the writ effectual. The respondent had made return to the writ in good faith, and an attachment should never be granted except in those cases in which the Court was satisfied that the respondent had been willfully disobedient or in contempt.

MR. GRUBER ASSAILS METROPOLITAN ROAD

Declares that a Poor Man Has No Show Against It.

Objecting to an Unsustained Challenge of a Company Employe as Juror, He Gets a Dismissal.

A rather sensational discontinuance of an action for $10,000 damages against the Metropolitan Street Railway Company occurred before Justice MacLean in the Supreme Court yesterday. The whole trouble arose over the twelfth juror called, who was an employe of the company. Abraham Gruber appeared as counsel for Mrs. Elizabeth Dillon, who was suing to recover damages on the grounds that about a year ago her husband was run over by a car belonging to the defendant company and so injured that he eventually died.

The case was called before Justice MacLean, and there had been a long fight over the selection of a jury. Mr. Gruber had exhausted five of his six peremptory challenges when David Mooney was called into the box as the twelfth juror.

"What is your business, Mr. Mooney?" asked Mr. Gruber.

"I am in the produce business at 175 Chambers Street."

"Do you know anybody connected with the defendant company?"

"I do. I have a son who is employed as a conductor for the Metropolitan Street Railroad Company."

Mr. Gruber challenged Mr. Mooney, and he was excused. This exhausted Mr. Gruber's challenges.

Charles B. Wesley was the next talesman.

"What is your business?" asked Mr. Gruber.

"I am in the railroad business," replied Mr. Wesley.

"And by whom are you employed?"

"The Metropolitan Street Railroad Company."

"In what capacity?"

"As a track foreman."

Mr. Gruber turned to the Court and asked that Mr. Wesley be excused. This, however, was denied by Justice MacLean.

"But, your Honor—" began Mr. Gruber.

"Proceed with the trial," said Justice MacLean.

Mr. Gruber continued questioning Wesley, and brought out the fact that he had been employed on various street railways in this city for nineteen years.

Mr. Gruber once more appealed to Justice MacLean to dismiss Mr. Wesley from the jury box. He challenged Wesley first on the ground of cause, but Justice MacLean refused to entertain the challenge.

"Then I challenge this juror on the ground of favor and prejudice," said Mr. Gruber.

"And I decline to entertain the challenge," said the Justice.

In his extremity Mr. Gruber appealed to Lawyer George M. Pinney, who appeared on behalf of the defendant company. He asked Mr. Pinney to challenge the protected juror, saying that it was manifestly unfair that he should act. Mr. Pinney refused to do as requested.

After considerable argument, Mr. Gruber said: "I will then ask for a dismissal of the complaint in this case."

Acting upon Mr. Gruber's request, Justice MacLean dismissed the complaint. Then the lawyer announced that he would begin a new action later.

After the case had been discontinued Mr. Gruber said to a number of reporters:

"You may say for me, and I stand prepared to maintain my statement at any time, that a poor man has absolutely no show in an action against the Metropolitan Street Railway Company in this city. This man Wesley has been a witness in five accident cases and has always testified for the company.

"God knows how many verdicts for the railway company have been rendered by its employes, who have been on juries unknown to the plaintiffs. In this case the company showed a willingness to have Wesley on the jury, as it knew he was an employe. There are many other things that ought to come out in this accident case, but I am not going to take any action at present. I believe in fighting one mountain lion at a time. I will say that there is no reform needed more in New York City than the reform in trying damage cases against the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

"The company maintains a regular traveling club which is ahead of that of any tourists' agency. The purpose of this club is to take witnesses of plaintiffs who ought to be in New York City to some place of interest in other parts of the United States.

"As to not think that the law ought to be amended to prevent employes serving on juries in cases in which the employer is interested, as such an amendment ought not to be necessary in a civilized community."

Justice McLean, when asked to say something about Mr. Gruber's comments, said:

"It is very kind of the reporters to afford me an opportunity to reply, but I really must decline to discuss the matter. Mr. Gruber is a really clever—in fact, a very clever—lawyer. I have nothing further to say."

John T. Little, Jr., of counsel for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, gave out the following statement:

"The whole trouble with Mr. Gruber was that he had not properly prepared his case, and that he had not properly informed himself about the jurors. Mr. Gruber in his charges is acting from information which he obtained from a discharged employe of our road. This information is false and is not worth what he paid for it."

Later yesterday Wesley was again called as a juror in an action for damages against the company. This was in the action of Flora Stone, who was suing for $10,000 damages. After the usual questions as to employment, Gustave A. Rogers, counsel for Miss Stone, asked Justice MacLean to excuse the juror on the same grounds presented by Mr. Gruber. The Justice refused to do this, and then Mr. Rogers used his right of peremptory challenge.

RUSH TO ADOPT FOUNDLINGS.

Only Twenty-eight Babies Can Be Given Away, and of These Two Are Colored.

Scores of would-be foster parents made fruitless journeys to the Randall's Island Infant Hospital yesterday, as a result of the announcement last week that there were a large number of babies there to be given away to worthy families. This notice was issued by George Blair, Superintendent of the Outdoor Poor, and a great crowd of applicants at once besieged his office, near Bellevue Hospital, and, in addition, his mail was heavy with written requests for little ones.

An erroneous report was spread that there were 200 babies to be given away. There are only about 175 in the whole institution, and all but 28 of these are destitute children with known parents who cannot be surrendered save by lengthy process of law. Of the foundlings, 26 are Roman Catholics, and can only be given to families of that faith. The other two are colored children, and these no one seems anxious to adopt. The preponderance of Catholic babies is explained by the custom of letting the Roman Catholic priest and the Episcopalian chaplain take turns in baptizing the foundlings, in the order in which they arrive. The State Aid Society takes charge of the Protestant babies.

The names of the most promising applicants were set down opposite the names of the babies, and yesterday three examiners from Mr. Blair's bureau went out to investigate. None of the babies will be given to persons residing outside of the State, and all will be visited at least once in three months by Mr. Blair's agents.

One of the doctors at the institution said yesterday that the women showed little judgment in selecting the babies. "They seemed to judge them only by their faces. They didn't even look at their bodies or limbs," he said.

BROOKLYN DEMOCRATS OPPOSE M'LAUGHLIN

Against "Willoughby Street" and Tammany Hall.

Protest Against Men Being Hounded Who Refuse to Wear the Collar of the Boss.

A meeting of Brooklyn Democrats opposed to the Willoughby Street and Tammany Hall organizations was held last night in the Real Estate Exchange Building on Montague Street. The session was held behind closed doors, but among those known to be present were ex-Senator M. J. Coffey, Warden Patrick Hayes of the penitentiary, ex-Assemblyman Otto Kempner, Gottfried Westermacher, Rufus L. Scott, James C. Church, Walter Durack, and other well-known Democrats, who have long opposed the rule of Hugh McLaughlin.

The organization decided to adopt the name of the Brooklyn Democracy. The principal business done last night was the preparation of a statement of the principles and purposes of the organization and the election of an Executive Committee, of which Mr. Scott was made Chairman. The following gentlemen constitute the Executive Committee:

First District—Edmund R. Terry.	Thirteenth—J. Flynn.
Second—T. J. Bauman.	Fourteenth—J. M. Harding.
Third—E. J. Gough.	Fifteenth—H. Newman.
Fourth—Morton Jhvis.	Sixteenth—N. S. Jonas.
Fifth—Patrick Hayes.	Seventeenth—R. L. Scott
Sixth—Henry Hamm.	Eighteenth—H. M. Sullivan.
Seventh—W. H. Durack.	Nineteenth—G. Westermacher.
Eighth—J. F. Pelford.	Twentieth—O. Kempner.
Ninth—M. J. Coffey.	Twenty-first—George C. Schultz.
Tenth—Ralph Ryan.
Eleventh—J. C. Church.
Twelfth—John T. Willoughby.

This committee will arrange for the election of a County Committee of 518 members.

All of those present signed a statement which declares, among other things, that:

The present gross mismanagement of the Municipal Government of the City of New York by Tammany Hall and its annex, "Willoughby Street," demands the serious and combined effort of citizens, without regard to party, to put an end to the existing misrule, vice, and corruption for which those so-called Democratic machines are wholly responsible.

We believe that the city Government should be conducted solely on business principles, and that good citizenship requires the support at the polls of only such candidates for office as are capable, honest, and pledged to a purely nonpartisan and business administration of our city's affairs. We further believe that many Democrats in Kings County will take their stand in the coming city campaign with an independent Democratic organization pledged to the principles above set forth.

We pledge ourselves to mutual co-operation in the formation and work of said organization for the municipal campaign of 1901.

In a statement of principles the Brooklyn Democracy declare among other things that:

The Democratic organization of Kings County presents an intolerable situation. It has fallen under the demoralizing control of a few politicians, who care nothing about Democratic principles or the public welfare, but who devote their energies solely to the pursuit of selfish ends. In the exercise of their usurped functions as leaders they have reduced the Democratic masses of Brooklyn to a condition of hopeless political bondage. Hiding behind the hollow forms of the party machinery, they have dictated nominations and appointments regardless of the popular will or the public interests. Freedom of speech was strangled, and conventions were turned into farcical mockeries.

No man was selected for official preference who did not consent to surrender his political soul to their keeping. Men who dared to express their honest convictions were hounded out of the party and stigmatized as traitors. They had no room in their organization for any Democrat who refused to wear the collar of the boss and to become his blind and obedient tool. Such is the degrading situation that to-day confronts over 180,000 Democratic voters in Brooklyn.

The effect of this condition of party affairs has been demoralizing and disastrous in the highest degree. Moreover, the Willoughby Street machine, through its alliance with Tammany Hall, has contributed its full share toward the defeat of the Democratic Party in State and Nation. These two boss-ridden organizations have formed an irrevocable and unbreakable compact for the sake of spoils, and their joint operations have borne logical fruit in the general wreck of the Democracy in the last election.

More than all, the crying abuses in our municipal administration—against which the people are now rising in righteous wrath—owe their existence in a large measure to the election of puppet officials—sponsored by the allied Democratic bosses of Manhattan and Brooklyn—who prostituted their public trusts in the interest of their political creators.

The "Brooklyn Democracy" declares it will be its aim to reform these existing abuses and then adopted a platform declaring for a business administration of local affairs, home rule and local autonomy, the adoption of the recommendations of the Charter Revision Commission, approved educational methods and adequate school accommodations, reasonable civil service laws, equal taxation, municipal ownership of public utilities, an ample supply of pure water, public baths, the protection of labor as well as capital, clean and well paved streets, necessary public improvements, adequate transit facilities with free transfers at all intersecting points, government by the people through a system of direct nominations by the people, and honesty and economy in public affairs, and the election of intelligent and capable officials who shall serve their real masters, the people.

HANDCAR MAN FATALLY HURT.

Struck by a Lump of Coal That Fell from Passing Locomotive.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT JERVIS, N. J., Jan. 30.—Erie passenger train No. 38 was traveling east at the rate of thirty miles an hour this morning, and a short distance east of Lordville, N. Y., met a handcar coming in the opposite direction on the next track. The handcar was operated by two trackmen, Frank Hannon and Charles Becarchee.

Just as the train passed the car a large lump of coal fell from the locomotive tender and struck Becarchee in the left temple. He was knocked to the ground, fatally hurt. The coal bounded from Becarchee's face and struck Hannon, severely injuring his face and right eye.

ANIMALS ROASTED TO DEATH.

$400,000 Worth in a Baltimore "Zoo" Perish by Fire.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30.—With pitiful screams of fright and groans of intense pain the seventy-five or more animals of all descriptions confined in cages at Frank C. Bostock's "zoo," which was in Winter quarters in the old Cyclorama Building, in this city, were roasted or burned to death to-night. The fire probably originated from a badly insulated electric light wire on the outside of the building.

The flames spread so rapidly that it was impossible for the attendants to rescue the helpless animals, and, with the exception of one elephant, one camel, two donkeys, and a pack of hounds, the entire herd was lost.

Mr. Bostock estimates his loss on animals at about $400,000. The building, which was of wood, could probably be duplicated for $15,000 or $20,000.

BIG RAILROAD DEAL.

Southern Secures the Mobile and Ohio and Now Has a Direct Short Line to the Gulf.

Official announcement was made late yesterday afternoon that the Southern Railway Company had secured control of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, through ownership of a majority of the general mortgage bonds, in which under their terms the voting control of the road is vested. The change in control is, however, accomplished with the full co-operation of the stockholders. Wall Street has been convinced for some days that a change in the control of the road was impending and various guesses were made as to the probable purchasers of the Mobile and Ohio securities.

It now appears that the Southern Railway Company made an offer which was yesterday recommended for adoption by the Board of Directors of the Mobile and Ohio. The plan is also recommended by J. P. Morgan & Co., A. Iselin & Co., and F. W. Whitridge, who represent the various large interests in the two railroads.

The offer is outlined in the following circular issued by the Southern Railway Company:

In exchange for general mortgage 4 per cent. bonds of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, with coupon of March, 1901, coupon, but with all subsequent coupons attached, so deposited in transferable form, (in case not less than a majority thereof shall be deposited,) the Southern Railway Company will issue its own collateral trust gold bonds for the same amount, principal and interest payable on the same dates, and secured by a pledge of all said general mortgage bonds acquired or owned by the said Southern Railway Company.

For shares of stock of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company deposited in transferable form on or before March 1 next, (in case not less than a majority of the said general mortgage bonds also shall have been so deposited,) the Southern Railway Company will receive the same and will make provision for the issue of corresponding stock trust certificates, entitling the holder to receive, perpetually, in gold coin of the United States, in semi-annual instalments, a sum equal to dividends upon the deposited stock from April 1, 1901, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, excepting that such payment for the first year shall be at the rate of 2 per cent. and for the second year at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

The deposits of securities are to be made on or before March 1 next either with J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, or J. S. Morgan & Co., London. In connection with this announcement by the Southern Railway Company J. P. Morgan & Co. stated that [illegible] to [illegible] March 1 next they will receive deposits of the general mortgage bonds and stock of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, the deposit of a considerable amount thereof having already been assured. Upon completion of the specified conditions the firm will deliver the collateral trust bonds and stock trust certificates of the Southern Railway Company, and in due time application will be made for the listing of these issues at the New York Stock Exchange.

President Samuel Spencer of the Southern Railway Company later made the following statement:

"The value of the Mobile and Ohio to the Southern is chiefly in giving to it a direct short line from St. Louis and Cairo to the Gulf.

"The terminals of the Mobile and Ohio at Mobile will enable the Southern to develop traffic through that port to an extent not practicable to either of the two lines operated separately, and the terminals of the Southern at East St. Louis will enable the Mobile and Ohio line to develop business at and from the St. Louis gateway to an extent that would have been impossible with the limited terminals heretofore available to the Mobile and Ohio.

"The Mobile and Ohio had previously built a line to the edge of the Birmingham coal and iron district, but without gaining a real entrance. This entrance the Southern can now furnish in the most adequate way without further construction or purchase of terminals."

The Mobile and Ohio Railroad runs from St. Louis, Mo., to Mobile, Ala., and with its branches and leased lines operates 876 miles of road. Its capital stock is $10,000,000, of which $5,320,900 is outstanding and $2,359,100 is in the treasury of the company. The rest has not yet been issued. Its funded debt is $21,556,200.

The control of the road lies with the general mortgage holders.

PASSENGERS IN A PANIC.

Express Train Barely Misses Rear End of a Trolley Car.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 30.—A Broadway trolley car had a narrow escape at the Erie Railroad crossing this morning. The car was full of passengers, and as it approached the crossing it got beyond the control of the motorman and crashed through the gates, which had been lowered for the 9:40 express, which was within a couple of hundred feet of Broadway. The passengers made a rush for the door.

John Girard of Vine Street, a lad about seventeen years of age, was the first to escape. He was carrying a number of ledgers and journals for an expert accountant. The lad fell on the track in front of the train. He sprang up and, at the risk of his life, pulled the books off the track. He was scratched and bruised.

Robert Brown of 445 Broadway, was slightly hurt on the head, and Matthew Pettigrew's knees were skinned. John Crosby was also severely hurt. The express passed not many seconds after the trolley cleared the track and within a few inches of the tailboard.

CLUB FOR HYDE PARK BOYS.

Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt Founds It for Young Men of the Village.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt has taken a great interest in the welfare of the people of Hyde Park ever since she and her husband established their home there six years ago. Christmas festivals and Summer outings for the poor have made Mrs. Vanderbilt's name popular in every household. Her latest charity is the founding of a club for the young men of the village. She has rented a hall in a central location and equipped it with suitable furniture, periodicals, and games, the object being to keep the boys off the streets and out of the saloons.

Already a large number of applications for membership have been received. A nominal charge of 5 cents per week is made to insure interest.

PARDONS A NEW YORKER.

Gov. Crane of Massachusetts Extends Clemency to James Thompson.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Gov. Crane to-day pardoned James Thompson of New York City, who was serving a sentence of fifteen years in the State prison at Charlestown for robbing the Post Office at Webster, Mass., in 1896. Thompson will be liberated to-night, and he will leave for New York at once. Evidence that Thompson never had been in Webster was presented to the Governor.

The crime for which Thompson was sentenced occurred in the Spring of 1896. After a series of similar robberies in the western part of the State, the Post Office at Webster was broken into and a quantity of money and bonds was stolen. Two strangers were seen about the vicinity previous to the night of the crime, and, after a long search, James Thompson and James Ryan, who were arrested in New York City, were identified by persons in Webster as the men seen there.

When Thompson was arrested some of the bonds which were stolen from the safe were found in his possession. He claimed that they were given to him by a woman who was a friend of Ryan's. Some evidence was presented to show that he was in New York on the night of the burglary. It has always been claimed by friends that Thompson was an innocent victim, and that Ryan had shielded himself at Thompson's expense.

MORE KANSAS SALOONS FALL UNDER THE AXE

Twelve Women in Anthony Demolish Four "Joints."

Their Husbands, Sons, and Brothers Act as a Bodyguard While the Work Goes On.

ANTHONY, Kan., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation was outdone here to-day when a band of Woman's Christian Temperance Union women, headed by Mrs. Sheriff of Danville, Kan., completely wrecked the fixtures in four "joints," smashing plate-glass windows and mirrors right and left and turning gallons of liquor into the gutters. The women, who were of the best families in Anthony, were accompanied by their husbands and sons or brothers, who assured protection. No arrests were made, and the hand will, it is said, start out tomorrow on a tour of destruction through Harper County, which is prolific in saloons.

Mrs. Sheriff, who led to-day's raid, is under bond to appear at Danville in April to answer a charge of saloon wrecking preferred against her six weeks ago. Mrs. Sheriff came to Anthony late yesterday and worked all night procuring hatchets and other implements of destruction, and it was 2 o'clock this morning before she had perfected plans for the raid. She enlisted the following women: Mesdames M. J. Davis, William Scott, F. H. Brubaker, Louis Macy, T. G. Hooper, Charles Robinson, John Hickens, John Kendall, J. H. Shelton, and the Misses McKay, Page, Massey, Robinson, and Hixon, all of Anthony. They began their attack shortly after daybreak, taking the saloon keepers and the town officials by surprise.

It was observed by those on the streets that the party was headed for a so-called "joint," and a good-sized crowd soon collected.

The first point of attack was situated in the rear of a drug store. Entrance was effected by a back door. The place contained costly bar fixtures and quite a stock of liquors. The fixtures and cash register were demolished, but the bulk of the liquor was stored out of sight and escaped destruction.

Half a block further on the second scene of the crusade was enacted. The door was locked, but entrance was quickly made with an axe. While part of the women gave attention to the door, others reduced the plate glass front to splinters. Back of the bar was a very heavy plate mirror. This, as well as everything else in sight, was destroyed. The proprietor of the place entered when the smashing process was at its height. He attempted to stop the work and came into collision with the husband bodyguard. A blow on the head with a beer bottle quickly rendered the irate proprietor hors du combat, blood from a deep cut in his scalp mixing with the liquor which flowed in streams over the floor.

Two more "joints" were visited in quick succession. Their furniture was demolished and the stocks of liquor emptied into the gutters. Complete as the work of destruction apparently had been, it was stated that plenty of the prohibited liquids had been stored away in safe places in anticipation of such raids, and that the "joints" were chiefly concerned over the destruction of their fixtures, valued at several thousands of dollars.

After the work of demolition was completed the crusaders held a prayer meeting on the sidewalk and "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was sung with great fervor. The women knelt and prayed within sight of the wreck they had spread. One woman in an impassioned appeal to the Almighty asked that He guide them to other dens of iniquity and direct their footsteps to other rum-cursed towns in Kansas.

This prayer was interpreted to mean that the Anthony women would extend their crusade, and word was hurriedly sent over the telephone wires to adjacent towns by local saloon sympathizers, who wished to warn their fellow-saloon keepers.

No arrests were made, but the Mayor quickly swore in extra police, and the crusaders were placed under strict surveillance. He also preserved the names of the women engaged in to-day's work.

As a sequel to the raid, a number of young men and two or three small boys became reeling drunk. Two of the boys were locked up in the City Jail. During the excitement they had followed the crusaders into the saloons and secured a quantity of whisky, wine, and beer.

Mrs. Sheriff is credited locally with having given Mrs. Nation, who has achieved a widespread reputation in the matter, her first idea for a wrecking crusade against intemperance.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 30.—R. P. McColloch, County Attorney of Harper County, is in Topeka to-day, and appeared surprised at the report of the "joint" smashing at Anthony.

"I have not been able to close the joints' in Harper or Anthony because the city authorities favor them," said he.

"They told me it was none of my business, and I have not made a detective of myself."

Mr. McColloch appeared to be pleased at the course things had taken at his home.

WOMEN WILL HELP MRS. NATION.

Forty-six in Topeka Agree to Follow Wherever She Leads.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation to-day organized a band of forty-six women to follow her leadership and assist in wiping out "joints." The band was organized at a mass meeting for women called by Mrs. Nation and presided over by her, at the Presbyterian Church. Every seat in the house was occupied. After a short talk, Mrs. Nation called for volunteers, and the forty-six women at once signed a paper which pledged them to follow Mrs. Nation wherever she may lead, and do her bidding at a moment's notice.

Mrs. Nation announced that they will proceed regardless of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but will give warning before resorting to violence.

Chief of Police Stahl announced to-night that when Mrs. Nation raided a joint here he would arrest her so as to make a test case. He wants to ascertain if a saloon keeper has any rights under the law, and if his saloon property cannot be protected.

EMULATES MRS. NATION.

Boston Woman Smashes a Saloon, but Gets No Medal for It.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Mary Green, who seemed to be familiar with the methods of Mrs. Carrie Nation of Kansas, wrecked a Cambridge Street barroom last evening, and to-day was sentenced to serve a term at Deer Island.

Mrs. Green not only laid the bartender low with a plate, but also reduced the barware to molecules, shattering several plate-glass mirrors, and drove the frightened patrons of the establishment into the wine cellar.

"I'm Carrie Nation," she yelled, "and I'll leave no rumshop in the town when I get through."

Mrs. Green's imitation of the Kansas reformer was terminated by a policeman, and Judge Wentworth to-day sent her to the House of Correction.

STATUE OF GEN. W. T. SHERMAN

Widow of Carl Rohl Smith, the Sculptor, Asks Artists to Take Up the Unfinished Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—There may be some difficulty and delay attending the effort to complete the statue of Gen. W. T. Sherman, designed by the late Carl Rohl Smith, and to be erected jointly by a monument commission and the Government. Mrs. Smith has issued a card of invitation to sculptors to take up the suspended work, and she explains the opportunity and refers to the conditions under which a sculptor may carry out the contract she holds.

"I am desirous," said the widow of Carl Rohl Smith to-day, "of securing the services of a qualified sculptor who will complete the equestrian statue of Gen. Sherman, designed and partly finished by my late husband. It has become my duty, as the widow of Mr. Carl Rohl Smith, and as the executrix under his will, to complete this monument after his plans and in the spirit of his genius. I have, therefore, invited the assistance of a qualified sculptor, who can appreciate the design of the monument to the great American soldier, to complete it.

"Naturally, I would prefer to secure the assistance of an American sculptor, for the American artist would, of course, be better able to appreciate the American character and, therefore, more competent to carry out the ideas of my husband. I believe that such an American sculptor can be found, for certainly this country, so great in other things, should be no less great in art. I am authorized to do this by the Sherman Statue Commission. And I am inclined to believe that it would require not much more than a year's work to complete the monument.

"I have been told that there are American sculptors who would like to do this work, but who do not care to proffer their services without an invitation from me. Therefore I have announced in the press of the country that I would be pleased to receive such assistance, and I hope to be able soon to accept the services of a qualified man. If I cannot find the man in this country then I must go to Europe for one. But I feel sure, as I have said, that there are American sculptors eminently competent, and an arrangement with one of these I hope to make."

It is probable that there will be some twenty-five sculptors who will pay no attention to this invitation. When designs for this Sherman monument were called for twenty-seven of the most eminent American sculptors submitted designs in competition. These were exhibited in the halls of the War Department. A committee of expert sculptors and architects was asked to pass upon the merits of the designs. They selected four or five out of the number in competition, but the design of Carl Rohl Smith was not included among them. The Monument Commission added the Smith design to the number from which to make a selection, and then selected it. The experts considered the Smith design without sufficient merit to name, and there was widespread professional disgust with the outcome. It is not considered probable that any of the competitors will respond favorably.

TRESPASSED ON WIFE'S GRAVE.

Maine Husband Must Pay Damages Because He Removed the Body—Was in a Lot He Did Not Own.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 30.—A Law Court ruling of general interest was reported today by the Maine full bench in an Androscoggin case. An action of trespass was brought against E. C. Douglass for disturbing the grave of his wife, who was buried in a family lot not his own. The burial was with the consent of the parties owning the lot, but when he desired to remove the remains of his wife he did so without asking the consent of the lot owners.

The Law Court awarded judgment for the plaintiff, and assessed damages at $20. In his rescript of the case Chief Justice Wiswell says:

"A dead body after burial becomes a part of the ground to which it is committed, and an action of trespass may be maintained by the owners of the lot, in possession, against one who disturbs the grave and removes the body, so long at least as the cemetery continues to be used as a place for burial."

ANOTHER TEXAS OIL COMPANY.

To Fight the Standard Oil—Latter Gets the Beaumont Well.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 30.—Another oil company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, filed its charter in the Secretary of State's office here to-day. It is named the American Oil Company, and its principal office is located at Beaumont. Its purpose is to lease lands, prospect for oil, and construct and operate oil pipe lines and reservoirs. This corporation, in connection with other large independent companies that have been organized to conduct oil operations in the State, will oppose the efforts of the Standard Oil Company to gain a footing in the new oil field.

It was learned to-day, however, that the great oil well recently sunk in the Beaumont district, near Taylor's Bayou, has been acquired by the Standard Oil Company. The flow of this well is said to exceed 100 barrels per day, and the quality of oil is of much higher grade than the Lucas well. The oil was struck at a depth of about 100 feet.

SENATOR PARSONS DEAD.

Both Houses at Albany Will Adjourn as a Mark of Respect.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Senator Cornelius R. Parsons died at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon at his residence, after a long illness, from a complication of diseases, aged fifty-eight. The Senator had suffered for years from acute stomach trouble, which increased in violence until the end. He was born in the town of York, Livingston County, May 22, 1842, and in 1867, when but twenty-five years old, was elected a member of the Common Council of this city, and had almost continuously since that time occupied public office in a constantly widening sphere of usefulness.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Both branches of the Legislature will adjourn to-morrow until Monday in respect to the memory of Senator Parsons of Rochester. The seat in the Senate which he occupied has been draped in mourning. On the desk reposes a basket of flowers sent by George W. Aldridge of Rochester, State Committeeman for the district, in which Senator Parsons resided, Charles H. Babcock, and other Rochester friends.

The Senate will hold a memorial service in the morning, and the forty-nine Senators will attend the funeral, which will take place on Friday afternoon. The Assembly will be represented by a delegation of fifteen members. A special train will bear the legislators and other State officials to Rochester on Friday morning.

It also was announced that $6,000 had been received from the family of the late Robert Callender, class of '98, to found a scholarship in the academical department.

EXPERTS DISSECT "AGENT" MARKS'S BILLS

Controller's Report Shows Apparent Overcharges for Supplies.

Specific Instances Where Goods for Fire Department Were Billed Above Open Market Rates.

Controller Coler made public yesterday a report of alleged overcharges by William L. Marks for supplies furnished to the Fire Department. Some of the bills of "Agent" Marks, who, prior to Commissioner Scannell's incumbency, never did one dollar's worth of business with the Fire Department, and since has had a practical monopoly in furnishing engines, hose, trucks, and other equipment, have been held up by Controller Coler on the reports of his experts. The statement contains several specific instances of overcharges that appear to be excessive. The report of the experts of the Finance Department, who went to dozens of firms in the trade and obtained estimates, is to the effect that on bills amounting to $831, the overcharges amount to $302.50.

The report deals with the question of furnishing supplies in the minutest details. Quality, price, manufacture, and original cost are all taken into consideration. There are no allegations in the report except that the city is apparently being charged excess prices for supplies by "Agent" William L. Marks, who for years has been a close personal friend of Commissioner Scanneli, and the statement is made that the bills will not be paid until the courts direct payment.

The question as to payment hinges on the question whether Controller Coler will be able to show fraud. That a "combination" exists through which the Fire Department is charged high prices for supplies was admitted by Mr. Scannell, and also the fact that "Agent" William L. Marks is the representative through whom the "combination" sold nearly all the Fire Department supplies to the city, has been admitted both by Commissioner Scannell and "Agent" Marks.

The report was written by Assistant Deputy Controller Hubert L. Smith. The claim investigated was that of William L. Marks for $831 for supplies furnished between April 23, 1900, and July 24, 1900. A bill of May 24 was for $465, for 500 brass expansion rings at 18 cents each, and 250 brass patches for fire hose at $1.50 each, "appears to be excessive," and the report recommends that Controller Coler refuse payment to William L. Marks.

The reasonable price for 500 brass expansion rings is said to be 8 to 10 cents each, and at the maximum price the experts claim that the city is overcharged $40 on this one item.

The price charged for the brass patches, $1.50, by "Agent" Marks, is alleged to be over three times the price which the city should pay for the goods. The reasonable price, according to the investigation of Controller Coler's experts, is 45 cents each, instead of $1.50, and on the bill of 250 brass patches there is an excess charge of $262.50.

Another excessive charge claimed to have been found is for six fresh-water connections, which "Agent" Marks billed to the city at $15 each. The experts assert that after a searching investigation through all the firms in the trade, the city should not have been charged over $6.25, and that on a bill of $90 the city was overcharged by "Agent" Marks $52.50.

The expansion rings, for which the excessive price of 18 cents is charged the city, are said to be staple goods, kept in all fire department supply houses, at prices ranging from 8 to 10 cents. S. F. Hayward & Co. offered to sell the same article at 10 cents each. M. Donohue offered these to the city at 8 cents. The report shows that one who disturbs the grave and removes the body, so long at least as the cemetery continues to be used as a place for burial."

The Law Court awarded judgment for the plaintiff, and assessed damages at $20. In his rescript of the case Chief Justice Wiswell says:

"A dead body after burial becomes a part of the ground to which it is committed, and an action of trespass may be maintained by the owners of the lot, in possession, against one who disturbs the grave and removes the body, so long at least as the cemetery continues to be used as a place for burial."

TROUBLE OVER RUSSIAN SUGAR.

Demand Made for Increased Duties on Cargo at Philadelphia—Russian Government May Retaliate.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—A cargo of beet sugar from Russia is held up at this port at the instigation of American beet-sugar manufacturers, who have demanded that an increased duty be imposed on the product. The Directors of the National Board of Trade and the National Association of Manufacturers held secret meetings here to-day and determined upon immediate action to try and avert a commercial breach between this country and Russia.

The Imperial Government created a flurry here to-day among those who have tried to avoid trouble in the premises by informing the resident Consul of Russia, W. R. Tucker, that if the extra duty is imposed on the cargo of Russian sugar, prohibitive tariff measures would be instituted throughout European and Asiatic Russia against American-made goods. This caused somewhat of a panic within the circle of those in the secret.

Hurried meetings were called, and such men as Charles H. Cramp, John H. Converse of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Theodore C. Search, and others at the head of great manufacturing establishments held a long conference. It was determined that the managers of these commercial organizations go forthwith to Washington and arrange for a conference with Secretary Gage. The trouble is caused by the demand that the clause of the Dingley law be enforced by which the bounties paid by Russia to sugar exported should be added to the regular tariff duty on beet sugar.

Edward H. Sanborn, manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the Russian Vice Consul, W. R. Tucker, left to-night for Washington to consult with Secretary Gage as to when he will give the committee a hearing.

The claim is made that the Russian Government does not pay bounties on beet sugar. The Consul states that the Russian Government controls the sugar output of the empire and thereby holds the price up to its standard rate. In order to do this the revenue tax on sugar exported at times of overproduction is reduced, and this the beet-sugar men of the United States assert is to all practical purposes a bounty. Secretary Gage will be asked to order the release of the cargo and thereby avoid strained relations between the manufacturers of this country and the Czar's Government.

MR. ALLEN'S FAMILY TROUBLES

He Orders His Son to Take His Two Younger Children Away.

Lydia M. J. Allen of Princeton, N. J., applied to Justice Dugro in the Supreme Court yesterday for a writ of habeas corpus to be directed against Thomas Allen, third, a lawyer of this city. She alleges that Mr. Allen has spirited away her two children, George W. Allen and Whitelaw Reid Allen. The Justice issued the writ and directed that it be returnable to-day.

In her application Mrs. Allen says that she is the wife of George Allen, and lives at Princeton. During the early part of the present month she was called to Boston on business, and while there was taken ill. She at once telegraphed for her sons to come to her, but she received no answer to her message. Her illness continued for some time, and when she got well and returned to Princeton she alleges that she found that Thomas Allen, third, had been there and taken her two sons away, and she claims that he is now secreting them. Both boys are under fourteen years of age.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 30.—The infelicities said to exist between George W. Allen and his wife, Lydia M. J. Allen, who live in a beautiful home on Bayard Avenue, have been the subject of gossip in Princeton for some time.

Now comes the news that Mrs. Allen has instituted proceedings for the recovery of her young son, George W. H. Allen, and Whitelaw Reid Allen, who she alleges, her eldest son, Thomas Allen, 3d, of New York City abducted from their Princeton home. To-night it was learned that Thomas Allen 3d came to Princeton last Saturday and took his two young brothers away with him.

George W. Allen is a prominent business man, and is said to have large interests in the West.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 30.—George W. Allen of Princeton, N. J., who is at the Southern Hotel, where he has been stopping for several days, declares to-night that he had ordered his son, Thomas Allen, third, to take his two children from their mother's keeping because she was not the proper person to have charge of them. He proposes to fight the habeas corpus proceedings in the courts, wiring his attorney yesterday to that effect.

When shown the telegram from New York to-night, announcing that his wife had brought proceedings to recover the children, Mr. Allen was surprised, as it was the first intimation he had of the action.

"Do you expect to file suit for divorce from your wife?" was asked.

"I certainly do, and the principal allegation against her will be habitual drunkenness," was the response. Mr. Allen refused to discuss the matter further.

NEW LAKE TO OCEAN LINE.

Canadian Company Will Be Formed to Operate Steamship Fleets and a Railway.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Jan. 30.—Capt. John D. Keith of this city is in Chicago, perfecting plans for a new transportation line from Chicago to the Atlantic Seaboard. The new line will be called the Canada National Railway and Transportation Company. Capt. Keith will be the heaviest stockholder. He says now that it is practically certain that the Canadian Parliament will grant the charter for the new corporation, which will be an enormous one. It is claimed that the vessels will be running at the end of the present season.

The proposition of the company is to make Chicago and Duluth its two Western terminals, and Montreal the Eastern. It will operate a great fleet of vessels on Lakes Superior and Michigan and the Georgian Bay, a railroad from Collingwood to Toronto, and another fleet of vessels from Toronto to Montreal. At the outset, the company will build six great steamers for the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior end of the line. There will be other vessels of half the size for the Toronto-Montreal end of the line.

The company will plan to erect elevators at both Collingwood and Toronto, so that grain can be kept in storage at either point. It is said that the rich Canadians who are backing this enterprise with Capt. Keith are also contemplating a line of ocean-going steamers.

BILLIARDS ARE THE BEST

Successful Men Tell the Members of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, Bible Class How to Get On.

Some of the country's successful men told the young men of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, Bible class last night of those things which had contributed to their success and sought to impress the lessons upon their younger hearers. The occasion was the first reunion of the honorary members of the Young Men's Bible Class of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. Young Mr. Rockefeller is the leader of the class, and the honorary members were those who on other occasions have addressed the members. Last night the speakers were J. M. Forbush, formerly of this city, but now of Boston, who founded the class; Andrew Carnegie, Colgate Hoyt, Dr. W. W. Keen of Philadelphia, and Charles Miller of Franklin, Penn.

All of the speakers were listened to with rapt attention, and the advice they gave was received with much enthusiasm. Especially was this the fact with the address of Colgate Hoyt, who told the young men how he had washed windows for a hardware firm in Cleveland, and on his father's advice had done the window washing so well that it did not pay the firm to keep him at that sort of work very long. This incident was made the theme, to a large extent, of the addresses of the other speakers, who used it as a text to teach thoroughness in every undertaking.

Mr. Hoyt used for his text "Getting On in the World." He said that capital was the first essential, but he did not agree with those who would substitute the word money for capital. Money, he said, was important, but it was not everything. He said that a young man's capital should consist of five things, and he would put money last among the essentials.

The first essential, Mr. Hoyt said, was character, and the next health. The third was association. "Have friends," he said, "good friends," but he did not like one of those who seek to shove himself ahead through the efforts of his friends in his behalf. One of the best financiers in Wall Street once said to me: 'Business founded on friendship is friendship's ending, but friendship founded on business is friendship assured.'

"Next in the list," said Mr. Hoyt, "I would place credit—the proper kind of credit. Ninety-five per cent. of the business of this country is done on credit, and we cannot get along without it, yet, as I said, it must be of the right kind.

Mr. Hoyt then told of his experience in the hardware business, and how he wanted to quit when he was put to washing windows and the young girls whom he called on saw him at his menial occupation. When he complained to his father, Mr. Hoyt said, he was told that another place would be found for him; but at the same time his father advised him to do the washing, and to do it and all else to the best of his ability. "If you do that," Mr. Hoyt said his father told him, "they won't find it profitable to keep you long at window washing." Mr. Hoyt said he did his best, and washed windows only once after that time. It was a lesson, he said, that he had never forgotten. Mr. Hoyt urged his hearers to have perseverance and thoroughness. "Make few promises," he said, "but keep all of them. Always bear in mind that 'I forgot' is no excuse for neglecting anything."

Mr. Carnegie received an ovation when he arose to speak. Like the preachers, he said, he had divided his subject into two heads—"Amusements for Young Men" and "Friendships of Young Men."

"I am a great believer," said Mr. Carnegie, "in the advantages of amusements, and for recreation I do not think that anything is comparable with a game of chance, a game of backgammon, or a rubber of whist," he hastened to add. "It rests the brain and the body, too. A game of chance causes surprises and stimulates the gray matter. Draughts or chess are more contests of skill, and are never so good as a game of cards. Billiards are best of all. The game not alone gives exercise, but it has in it, too, the element of chance. I know that, because some nights I can discount my sister-in-law, and the next night she beats me with ease. That stimulates action, because, you know, it is rather hard to be beaten by a woman.

"But while I am speaking on games of chance I want to say that there is nothing so debasing as wagering money on them—gambling. It is that which demoralizes. It is the effort to get something for nothing, even from a friend, and there is honest stimulus enough in the game itself without adding to it that which is debasing.

"Then there are the theatres, the concerts, and the opera. I attach great importance to the theatre. I'll never forget the first performance I ever witnessed. It was in Pittsburg, and we messenger boys were allowed to squeeze into one of the galleries when we happened to arrive at the theatre with a message for the manager after the show had commenced, and it was surprising how few messages were ever delivered at the theatre before the curtain rose. I sat enthralled, boy as I was, that night when I heard the beautiful lines of Shakespeare, and it was not long before I had a copy of that book and was reading it.

"But there are plays and plays. Lately there has been entirely too much in them about the woman with the past. There may be one play in ten of the latter-day sort that a man might not be ashamed to sit through, but hardly more; but when there are Shakespearean productions, operas by Sullivan, or of the grand opera school of fine concerts, I should advise every young man to see all of them he can."

In speaking of physical exercise Mr. Carnegie advised baseball and lawn tennis and golf. He did not approve of football, he said, which allowed one man to struggle with another when he was down. Golf, he spoke of enthusiastically, and said that next to the Shorter Catechism it was the finest thing that Scotland had given to the world. Mr. Carnegie then told some jokes about the game, among which was one told on the farmer, who, on coming to a fence, stumbled. "Well, there's one good thing about that game; a man don't have to play it." The happiest homes in old age, Mr. Carnegie said, were those in which games of chance were played.

Mr. Carnegie spoke feelingly on the subject of friendships. He advised young men in their associations with women to fall in love if they must with a woman thirty or forty years older than they were. Then they would keep her as a friend. "I did it," said Mr. Carnegie, and then suddenly looking up to where the reporters sat, clapped his hand over his mouth in mock alarm and changed the subject.

"But the grandest friends are those we find in books," said Mr. Carnegie. "There we have the companionship of the masters. They are always with you, always round you, ready to open to you their richest treasures, always at your call, and they are friends who never have other appointments."

In conclusion Mr. Carnegie told his hearers to be true to themselves and that if they had their self-respect they need never fear the criticisms of opinions of the world. "Thine own reproach alone do fear" was his closing injunction.

Dr. Keen elaborated on Mr. Hoyt's window-washing story, urging young men to be faithful in each day's work, careful of details, and conscious of having done the best thing possible. Mr. Miller spoke along the same lines, and Mr. Forbush gave an outline history of the Bible class of which he was the founder. "Dr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., thanked the speakers for their advice, and said that they were present, he thought because they believed in the young men, and knew that the to-morrow of the country depended upon the young men of to-day. He also expressed his father's regrets at being unable to attend.

WOMAN DEAD; SON STARVING.

Mrs. Le Brasse's Husband Said to be Chauncey Olcott's Manager.

Mrs Irene Le Brasse, occupying a furnished room with her ten-year-old son Gordon at 172 East One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Street, was found dead in her bed yesterday by her son when he tried to awaken her.

It was found that the boy was half famished, and that mother and son had been without a penny. The woman, it was learned by the police, was dissipated, and had for some time been living apart from her husband, who is said to be the manager for Chauncey Olcott, the actor. The boy was taken to the Children's Society, and the father will be applied to to support him.

TO WIND UP ITS AFFAIRS.

Trustees of a Building and Loan Association Surprise the Shareholders.

The Trustees of the Kings County Co-operative Building and Loan Association caused much surprise yesterday by announcing that the association had decided to wind up its affairs and go out of business. The association was organized about thirteen years ago, and its offices are at 103 Broadway, Brooklyn.

The announcement was first made to the shareholders at the annual meeting of the organization on Tuesday night. Many of them were greatly surprised. President George E. Moulton explained that while the association was in a sound financial condition it had made absolutely no profits during the past year. The annual statement of the association showed that the cash account for the year ending Dec. 31 last was as follows:

FOSBURG'S PARENTS HERE.

Both Father and Mother Declare Their Son Is Innocent.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Fosburg, the parents of May Fosburg, who was shot and killed at her home last August, and for which killing Robert S. Fosburg was indicted a short time ago, left town last night, having spent the day in the city. Mr. Fosburg was as strenuous in his defense of his son's innocence yesterday as ever. He said before leaving:

"I did not come to the city to retain any lawyer or to consult any one in connection with this case. I came here on other business. Mr. Hibbard will have charge of my son's case, and so far as I know now there will be no other lawyer engaged."

Mr. Fosburg said that there was no use in going over the case again. His daughter was shot and killed by burglars. His son had nothing to do with it, and the indictment and prosecution were peculiar.

Mr. Fosburg said that it was true he was looking for a man named Quinn. He said that there were a number of criminals in Pittsfield and surrounding towns who stole wire and other things. His son met one of these men on the street one day and thought he recognized the man as one of the burglars. This man spoke up, saying:

"I am not the man you are looking for. You had better find Quinn. He knows all about the matter."

Mr. Fosburg said that he did not wish to antagonize Chief of Police Nicholson or to give any surmises. He was asked if there were not reports that Chief Nicholson, in view of repeated robberies in Pittsfield and his inability to trace the malefactors, had not brought about this indictment as a sort of justification to hold his position.

Mr. Fosburg said: "There are some rumors to that effect."

"Can you think on what ground the Grand Jury indicted your son?" was asked.

"I not only have some ideas on the matter, but I have some facts, I think, but it will not do for us to say much about the matter now. You know in our position it would not do to talk too much about anything. I do not want to appear to be antagonizing any one. I say that my son is innocent. Why did they call the neighbors and the members of the family before the Grand Jury and the Coroner's Jury? Doesn't that in itself look peculiar?

"I want to say right here there never was any trouble between myself and my son, and I want to emphasize the fact that our family is a very happy one, and has been so for many years, from the beginning. Ask Clinton L. Rossiter, the President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, who knows us, if this is not so."

Mr. Fosburg said that he was robbed by burglars once before when he lived in St. Louis. He pointed out the number of burglaries that have occurred in Pittsfield and the surrounding towns, and wanted to know why some action had not been taken with regard to them. He said that the story told by his daughter, Beatrice, was substantially correct. He denied positively the story to the effect that Miss Bertha Sheldon, the young lady of Providence, R. I., who was visiting the house when the tragedy occurred, had been spirited away.

Mr. Fosburg declared vehemently: "I'm positive my son will be acquitted, and all who know him are his champions."

Mr. Fosburg was away from the Astor House, where he and his wife were stopping, nearly all the afternoon. He returned a little before 5 o'clock, paid his bill, and left the hotel, saying he was going to return to Pittsfield. Mr. Fosburg is a man of middle age, and looks like a prosperous banker. Mrs. Fosburg is a pleasant lady, who vehemently declares her son is innocent.

SMALLPOX IN LITTLE ITALY.

Fearing an outbreak of smallpox in "Little Italy," First Avenue and One Hundred and Twelfth Street, a corps of forty vaccinators, in charge of Drs. Benedict and Somerset of the Board of Health, accompanied by fifty policemen, in charge of a Sergeant of the sanitary squad, left the Board of Health headquarters, Sixth Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street, last night to visit that section of the city and to vaccinate everybody in the block between One Hundred and Twelfth and One Hundred and Thirteenth Streets, on First Avenue.

The physicians decided to do the work last night, owing to six new cases of the disease having been found in the big tenement, 2,171 First Avenue, during the afternoon. One case had previously been found on Tuesday.

The victims of the disease found yesterday were: Tony Bruno, three years; Walter Bruno, five years, and Lizzie Bruno, six years, who lived with their parents in Apartment 17; Rose Darno, three years old, living in Apartment 19; Mary Black, five months, living in Apartment 15, and Joseph Simoe, two years and two months, living in Apartment 15. All were taken to the Reception Hospital.

The doctors located two new cases. The patients were Louisa Gentel, twenty-six years old, of 300 East One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, and Louisa Schassa, ten years old, of 314 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street. They were taken to North Brother Island.

Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning the physicians reported that they had discovered nine new cases of smallpox. Five cases were found at 329 East One Hundred and Twelfth Street, two cases at 332 East One Hundred and Twelfth Street, and two cases at 2,169 First Avenue. The victims were removed to the foot of East One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and will be taken to North Brother Island. The names of the victims could not be obtained.

CITY REAL ESTATE TITLES FOUND IMPERFECT

A Foreclosure Suit in the Supreme Court Reveals Strange Facts.

The Daughter of a Former Wealthy Third Avenue Grocer Involved in a Legal Romance.

By a decision of Justice Bischoff, rendered in the Supreme Court yesterday, Mrs. Alberta P. Tracy is declared entitled to redeem property at 160 East Eighty-first Street, and other parts of this city, from foreclosure, the defendant in the suit being Francis Frey, who came into possession under a mortgage from a Mrs. Annie Dolan, to whom the property was sold by Mrs. Kate Maria Williams. The papers in the case on which the decision was based disclose a remarkable story. A woman who for nearly fifty years supposed herself to be the legitimate child of a one-time prominent grocer of Third Avenue finds herself proved to be illegitimate, and in addition, four persons who purchased real estate from her now find that they have imperfect titles to their property. The proof of the illegitimacy of the woman was discovered accidentally in the old records of a New Jersey Justice of the Peace.

The story as disclosed by the papers in the case began in 1851, when David W. Evans, who later became a grocer in this city, kept a feed store at Whitehouse, N. J. He boarded with a family named Van Deventer, and on July 4, 1851, he took the daughter of the house, Hannah Maria Van Deventer, to Easton, Penn., on an excursion. On the return from Easton, Evans announced that he had married Miss Van Deventer.

Her mother insisted on seeing the marriage certificate, and Evans said that the minister had been too busy to issue one, but that he would get it in a few days. When the certificate was not forthcoming, the mother of the young woman ordered the couple from the house. At that time Evans was about thirty years old and Miss Van Deventer twenty years old.

The couple went to Bound Brook, N. J., and lived there about three months. Then Evans, who had made considerable money, came to New York and opened a grocery store on Third Avenue, near Sixtieth Street. Several times the young woman insisted that Evans should marry her, but Evans refused. She remained with him until March 16, 1852, when a daughter was born. This daughter was named Kate Maria Evans. The young mother went to her parents at Whitehouse, N. J., and in May of the same year had a warrant issued for the arrest of Evans on the charge that he was the father of her child.

Evans still had business interests at Whitehouse, and he did not evade the service of the warrant. He was arrested and confined in jail for six weeks. At the end of that period he was released, and Hannah Van Deventer and her child came back to New York with him. She remained in New York for two years, always being known and introduced as "Mrs. Evans." The last time she left him she went home and remained there. The child was taken care of by the Overseers of the Poor.

When the child was nine years old her mother died, and she was then adopted by a Mrs. Frech of Allentown, N. J. There was no record of David Evans having seen his child after her mother's death until the girl was sixteen years old. At that time Evans went to Allentown and persuaded his daughter to leave her home and come to live with him. She agreed to the plan and left Mrs. Frech's house late one Sunday night and came to New York City. Her education had been somewhat neglected, and Evans at once sent her to a private school and later to Drew Seminary. In 1873 the girl married Charles Williams, a real estate broker. She and her husband continued to live with Mr. Evans.

Mr. Evans retired from business in 1880, having acquired considerable property; he set that thirteen houses in this city. One of the first things he did after his retirement from business was to deed nine of the houses to Mrs. Williams. She in return gave Evans a life lease to the same. He retained in his own name four houses situated on East Eighty-first Street. Mr. Evans died in 1884, and since then the legal complications have arisen. He left no will, and his only known heirs at the time were Mrs. Williams, a brother, and two sisters.

Mrs. Williams purchased the collateral interests of the brother and sisters. There was another brother who had enlisted in the army in 1861, and he had never been heard of after that time, so it was presumed that he was dead. This brother was William L. Evans.

One of the heirs from whom Kate Maria Williams had purchased the property began to make inquiries as to William L. Evans, and to the surprise of all found that he was alive and practicing law at New Orleans. After the war he had settled at New Orleans, and had become one of the leading criminal lawyers of that city. At one time he held the office of Recorder. Prior to the discovery that he was alive Mrs. Williams had disposed of the four houses on Eighty-first Street. One had been purchased by Francis Frey, another by Louis H. Kircher, and the third by Catherine Falvey. When Judge Evans heard about his brother's estate he decided that as a collateral heir he was entitled to a one-fourth interest in the property. He made his claims, and then the present owners of the property called upon Mrs. Williams to protect them. There were some negotiations looking to a settlement of the difficulty, but later Mrs. Williams decided to fight the matter in the courts.

Judge Evans died in 1897, and his daughter, Alberta P. Tracy, took up the fight through her counsel, Shipman, Larocque & Choate, and partition suits were instituted. The contention was that Mrs. Williams had no power to convey the one-fourth interest which belonged to Judge Evans as a collateral inheritance, and that she was not an heir herself. Mrs. Williams contended that she was the legitimate daughter of David W. Evans, and as such had a right to dispose of the property. Evidence that Evans had called her mother his wife was offered, and then Solomon Hanford, of counsel for Mrs. Tracy, produced the original record of the proceedings before Justice of the Peace Hoffman of Hunterdon, N. J. This with corroborative evidence came as a surprise to the defendants in the case, who had been led to believe by Mrs. Williams that no question could be successfully raised as to her legitimacy.

For some years past Mrs. Williams has been living at Hartford, Conn., where her husband died about a year ago. It is understood that the greater part of the estate which had been conveyed to her by her reputed father has become dissipated, and consequently the owners of the property affected by these actions are without a remedy.

The question of whether the defect in the title to the property could have been discovered is interesting. It seems that the titles to the three pieces of property were carefully examined, but that none of the examining counsel discovered what it now appears could have been easily discovered, that there was a one-fourth interest in the property which had never been acquired by Kate Maria Williams. This is particularly true with respect to the property affected by the Frey action, for in that case the property was bought by Kate Maria Williams under foreclosure, and she sought to be relieved from her purchase on an affidavit made by her to the effect that the foreclosure proceedings were defective in that William L. Evans was not made a party thereto.

There have been some moves made in the fight over the fourth piece of property affected, but the decision handed down yesterday related specifically to the three pieces sold to Frey, Kircher, and Falvey.

SECRETARY ROOT IN BROOKLYN.

He Reviews the Thirteenth Regiment—Gen. Brooke Present.

Secretary of War Root reviewed the Thirteenth Regiment Heavy Artillery at the armory of the organization, Sumner and Putnam Avenues, Brooklyn, last night. The Secretary was accompanied by Major Gen. John R. Brooke, commanding the Department of the East, and his staff. Col. David E. Austen commanded the regiment. The Secretary was met in Jersey City by a committee of officers of the regiment.

Before the review the regiment was put through an exhibition drill by Col. Austen. A dress parade followed the review.

After witnessing the evolutions, Secretary Root made the following statement:

"I am highly pleased with the showing made by the regiment to-night, and think it is a fine organization. I came here to consult with the officers of the regular service and the officers of this regiment for the betterment of the artillery branch of the service."

The officers of the regiment entertained their guests in the messroom of the armory after the evening's ceremonies.

SHERIFF'S JURY BANQUET.

Diners Honor the Memory of Adon Smith, Foreman for Twenty Years.

A tribute to Adon Smith, who for more than twenty years was the foreman of the Second Panel Sheriff's Jury, was the occasion for an impressive moment at the panel's annual banquet at Delmonico's last evening. While the two hundred or more guests drank a silent toast the orchestra played "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

W. H. McElroy presided, and after extending greetings to the guests, he proposed the toast referred to. When the diners were again seated he said:

"I knew Mr. Smith well. This jury never had a more efficient or faithful member. Appointed in 1859, and made foreman in 1878, he was always foremost in all things connected with the jury, and no man contributed more to the success of these dinners than he. To-night, for the first time, he is not among us, and we all miss him."

Mr. McElroy then introduced Sheriff Grell as "a public official than whom none has a greater potentiality of unpleasantness."

"I present Exhibit A," he added as the Sheriff arose.

Sheriff Grell said that he agreed with the description, but did not think his friend Mr. McElroy knew much about jury duty. He expressed his pleasure at being present.

Prof. Leslie J. Tompkins of New York University Law School made a plea for the study of law in the general curriculum of students, and Controller Coler responded to the toast "The City of New York."

Extreme geniality marked the progress of the dinner. The decorations were more than usually elaborate. The tables were garnished with smilax and roses. On the guest table a pretty effect was produced by incandescent lights glowing through opalescent globes among the trailing vines.

At the guests' table besides Mr. McElroy and Sheriff Grell, were J. M. Fitzsimons, Israel C. Pierson, Martin T. McMahon, Joseph H. Newburger, Chester B. McLaughlin, Leslie J. Tompkins, James Fitzgerald, M. W. Littleton, H. A. Gildersleeve, William R. Rannie, Bird S. Coler, David Leventritt, Henry Bischoff, Jr., and John Proctor Clarke.

The committee having the arrangement of the dinner in charge included George A. Meyer, the Foreman of the jury; Richard R. Hunt, Jules A. Montant, M. H. Moses, Jacob Hays, Victor E. Roumage, and Forrest H. Parker.

WOMAN TAKES CHLOROFORM.

She Leaves a Note Directed to Some One in Florence Flats.

An attempt was made to commit suicide yesterday afternoon at the Park View Hotel, 55 West Forty-second Street, by a young woman who was last night under guard in the prison at Bellevue Hospital. She registered at the hotel as Mrs. C. Patterson of 1,059 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. There is no such number in the street, and it is supposed that under another name she is known at Hudson, N. Y.

She drank a very small dose of chloroform, and was never in serious peril from it; in fact, the fluid stung her mouth and throat so as to make her cry out and call attention to her room. The chief interest in her case is due to a letter which she left on a bureau in her room. It was addressed: "P., care of H. Manchester, 109 East Eighteenth Street."

This is part of the Florence flats. At the number in question lives George R. Manchester, Secretary of the Republican County Committee, and his wife. No other Manchester lives in the flats. George R. Manchester left his apartment at 7 o'clock last night with a traveling bag. He was reported to have gone to Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. Mrs. Manchester declined last night to see any callers or to receive messages. She and her husband had in the afternoon disclaimed any knowledge of "F."

The woman called at the Park View Hotel at about noon, went to the parlor, registered as stated, and paid $1 for her room on the third floor. In a short talk with the clerk she said she had come to New York to shop, but on account of the snow she would remain indoors. One hour later a guest told the elevator boy that some one in Room 69 was crying. Shrieking groans were heard in the corridor the door was forced. The guest lay on the bed writhing. She had not disrobed.

Dr. José M. de Bermingham came and found that the woman had taken about a drachm of chloroform from a bottle that was uncorked on a table.

A policeman had been summoned, and when the woman became calmer a call for an ambulance was sent to the Flower Hospital. She could have walked to it, but was stubborn, and, as she did not need a stretcher, the policeman carried her down stairs and put her in the vehicle. At the hospital it was found that she did not need any treatment. She refused to give any account of herself and said that she would as soon as she found an opportunity end her life. The hospital has no facilities for guarding patients, so a patrol wagon was called from the Twenty-fourth Precinct, and at half-past 6 o'clock she was taken to Bellevue Hospital a prisoner. She was recorded there as Mrs. Patterson, twenty years old, and will be arraigned in the East Fifty-seventh Street Police Court to-day.

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL'S TOUR.

His Closing Lecture Will Be Delivered This Evening.

Winston Spencer Churchill, M. P., war correspondent and lecturer, thinks Americans are a good deal more enterprising than Englishmen just now, but that they will slow down and be satisfied with a much less strenuous pace before long. Mr. Churchill has just completed his six weeks' lecturing tour of the United States and Canada, and will sail for England by the Etruria on Saturday. His final lecture will be delivered this evening at Carnegie Hall.

Mr. Churchill said that his six weeks of lecturing, from a financial point of view, had been fairly successful. It had not been so successful as his English tour, but he had not expected that it would be. He denied that there had ever been any serious differences between himself and Major Pond, who had charge of the arrangements in connection with his lectures, and said their present relations were entirely friendly. During his stay in New York Mr. Churchill is the guest of Bourke Cockran.

MANHATTAN ALUMNAE DINE.

At the thirty-second annual dinner of the Alumnæ Society of Manhattan College, which was held at Sherry's last night, Brother Joseph, the head of the Faculty of the college and the Chief of the Order of Christian Brothers in this country, said that although the study of the dead languages had been eliminated from the curriculum the college was quite as strong as ever, and there had been no falling off in attendance. He intimated, however, that the question of re-establishing courses in Latin and Greek was under consideration.

The dinner was attended by about 200 members of the society. The speakers were the Rev. Brother Joseph, the Rev. John P. Chadwick, United States Navy; John F. Brennan, the Rev. Daniel H. O'Dwyer, the Rev. John T. Driscoll, David McClure, Patrick F. McSorley, and Luke D. Stepleton.

Dr. José M. Ferrer, President of the Alumni Society, acted as toastmaster. He announced that the society had given the sum of $2,500 to the library fund of the college.

Lincoln's Birthday Celebration.

The elaborate preparations for the celebration of Lincoln's Birthday at Carnegie Hall on the evening of Feb. 11 are now about complete, and, in addition to the address by Mark Twain and Henry Watterson's oration, a feature of the exercises will be the grand chorus of the People's Choral Union of a thousand voices, under the leadership of Frank Damrosch. As the celebration is also for the benefit of the education of the white children of the mountains of East Tennessee, a moderate admission is charged. Tickets at $2 and $1 are now on sale at Tyson's offices at the hotels and at the office of the Musical Art Society, 388 Fifth Avenue, near Thirty-sixth Street.

East Side Children's Recital.

An interesting recital is to be given at the house of Mrs. Henry Lansing Wardwell, 27 West Twentieth Street, to-morrow afternoon, when the children of the Rivington Street Music School will play for their uptown friends. The programme will include several solos on the piano and violin, and the little orchestra of eight violins is also to perform. Mrs. Wellman, better known to opera lovers as Emma Juch, will complete the afternoon with some songs. The friends of the Music School are well known in fashionable and musical circles, and the invitations have been so universally accepted that the recital promises to be a great success.

REPORT THAT DE WET IS IN CAPE COLONY

He Is Said to be at the Head of a Fairly Strong Force.

Kitchener Sent Word on Tuesday that De Wet and Knox Had Fought a Battle Near Thaba N'Chu.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—"It is reported unofficially," says the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, "that Gen. De Wet has entered Cape Colony with a fairly strong force.

"The impatience felt in England at the slow progress of the operations is not warranted, as preparations are being made for a general movement shortly.

"King Edward has sent the following dispatch to Lord Kitchener:

"'One of the Queen's last inquiries was after yourself and the gallant army under your command.'"

Lord Kitchener reports to the War Office, under date of Pretoria, Jan. 29, as follows:

"De Wet has been engaged by Knox forty miles north of Thaba N'Chu. No details. De Wet intends again attempting an invasion of Cape Colony.

"Smith-Dorrien has returned from Carolina, having dispersed the Boers.

"A force of Boers this morning entered Boysburg, and damaged two mines.

"Commandant Marais is among the prisoners taken."

Thaba N'Chu is 40 miles almost due east of Bloemfontein. The Cape Colony border is about 100 miles south. To reach it from the point at which Lord Kitchener reports the engagement with Gen. Knox to have taken place, De Wet would therefore have had to cover 140 miles, not counting detours. He would also be obliged to cross the Caledon and Orange Rivers.

However, as Lord Kitchener gives no date for the battle with Knox, it is not impossible that De Wet may now be in Cape Colony.

It has frequently been reported that as soon as the famous Boer leader appears the Cape Afrikanders will rise en masse. They are said to regard him as the Napoleon of the war, and to believe that he will ultimately inflict a crushing and final defeat to the British.

BRITISH TROOPS MUTINY.

Soldiers from the West Indies Terrorize St. Helena and Are Subdued with Difficulty.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The West Indian troops stationed at the Island of St. Helena (where Cronje and a large number of Boers are held prisoners) mutinied early in the month, raided the town, terrorized the inhabitants, injured many of them, defied their officers, and were only finally subdued when faced by the muzzles of rifles. The censor suppressed the news, but the story has arrived by mail.

The trouble started with a row on the night of Jan. 1 between some bluejackets and a party of the West Indians. On the following night the West Indians broke out of barracks and raided the town with clubs and razors tied to sticks. They ran amuck, cutting and beating women, children, and men indiscriminately, and attacked the Sailors' Rest, tearing out the doors and windows. All the efforts of the officers to suppress the mutineers were futile. When ordered to the camp they refused to obey, and threatened to blow up the town with dynamite. A strong naval force was landed, the available troops were collected, and the streets were paraded and guarded all night long.

At daybreak the troops were drawn up with loaded rifles in front of the place where the West Indians were barricaded. The latter were ordered to surrender, and were notified that if they did not do so they would be fired upon. The mutineers were finally cowed, and were taken to the camp, where they will remain under guard until a troopship arrives to remove them.

CHILD DIES IN CEMETERY.

Watching the Burial of a Relative, She Suddenly Expires.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 30.—Mary Reilly, five years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Reilly of 26 Cleveland Avenue, Harrison, died suddenly to-day in the Cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre in East Orange. The child accompanied her parents to the funeral of Mrs. Canney. As the body of Mrs. Canney was being lowered into the grave, the child, who was sitting in a coach with Mrs. A. Lyman, was seized with an attack of coughing and died in a few minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. Reilly at once returned to their home in Harrison with the child's body, being ignorant of the fact that they should not have removed the body from the county.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

TOLONO, Ill., Jan. 30.—Fire early to-day destroyed nearly all the business houses of Tolono, entailing losses estimated at $100,000; partially insured.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Fire this evening destroyed the building at the intersection of Milwaukee and Ashland Avenues, occupied by the Continental Clothing Store. High winds fanned the flames so fiercely that the structure was consumed in an incredibly short time. The store was owned by J. N. Nusbaum. He valued it at $80,000 and carried an insurance of 80 per cent. of that amount. The loss is practically total. The building was valued at $30,000 and the loss is estimated at $25,000, with full insurance. It is believed the fire caught from a stove in the basement. It spread so rapidly that the employes were compelled to flee for their lives without having time to investigate the cause of the flames.

YESTERDAY'S FIRES.

SECRETARY ROOT IN BROOKLYN.

He Reviews the Thirteenth Regiment—Gen. Brooke Present.

Secretary of War Root reviewed the Thirteenth Regiment Heavy Artillery at the armory of the organization, Sumner and Putnam Avenues, Brooklyn, last night. The Secretary was accompanied by Major Gen. John R. Brooke, commanding the Department of the East, and his staff. Col. David E. Austen commanded the regiment. The Secretary was met in Jersey City by a committee of officers of the regiment.

Before the review the regiment was put through an exhibition drill by Col. Austen. A dress parade followed the review.

After witnessing the evolutions, Secretary Root made the following statement:

"I am highly pleased with the showing made by the regiment to-night, and think it is a fine organization. I came here to consult with the officers of the regular service and the officers of this regiment for the betterment of the artillery branch of the service."

The officers of the regiment entertained their guests in the messroom of the armory after the evening's ceremonies.

Yale College Will Receive $100,000—Bulk of the Estate to Relatives.

Application for the probate of the will of Benjamin D. Silliman was made yesterday afternoon to Surrogate Abbott in Brooklyn by Edward Mitchell and Grosvenor H. Hubbard, the executors of the instrument. While the will itself was not filed, the executors presented a synopsis of the instrument. It is expected that the will will be filed in a few days. It was executed at the country residence of Mr. Silliman at Islip, L. I., on Oct. 23, 1900, and was witnessed by Dr. W. W. Hewlett, Frederick B. Williams, and George C. Holmes. The following is the synopsis of the will as presented by the executors:

Two legacies of $50,000 each are given to Yale College, one to be paid on the death of the Rev. Silliman D. Blagden, the other on the death of Miss Taylor.

The residue of the estate, after certain other bequests, is given to trustees for the life of the testator's sole surviving sister, half of the income to be applied to her use for life, the other half to the use of two of testator's nieces during his sister's life.

On the termination of this trust, a further legacy of $10,000 is given to Yale College for the foundation of the Marshall S. Bidwell Fellowship, and a legacy of $10,000 is given to Columbia College for the foundation of the William Mitchell Fellowship.

Other bequests are then made to various relatives and friends. About $486,000 is thus disposed of.

The remainder is divided into quarters, two quarters being given to certain descendants of one deceased sister, and the other two quarters to, or for the benefit of, certain descendants of another deceased sister.

An affidavit was filed with the petition, stating that Mr. Silliman left "$10,000 and upward." It is believed, however, that Mr. Silliman left an estate worth about $1,500,000. No schedule was filed. The following relatives of Mr. Silliman are benefited by the will: Laura S. Blagden, sister of the testator, Washington, D. C.; Caroline S. Taylor, a niece, 58 Clinton Street, Brooklyn; Laura S. Carey, a niece, of 48 East Twenty-sixth Street, Manhattan; Mary A. Silliman, a niece, of Warsaw, N. Y.; Silliman Blagden, a nephew, of 130 Bowdoin Street, Boston; Thomas Blagden, a nephew, Washington, and Harriet S. Mathewson, a niece, of Hartford, Conn. The executors stated that Harriet S. Mathewson had been adjudged incompetent by the Supreme Court and that her committee of estate and person was Arthur Mathewson of 129 Montague Street, Brooklyn.

A meeting of members of the bar in Brooklyn was held at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, to take action with regard to the death of Mr. Silliman. All of the Justices sitting in the Trial Terms of the Supreme Court sat with the Justices of the Appellate Division during the proceedings. Addresses on the life and character of Mr. Silliman were made by Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Samuel D. Morris, H. C. M. Ingraham, and Stephen C. Olin. Upon motion of

HEARING AT ALBANY FOR CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

Arguments For and Against the Bill to Regulate Them.

Their Practices Defended by Lawyers and Attacked by Physicians—Another Hearing Next Week.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30. — It is within the bounds of temperate statement to say that no more remarkable hearing upon any proposed piece of legislation has ever occurred at the Capitol in Albany than that which was given to-day upon the Bell bill to prevent Christian Scientists from practicing their art. Members of the Legislature oldest in the service here recall nothing so extraordinary. Lawyers who favored the Scientists and their professional lecturer, Carol Norton, besides Dr. Mary Walker, were among the opponents of the bill, while physicians of reputation not only denied the possibility of the cures claimed, but suggested that those who gave credit to them were harboring a hallucination which was a menace to the health and the welfare of the community.

The hearing took place before the Assembly Committee on Public Health, of which Dr. Henry of New York City is the Chairman. It became evident early in the day that no committee room in the Capitol would afford accommodation for a tenth of the number who were interested in the hearing, and therefore it was held in the Assembly Chamber. The hour set for the hearing was 2 o'clock. Long before then the Assembly Chamber was filled by an audience of well-dressed men and women.

The hearing was opened by Assemblyman Bell, who introduced the bill. Mr. Bell said the bill was not of his own construction. It had been framed by the New York County Medical Society and handed to him. Since it had been introduced it had aroused opposition from other persons than the Christian Scientists whose practice of the healing art it was mainly designed to control. The opticians, the patent medicine men, the sellers of artificial limbs, and others had been aroused because of their belief that it would seriously injure if not altogether ruin their business. In order to meet the objections of these people some amendments had been framed by the medical society. These amendments he offered. Their effect was to satisfy the interests mentioned.

A Mr. Tallman of New York City, who was called a "Judge," was introduced as the first speaker on behalf of the Christian Scientists. He asked the committee if they appreciated the scope of the legislation which they had been called upon to enact. It was an attack, he said, upon the religious liberty of 70,000 men and women of the best culture in New York. The exercise of the healing art in accordance with the teachings of the Bible was a part of the religion of these people. They had built many churches in the State. One recently erected in New York City cost $500,000.

"I myself am not a Christian Scientist," he said, "but I know something of the good of Christian Science, and I am here to testify to it. My wife for years had been afflicted with a disease for which the most skilled physician in the country treated her without affording her any relief. She took up Christian Science, and in a short time she was a well woman. She is here in this hall to-day. My little granddaughter was afflicted with paralysis. The best physicians in New York were consulted. They pronounced her case incurable. She was treated by Christian Science and in a very few days she was restored to perfect health."

A Mr. Lathrop mentioned that doctors of medicine had told him that he was ill, but he was cured by science.

"Didn't you know you were sick?" asked Assemblyman Sanders.

"I had a conscious feeling of being so," was the reply.

Mr. Lathrop said the "Scientists" regarded all conditions as being mental, and do not recognize any contagious diseases or anything of the sort. A spectator who volunteered the information concerning contagious diseases was asked if there was any law or commandment that contagious diseases be reported to the Board of Health.

"No, Sir. There is no such commandment in the Bible that tells us to report a case to the Board of Health," and with applause greeting this remark, the gentleman sat down.

The next speaker for the "scientists" was Henry L. Call. The result of the enactment of the proposed legislation, Mr. Call said, would be to relegate to the criminal classes a large number of the best men and women in the State.

"And for what reason?" he asked. "Because the medical fraternity, which finds its field being invaded, claims that Christian Science is a sham; that Christian Scientists cannot do what they claim to do. But on the contrary, are working harm. Look around at this audience before you. Do they not look like intelligent and respectable people? Nearly every one here has been cured of some disease by the application of Christian Science. I call upon all who have been cured by Christian Science to stand up."

Nearly the whole audience arose. As the "scientists" gazed around upon their hosts they broke into hand-clapping.

W. D. Baldwin, the President of the Otis Elevator Company, said he wished to speak to the committee as a practical man. "No man," Mr. Baldwin said, "was more antagonistic to Christian Science than I was. Yet I stand here to-day to defend it. My wife, who was a confirmed invalid for years, was healed by it. Her cure led me to investigate. My investigation brought belief. For eight years I have taught my children that God is the source of all power; that when they are sick they should go to God for relief. In all that time we have not needed a physician in our house. Are you going to say to me and to others, 'Your children must unlearn what you have taught them; instead of seeking a cure from God, the source of all power, they must seek it from a man.'"

Carol Norton said: "We have no quarrel with the physicians. Many physicians send patients to us to be healed, and some come to us themselves. I think this bill is misnamed. It ought to be entitled, 'A Bill to legislate against the omnipotent power of God.' It is an attempt to make null and void the final command of the Saviour before his ascension: 'Go ye into the world and heal the sick.'"

The opening argument for the medical fraternity was made by Dr. Henry L. Elsner, who was to-dny elected President of the State Medical Society. "All we ask," said Dr. Elsner, "is proficiency on the part of those who seek to treat others for disease. The laws of the State of New York already require that those who seek to practice medicine must pass an examination which is satisfactory to the State Board of Regents before they are given a license. Public health demands that no person should be allowed to practice the healing art who has not the special education which would enable him to properly diagnose disease."

He spoke of the duty of physicians and the advancement they had made in science. They did not believe in one single way of treating diseases, but were after the greatest good for the greatest number. He wanted the same safeguards thrown around the public from scientists as in the practice of medicine. Referring to how the medical fraternity treats contagious diseases he spoke of the cholera burdened ship in New York Harbor in 1892. "Now what would you have done in that case?" he excitedly asked. "Cure it? No, you would have spread it at every door, and flooded the country with it." Regarding the way the "scientists" treated contagious diseases, and protected the public health, he said: "Four or five hours! Why, that is time enough to spread a disease everywhere."

Dr. Elsner read a letter from President Murphy of the Board of Health, in which Mr. Murphy said: "Christian Science as practiced in New York is a great misfortune. I have no doubt that many lives are lost and many will be lost if these people are permitted to practice their doctrine. The claims of these people are simply deplorable."

Dr. Abraham Jacobi addressed the committee briefly. He said he would not be blasphemous enough to believe that any one could claim the light of Jesus and His Apostles in this day. The practices of the Christian Scientists, he said, were a public danger. It was inconceivable to him how men with education and refinement could not see this.

"I am almost ashamed to come here to plead in such a cause," said the doctor; "it is so evidently a matter of common sense that I make you an apology, Mr. Chairman."

Dr. Clark of Buffalo said: "I fail to find anywhere in the Bible that Jesus of Nazareth went up and down the country healing persons at $2 a head."

Prof. Howe of the Buffalo Medical College also spoke, and Attorney Andrews of New York City, counsel for the New York County Medical Society, reviewed the legal status of Christian Science, touching on cases where convictions had been had for deaths occurring from practicing it.

Dr. Mary Walker spoke in defense of Christian Science. She said: "The legislation proposed against these people is all wrong. They are good people. They come up to my standard of morality and nobody has ever questioned that. If they can heal without the use of medicine, let them do it. I haven't got enough of Jesus in me to do that; but some of these people seem to have. Then why not let them."

The hearing will be resumed again next week.

"HEALER" TO BE PROSECUTED.

Health Board Believes It Has Evidence to Convict C. G. Pease.

The Board of Health has at last determined to prosecute Charles G. Pease, the Christian Science "healer," for breaking the law in failing to report cases of contagious disease which have come under his so-called treatment. Pease has for a long time styled himself a doctor. It is charged by the Board of Health that the man has at various times practiced medicine without being registered, and he will also be prosecuted on this charge.

President Murphy of the Health Board has instructed Officer Gillespie to serve a summons on Pease, commanding him to appear before the Magistrate at the West Side Police Court at 2 o'clock this afternoon and show cause why he should not be punished for violating Section 153 of the Sanitary Code in failing to report a case of contagious disease.

The summons, according to President Murphy, is based on the testimony elicited during the recent contest in the Surrogates' Court over the will of Miss Helen C. Brush, who left the bulk of her estate to the First Church of Christ, Scientist. The brother of the testatrix alleged that the "healers" of this church had brought to bear undue influence upon his sister to induce her to make the will. Pease, in his testimony given at the hearings of this case, said that he had abandoned the practice of medicine, and that he did sometimes act as a "healer."

When asked if he reported contagious diseases to the Board of Health, he said that he did not, but he admitted having attended several cases. He further admitted that he had signed death certificates without having attended the patients, which is in direct violation of the law. He said he had visited Miss Brush, but not as a physician, yet he signed the certificate setting forth that she had died of consumption.

President Murphy has secured a transcript of the testimony given by Pease in this case, and it will be used against him at the hearing to-day. In speaking of the case yesterday, Mr. Murphy said:

"The department has been after Pease for two years, and we think now we have enough evidence to convict him."

LEGISLATURE'S PROCEEDINGS.

Assemblyman Harburger Denounces the Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Assemblyman Julius Harburger to-day called up in the Assembly his resolution denouncing the recommendation of Gov. Odell in his message for an amendment to the excise law by which the Excise Commissioner may at all times throughout the year call upon the hotels under his jurisdiction for such a list of permanent guests as are then domiciled, and empowering him to make such additional regulations as will at all times place him in possession of such information as he may be called upon to furnish the Superintendent of Elections. Mr. Harburger spoke to the resolution for fifteen minutes.

The aim of the Governor in making this recommendation, Mr. Harburger said, was by unfair means to turn the City of New York over to the Republicans. After criticising the Governor in unmeasured terms for his alleged partisanship, Mr. Harburger said:

"But for all his partisanship I will say this—that I prefer him to one of those mugwumps, any one of whom, in my judgment, would steal a church and its contents if given half a chance."

Referring to Senator Raines, the speaker said he was a better judge of whisky than he was of tea.

On motion of Mr. Kelsey action on the resolution was indefinitely postponed.

In the Senate the nomination of Thomas F. Baker to succeed himself as Trustee of the Utica State Hospital was confirmed.

Senator Slater introduced a concurrent resolution proposing an amendment to Article VI., Section 10, of the Constitution, relating to limitation of indebtedness. The amendment says:

Except that debts incurred by the City of New York after Jan. 1, 1904, to provide for supply of water shall not be included under the provisions of this resolution.

Senator Fuller introduced a concurrent resolution amending Section 14 of Article VI. of the Constitution providing for an additional County Judge in the County of Kings. Senator Fuller recently introduced a bill providing for an auxiliary County Court in Kings.

The Committee on Agriculture reported favorably on the act to amend the agricultural law relative to the sale and adulteration of food and food products.

Senator Stranahan of the Cities Committee reported favorably the bill to combine in a single law all existing laws affecting public interests in Brooklyn; also the bill relating to the Department of Public Works, Buffalo, the Democratic members dissenting.

DELAY ON THE POLICE BILL.

No Action in the Assembly Before Next Tuesday—Senator Grady Is Still Hopeful.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—There will be at least a week's delay in the further consideration of the New York Single-Headed Police bill passed in the Senate yesterday. Majority Leader Allds of the Assembly will be absent until next Tuesday, so that there is little chance of anything being done before his return.

Senator Grady to-day made the following statement with regard to the Police bill:

"It is hard for Governors to bend. But I make the prediction that the Police bill will not pass."

Notwithstanding Senator Grady's prediction, it is understood to be the Republican plan to pass the bill in the Assembly on Tuesday.

The first thing done in the Assembly after the opening prayer was concluded was the reading of the bill's title. Speaker Nixon handed the measure down from his desk to Clerk Baxter with a smile at the expectant members. As soon as Col. Baxter had read the title, Assemblyman Kelsey, who is acting majority leader, arose and moved the immediate consideration of the measure.

To this Assemblyman McKeown made a hot objection, Speaker Nixon smiled again and referred the bill to the Committee on Cities. There it will remain without action until next Tuesday's meeting of the committee, when it is expected that a hearing will be had.

There are indications that the debate in the Assembly will be even more prolonged and bitter than that in the Senate yesterday. The minority members are less under the absolute control of the leaders and are likely to make more informal and frequent speeches. There is also a possibility that some of the New York Republicans may refuse to vote for the bill unless bound by caucus rules to do so.

Buffalo Police Bill Reported.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Buffalo Police bill, which provides for a single-headed commission, was reported by both Cities Committees this morning. In the Senate the bill was held for further hearing on Feb. 5. In the Assembly the bill was ordered reprinted and recommitted for a further hearing on the same date.

CHANGES IN TAX LISTING BILL.

Assemblyman S. W. Smith Believes He Has Overcome Objections.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Tax Listing bill, which has caused such a storm of disapproval from the New York City Merchants' Association, is to be changed. Assemblyman Sanford W. Smith has prepared a number of amendments which he believes will overcome objections. One of them is to relieve persons from making a detailed statement of each individual asset. That is, if a person owned a number of bonds of various railroads, he will simply classify them in one statement, "Railroad Bonds," &c. The principal portion of the bill reads as follows, as amended:

Every person of full age and sound mind who shall own, hold, or have in his possession or under his control on the first day of May in each year, whether as owner, parent of a minor child, guardian of a ward, committee of an insane or otherwise incompetent person, trustee, executor, administrator, partner, receiver, or agent, any public securities, municipal bonds, stocks, or bonds of incorporated or other companies, mortgages upon property, whether real, personal, or mixed; promissory notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness; moneys on hand or deposited in savings banks or other depositories, or bills of account due to such person from other persons, firms, or corporations, shall, if requested in writing so to do by the Assessors of the tax district in which he resides, file with said Assessors, within fifteen days after the receipt of such request, a written return of the amount of such personal property so owned, held, had in possession, or under his control, which said return shall show the following facts:

Name, and if a partnership the name of each partner.

Residence, and if a partnership, the residence of each partner.

Place of business, if any.

Character of ownership, possession, or control.

The amount at market value of all public securities, municipal bonds, and stock so owned, held, or controlled by him.

The amount, at market value, of all stocks of foreign incorporated and other companies, so owned, held, or controlled by him.

The amount, at market value, of all bonds of foreign incorporated and other companies so owned, held, or controlled by him.

The amount, at market value, of all stocks of domestic incorporated and other companies, so owned, held, or controlled by him.

The amount, at market value, of all bonds of domestic incorporated and other companies, so owned, held, or controlled by him.

The amount remaining unpaid of all indebtedness secured by mortgages upon property, real, personal, and mixed, so owned, held, or controlled by him.

The amount of all indebtedness owing to such person, evidenced by promissory notes and other obligations and evidences of indebtedness, excepting mortgages, public securities, municipal bonds, and stocks and bonds of incorporated and other companies.

The amount of all moneys on hand and of all moneys deposited in savings banks and other depositories to his credit.

The amount unpaid on all bills of account payable to such person making such statement.

Such return may also contain a statement of what portion of the property so returned is claimed to be exempt by law from assessment and taxation, together with the reasons for such claim to exemption, and any other facts which in the opinion of the person making such return should be considered by the Assessors in making their assessment against such person. Such return shall be made as of the first day of May of the year in which it is filed.

NEW ELECTIONS BUREAU BILL.

Proposed Measure Will Receive United Republican Support—Office of Supervisor Abolished.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Another New York Bureau of Elections bill has been prepared and has received the indorsement of the Republican organization of New York City and the Republican legislative leaders. After a conference between W. J. Atterbury and William H. Ten Eyck, Chairmen, respectively, of the Kings and New York County Republican organizations, and the Elsberg special committee appointed to revise the bill, the following measure has been agreed upon.

The Raines bill bi-partisan commission of four is accepted. The salaries of the Commissioners, however, are to be $5,000 instead of $8,000 a year. The office of Supervisor is not to be created, the leaders having concluded that four Commissioners at increased salaries can do all the work of the bureau without the expense of a six-thousand-dollar-a-year official, in addition.

The new bill will provide for the appointment by the Mayor of the first set of Commissioners. Nominations for the office are to be presented to the Mayor by representatives of the two parties polling the highest number of votes at the last election. This will make the terms of the first appointees one year and ten months. After that, however, the Commissioners are to be elected for a term of two years at an election when the Governor of the State is chosen. Two changes the original bill, which provided that the Commissioners should be selected when the Mayor of New York was voted for.

The bill in its new form will receive, it is understood, the united Republican support.

IMPROVEMENT OF 135TH STREET.

Opponents of the Proposed Bill Argue Against It.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Assembly Cities Committee continued the hearing to-day on the Smith bill for the widening and improving of One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, New York City. Those in opposition were heard, after which ex-Senator Ford replied to their arguments.

John C. Shaw and James A. Deering, who made the principal argument against the measure, contended that the contemplated improvement would spoil St. Nicholas Avenue; that the city did not want it, and that only the railroad people favored it. No action was taken on the bill.

Arguments on the bill were heard also before the Senate Cities Committee, and briefs will be filed between now and Tuesday next.

PLATOON SYSTEM FOR FIREMEN.

Bill for a Day and Night Service Division Introduced.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Assemblyman William Schneider of Buffalo to-day introduced a bill regulating the hours of duty for firemen in cities of the first class. The bill provides that in cities of 1,000,000 inhabitants and over the engineer and firemen of the first, second, third, and fourth grades, and in cities of the first class having a population of 250,000 and over the Captains, Foremen, Lieutenants, Assistant Foremen, engineers, and firemen of all grades shall be divided by the Fire Commissioner into two bodies or platoons, one for day service and the other for night service. The day platoon shall not be on duty more than ten hours and the night platoon not more than fourteen hours. In case of a riot or conflagration it shall be within the discretion of the Fire Commissioner to keep the men on duty continuously.

The bill will not receive the support of the Tammany members from New York. A similar bill was introduced last year applying only to Buffalo. The Mayor of Buffalo was opposed to the bill. He announced that if it passed he would veto it. It was then abandoned. This year the bill was made applicable to New York as well as to Buffalo, the purpose being to get around the opposition of the Mayor of Buffalo. The Tammany members say that Fire Chief Sennnell of New York is as much opposed to the legislation as is the Mayor of Buffalo. He believes it would seriously impair the efficiency of the New York Fire Department. The platoon system proposed by the bill could be adopted in New York without legislation, it is said, if it were thought good policy to adopt it.

LOAN ASSOCIATIONS BILL.

Mr. Barnes and Mr. Howe for the Measure Before Senate Committee.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Senate Committee on Banks to-day held a hearing on Senator Humphrey's bill affecting loan associations of the State, which number 300 organizations, with assets amounting to over $45,000,000.

Senator Humphrey's bill prohibits loan associations from speculating in real estate and from taking second mortgages; also from changing by-laws without consent of a majority of the shareholders and notice to those directly interested.

Mr. Barnes, President of the New York State League of Loan Associations, representing ninety-five local associations, with assets of $22,000,000, spoke in favor of the bill, but suggested several minor amendments, the most important of which was one premitting the exchange of real estate without increasing the association's holdings. Rather than that the bill be lost, he would favor its passage in its present form. Edwin F. Howe, President of the Metropolitan League of Loan Associations, composed of thirty-three locals, with $15,000,000 assets, also favored the bill.

The hearing was adjourned until next Wednesday afternoon, when the State Banking Superintendent will be heard.

Against High Advertising Fences.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Assemblyman Prince to-day introduced a bill to prevent the placing of fences on roofs for the display of advertisements other than for the business of the lessee of the building on which the fence is built. No fence higher than four feet is to be erected on the top of a building. The bill also prevents the erection on the ground of fences higher than ten feet. The bill applies to the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx. An infraction of the provisions of the proposed law is to constitute a misdemeanor, and be punishable by a fine of $200 or by imprisonment in jail for thirty days.

Hearing on Buffalo Liquor Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Assembly Excise Committee gave a hearing this afternoon on the Brooks bill, providing for the opening of saloons in Buffalo all night during the Pan-American Exposition upon the payment of an additional tax. Prior to hearing arguments the introducer of the measure substituted Senator Davis's bill, which eliminates the Sunday opening clause and imposes an additional tax of $100 for this special privilege during the six months of the exposition, instead of $25 as provided for in the original bill. This action disarmed many of those who came to criticise the measure.

To Restrict Sweatshop Work.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—An important bill, introduced in both branches of the Legislature to-day by Senator Willard and Assemblyman Costello, provides that the correct name and address in English of the owner of articles manufactured in tenements shall be attached thereto for the purpose of identification. The name and address must not be taken off until such article is removed. No person not a bona-fide member of a family licensed to do work in tenements shall be permitted to labor on such work.

No Hearing on Board of Health Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The objections to the bill abolishing the present State Board of Health and establishing a single-headed commission have evidently been satisfied, for the parties that asked for a hearing this afternoon before the Senate Committee on Public Health withdrew their request. Senator Audett, Chairman of the Committee, says the bill will be reported favorably to-morrow, with a few technical amendments.

Police Rehearing Bills to be Killed.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Chairman Stranahan of the Senate Cities Committee and Chairman Kelsey of the Assembly Cities Committee have come to an understanding, whereby all police and firemen reinstatement bills and bills to rehear charges against dismissed employes of these departments are to be smothered in committee unless there be some extraordinary circumstances connected with them. The City Club of New York has interested itself in the matter to the extent of getting out a circular letter protesting against any such legislation.

Hearing on Staten Island Ferry Bills.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—A. B. Boardman of the firm of Boardman & Platt of New York City appeared before the Assembly Commerce and Navigation Committee this afternoon in opposition to the bills introduced by Mr. Van Name of Richmond affecting the Staten Island Ferry Company, prohibiting the use of boats thirty-five years old, and reducing the fare. He contended that the measure, if enacted, would amount in effect to confiscation of the company's property. Those who are in favor of the bill will be heard next Wednesday.

For Sunday Baseball.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Assemblyman Harburger of New York has introduced a bill amending the Penal Code so as to allow the playing of baseball on Sunday in this State.

For Vestibuled Street Railway Cars.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Senator Wilcox this morning introduced a bill providing that street surface railway companies whose lines extend a mile beyond the limits of cities and villages shall have vestibuled cars. A similar bill failed to pass last year, having as it did the opposition of a dozen big corporations.

Senate Passes Labor Bureau Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Senate has passed the Labor Bureau Department Consolidation bill suggested by Gov. Odell. There was not a dissenting vote.

MANY BILLS PASSED.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—In the Assembly today the Bryan bill appropriating $320,000 for the support and maintenance of the State prisons was passed.

In the Senate these bills were passed:

Senator HUMPHREY—Legalizing acts of officials of the village of Attica, in Wyoming County, relating to local assessments.

Senator ELSBERG and Assemblyman DAVIS—Amending Bradish Johnson corporation act.

Senator FOLEY—Relieving John N. Williamson, assignee of claim of the Jamaica Electric Light Company against the City of New York, for materials and service.

Senator ELLSWORTH—Permitting veterans in State service to take part in memorial parades without loss of pay.

Senator WILLARD—Legalizing the vote cast in the City of Utica for appropriation of moneys for repairs to Central Advanced School.

Senator TRAINOR—Legalizing notice to begin proceedings of Margaret J. Wallace against New York City for injuries.

Senator WILLARD—Legalizing vote cast in Utica for Mary Street School appropriation.

Senator DONNELLY—Amending the Code of Civil Procedure relative to appointment of temporary administrators in Surrogates' courts.

TO REPORT THE TAX BILLS

Senate Committee at Albany Approves Gov. Odell's Measures.

Had 150 Requests for a Hearing, but Granted None—Effects of Corporation Tax Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—It has become evident that Gov. Odell is very much in earnest in his desire to have the tax bills recommended by him passed, and the impression appears to be strong here that the measures will go through.

Despite the fact that over 150 telegrams asking for hearings on the bills to tax insurance companies, savings banks, and trust companies have been received, the Senate Committee on Taxation, Senator Krum, Chairman, to-day agreed to report the bills to the Senate favorably. The bill taxing trust companies is unamended, and will go on the calendar of the Senate for passage, being now on second reading. The bill taxing insurance companies and the one taxing the surplus of savings banks have been amended so as to more carefully define the word surplus. These bills will have to be reprinted, and probably will be recommitted.

The Assembly committee was more courteous in its treatment. It postponed action on the bills to-day, and decided to give hearings on the important measures Wednesday next. It is understood that the objections to the insurance bill will be very strenuous, and will be participated in by policy holders on the grounds that every maturing policy will be affected to its detriment by the passage of the bill.

Senator Krum said to-night in relation to the alleged demands for hearings:

"The demands came only after the press had sent out the amendments. I shall report the bills favorably to the Senate to-morrow, and I will not move to recommit them."

The amendments to the Insurance bill provide that the 1 per cent. tax on title guaranty and surety companies shall be upon capital stock if such corporations have no surplus; also providing that the surplus of every life insurance corporation organized under the laws of this State shall be determined by subtracting its total liabilities from its gross assets; if such life insurance corporation has capital stock, the amount of its capital stock shall not be considered a liability in the determination of such surplus. In determining the liabilities its policy obligations shall be valued on the net premium basis according to the Actuaries or combined experience table of mortality with interest at 4 per cent. per annum.

The amendment to the savings bank law provides that the 1 per cent. tax shall be imposed upon the actual value of the surplus and undivided earnings.

In the Senate to-day Senator Trainor introduced a bill amending the banking law relating to reserve funds of trust companies, providing that each trust company shall have on hand at all times at least 10 per cent. of the aggregate of its deposits in lawful money, if its principal place of business is situated in a city of 800,000 population or over, and an amount equal to 7 per cent. of its deposits if its principal office is situated elsewhere. The money thus kept on hand is called the lawful money reserve. If the company fails after notification of the Superintendent of Banks to make good such reserve in thirty days it shall be deemed insolvent.

The Corporation Tax bill is expected to add at least 30,000 corporations to the taxable list. If the calculations of those who have given special thought and investigation to the subject be not amiss, it will bring under taxation indirectly for State purposes at least $2,000,000,000 of corporate wealth, in addition to that which is now taxed. On this basis the added revenue from the tax on domestic corporations alone would be $2,500,000. It is estimated that $500,000 additional revenue will be contributed by the corporations which have been incorporated with a large capital under the laws of other States, but practically all of whose capital is employed in the State of New York.

There are now a great number of large corporations incorporated under the laws of New Jersey which do practically all of their business in this State without paying any tax here. The Corporation Tax bill recommended by Gov. Odell will reach all of these. Some of the big concerns will be hit by the bill. Among them are the following: The United States Leather Company, the General Electric Company, the Standard Oil Company, the American Sugar Refining Company, the American Tobacco Company, the National Biscuit Company, the Continental Tobacco Company, the National Harrow Company, and the National Casket Company. Up to the present these corporations have, largely, if not wholly, escaped taxation in New York under the exemption granted to manufacturing companies.

One of the merits claimed for the Corporation Tax bill is that under such a law the watering of corporation stock would be less than it is at present. Every share of "water" will be just as much the subject of taxation as a share of actual value and earning capacity. Some of the tax experts of the administration have worked out the difference between the amount which a manufacturing corporation would have to pay the State under the proposed bill and the amount which it now pays. The actual difference, as they figure it, would be about $20 additional under the proposed law upon a capitalization of $100,000.

LONG ISLAND SAVINGS BANKS.

Reports for Year Ended Dec. 31—Average and Total Deposits and Amount Withdrawn Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Every savings bank doing business on Long Island, by its report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1900, shows increased resources when compared with the previous year. The greatest gain is shown in the resources of the Williamsburg Savings Bank of Brooklyn, which is $3,160,000. The Brooklyn Savings is the next in order, with $1,400,000 added during 1900. The surplus never shows very great change, the law being such that if the surplus gets at a certain figure part of it must be spread over the accounts of depositors.

The main interest of the general public is in the amount of money deposited and that withdrawn by depositors. Three banks report a greater amount withdrawn than was deposited. These are the Brooklyn, the Dime of Brooklyn, and the South Brooklyn. Of those institutions showing deposits in excess of withdrawals, the Williamsburg leads with $1,317,614. The Greater New York, which is comparatively new, has excess deposits over withdrawals in 1900 of $146,235. This amount is nearly half of its deposits for last year.

The average of each deposit in and the interest paid by the several banks are given herewith:

The Failure of the Imitation

There is a murmur of complaint echoing along the channels of trade just now. It comes from big stores everywhere: "White Sales in January are failures."

This is the plaint of the imitator.

The ONE genuine Sale of White sounds a different note. The great masterful movement, first exploited in America by the Wanamaker Store in Philadelphia, and later in New York, has been imitated from Maine to California, because of its success.

The verdict of success or failure must be taken from the one store that has maintained the traditions and masterful efforts that brought original success.

To-day the Wanamaker Stores are winding up

The Greatest Selling of MUSLIN UNDERWEAR Ever Known in January

Each year it grows greater, because the reasons for its existence are real—its economies positive. The decline of the imitation was sure to follow the discovery of its superficial character.

Ten thousand dollars' worth of goods bought a few days before a sale, and marked at arbitrary prices for catch-penny effect could not imitate a movement whose special purchases amounted to two hundred thousand dollars' worth and more, and which were ordered to be made during the dull days of July.

Trust the women of New York for truest discrimination in the quality and tastefulness of garments. No price-temptation can make them sacrifice the standard of beauty and comfort which they require. For it was not eight-cent corset covers and thirty-eight-cent night gowns that made the success of this sale. It was the better goods—the fine and handsome garments that were sold as cheaply in proportion as the eight-cent corset covers.

That was the vital point. The sale did not tempt by little-priced stuff, to waylay the purchaser with better goods at full prices.

The women of Greater New York judged the Wanamaker Sale of White and wrote full and strong again the verdict that always follows honest and masterful effort—

Success!

Boys' CLOTHING

These blue cheviot suits—3 pieces—for boys of 9 to 16 years, are particularly good value, and just the sort of clothing the boy needs at this season. They're warm, and well-made, stylish and low-priced—$5. Usually sold for about $7.

Double-breasted chinchilla reefers, with velvet collar; lined with warm red flannel; button high at neck. A high-grade coat, though the price is but $6. For boys of 4 to 12 years.

Corduroy trousers, for boys of 3 to 16 years, at 95c.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Dressing Sacques

Warm, cozy, pretty kinds, for women. And they're so cheap. Reduced very sharply from prices already reasonable enough. But it's been decided to close out these various lots, and "hurry-up" prices like these follow:

$1.50 for Choice Among Values up $3

50c for the Usual $1 Kind

These are of eiderdown. Our usual $1 kind. That was a very fair price. The sacques are of ripple eiderdown in solid colors. Full front, fitted back; collar bound with satin or crocheted with zephyr; closing with silk frogs.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

$3 Silk-and-Wool CREPONS at $1.25

Beautiful stuffs! That's why the maker erred—got too enthusiastic—made more than he should have expected to sell readily at three dollars a yard. But there is scarcely a daintier fabric to be found than these silk-and-wool Crepons, for a fancy waist or a dress. And notwithstanding the less-than-half price, the color assortment is as choice as if you had a hundred to pick from. These combinations:

Light Gray and White	Tan and Light Blue	Tan and White
Tan and Old Rose	Gray and Old Rose	Tan and Green
Brown and Tan	Navy Blue and White	Navy Blue and Gold

A remarkable fabric to buy for $1.25 a yard.

Rotunda.

Muslin Underwear

Now it's hurry-time—if you have not secured your share of these white garments. We've maintained unsurpassed variety during this entire month—would have maintained it longer if we could have found manufacturers to duplicate the goods. But we couldn't match July bargains in January—that emphasizes and proves the importance of Wanamaker methods in preparing this January movement. We order our goods six months ahead and let manufacturers work on the garments when they have no other orders. Such prices on equal goods are not possible by later buying; and we do not know of any other store that buys either so early, or in any such quantities. The Wanamaker Sale of White has imitators, but no counterpart. The garments themselves are our best argument—the vast sales during the month express the public approbation of the Wanamaker methods. These price-suggestions to-day:

75c—Of cambric; V neck; yoke of 4 rows of insertion and cluster of fine plaits; neck and sleeves trimmed with lawn hemstitched ruffle.

85c—Of muslin or cambric; high or low neck trimmed with neat embroidery and insertion, or torchon lace and insertion.

Men's ULSTERS

Did you envy the other fellow that had his ulster yesterday? It's almost as snug as being indoors to have one of these brave storm coats protecting you, from hat-rim to ankle. Everything wraps over so snug and tight that there isn't a cranny where the most energetic snow-flake can wiggle through.

Do you want to be ready next time?

Fine Ulsters of all-wool Oxford frieze, with body lined throughout with good plaid lining; iron-yarn sleeve lining and satin facing. Two styles; price—

$12 and $15

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

All Around the Store

Two good Suits for Men. They're new, both of them—one at $12, of Oxford cheviot, fully worth $15—an excellent business suit; the other at $16.50, of black rough-faced cheviot—a splendid $20 value. Both are all-wool, of course.

Boys' Reefers, of all-wool blue cheviot, lined throughout with red flannel, chevrons on sleeve; a warm, snug coat, just the sort for the little fellows to wear on a day like yesterday. $5.

Novel Cigar-cutters. They come from abroad, and their claim to originality lies in the fact that instead of cutting off the end of the cigar, they perforate it—thus affording an equally satisfactory draught. 25c.

Thermometers. A pretty idea consists of a frame of repousse leather in attractive design, on which is mounted an accurate thermometer. $1.50 each.

English Sporting Prints. An interesting collection of these hunting scenes is vividly suggestive of the baying of the hounds, the note of the huntsman's horn, and the healthy, hearty atmosphere of English sporting life. There are pictures of the hunt, the steeplechase, and shooting scenes, for the most part handsomely framed in dark wood. $10 to $22.50.

Alaska Sable Boas, full 2¼ yards long, that were originally $55 each, are now reduced to $30—an exceptional bargain at the price.

Women's Waists—$1. They are of flannel, flannelette and Galatea, with full fronts and French backs; a few with plaited fronts. Some are solid colors, others in fancy stripes. Among them are $1.50 values.

Albatross Waists. Made in the latest style; with full front, plaited at neck; trimmed with 7 rows of small brass buttons; bishop sleeves; turnover collar, also trimmed with brass buttons. In solid colors—light blue, pink, white and black. $3.75 each.

Children's Rubber Boots. Weather like this loses its terrors for the mother who has equipped her children with these safeguards against wet feet and attendant colds. A new kind, for girls, is cut extra high, and has spring heels.

The Symphony. A self-playing organ, on which even the inexpert can produce orchestral effects at will, and give expressive rendering, free from mechanical taint, to a wide range of musical compositions, from symphonies to two-steps. It can also be played like an ordinary organ—and is infinitely richer in the tonal effects produced.

Pillows Specially Priced. The price at which we are now selling pillows of prime white live goose feathers, is lower than ordinarily—50c a pound, instead of 60c. Three sizes—20x30 in., 2½ pounds, at $1.25; 22x30 in., 3 pounds, at $1.50; and 24x30 in., 3½ pounds, at $1.75. Covered with best blue-and-white ticking.

Silver-plated Skewers. For use on the table, for roasts, dishes served en brochette, and so on. In an assortment of neat designs. 75c each.

Pen and Stamp-boxes, attractively finished in glazed morocco, red, dark blue, dark green, purple and maroon, are 50c each.

A Candy Store for Men. In fact, it's intended for all people who are in too much of a hurry to visit the main Candy Store in the basement. It is on the Southeast corner of Broadway and Ninth Street, opposite the main store; and contains always a full assortment of our different grades of pure candy.

English Luncheon Baskets. Infinitely more appetizing as a lunch-carrier than the pasteboard box or brown paper package. Suited for picnics, excursions or traveling generally. Complete outfits—knives, forks, spoons, bottles, plates and glasses, for the lonely party of one to the partie carree. $6.50 to $48, according to elaborateness.

OPERA CAPES

Not this season were handsomer styles shown than this collection embraces. And never in any season were elegant capes priced so favorably for contemplating purchasers. There's but one of a style here now, but a broad variety for all that. The rich Vicuna cloths, in the newest evening shades, combined with Mouffion or Thibet, offer opportunity for wide variation in exquisite effects. And the skillful and original foreign makers have overlooked nor neglected nothing that would tend toward a new, beautiful garment.

These all have linings of quilted satin. Some are in just the single cape style. Some double, some triple.

$35 to $43.50 kinds are now $28

Second floor, Broadway.

SILK JACKETS

Luxuriously warm garments for women. They're quilted neatly. Shown in various solid colors, but mostly in black—that's the generally preferred color. Some are cut long, others just to the waist. Some with sleeves, others sleeveless. All are reduced in price. This group contains values of $3.50 to $9.50.

Prices, $1.75 to $4.75

Perfect goods. But the lots are small, and the half price will make the offering a brief one.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Short Petticoats

A small number of short knit petticoats, that are no longer perfectly fresh in appearance, though none seriously soiled, are re-marked in price this morning. Solid colors and fancy stripes.

Various qualities that were 75c to $1. But now all grouped at one price—

Paris Notes from the office of JOHN WANAMAKER

44, RUE DES PETITES-ECURIES,
PARIS, January 18, 1901.

Now that the frost has set to work in earnest, the "beau monde" is strapping its trunks and starting south. Many of the mondaines have already gone, and many more are about to follow. It is said that the ultra smart have worn out their enthusiasm for the resorts relatively near Paris, and that Egypt has supplanted the Riviera; yet many will nevertheless frequent the "Cote d'Azur" this year, and from the style and quality of the things that are being finished by the leading modistes and dressmaking establishments, the attendance will be no mean one from any point of view.

First of all, the popular evening dress of the Riviera this season will be the Empire gown, and the cloaks made to be worn with these truly regal ball gowns are the three-quarter coats, short-waisted and of a most elegant cut. A superb one, just finished, is of emerald velvet, with sable collar and cuffs, affecting a certain simplicity outside, compensated for by the most luxurious of white brocaded linings, with ruffles of rich lace around the inner edge and on the inner sides of the front. On the other hand, most of the rich "demi-toilettes" dinner gowns and reception gowns seem to have been inspired by the Louis XVI. epoch.

The cretonne applications are seen everywhere, garlands, bouquets, Louis XVI. attributes, embroidered on gauze, mousseline de soie, cloth, cloth of gold and taffetas. On a walking dress it is a vignette of red flowers of cretonne, applied and embroidered on beige or snuff cloth, circling the edge of the skirt between two bands of sable. On mousseline de soie it is laid on with gold threads, breaking into relief here and there with loose petals of mousseline. Nothing is more fairylike than a gown of pale rose mousseline de soie; heavy about the feet, with a tangle of eglantines with their long branches, made of applications, petals in relief and painted stems and leaves.

The present cold snap has afforded some very good skating at the Cercle des Patineurs in the Bois de Boulogne; and the attendance at this fashionable rendezvous has been a very smart one. The pond is of horseshoe shape, and the ice is very carefully looked after. Around the edge of the pond are great burning braziers, and grouped about the cheerful blaze are always fair skaters and their attendant cavaliers. The gowns worn by the elegantes for skating are, in most instances, both suitable and smart, the skirts being short and of some heavy material, the boleros of fur. Occasionally glimpses of dainty petticoats or pale-colored linings can be seen as the wearers skim by. A symphony in black and white was recently worn by a very pretty red-haired girl. The short bell-shaped skirt was of black velveteen. It fitted very closely about the hips, and below the knee formed three ungathered flounces cut on the cross, each one of which was piped at the edge with a very narrow piping of white satin. The accompanying bolero was of caracul and was adorned about the collar and revers with incrustations of ermine. It had elbow sleeves from which came a deep fall of white lace, and the quaint little muff of caracul, with incrustations of ermine, had side frills of the same lace. The accompanying hat was a low and broad toque, the crown of which was of caracul, while the brim was of ermine tails, placed on white tulle and veiled in tulle. The effect of the whole costume was particularly smart and much admired. A good many red toques were also worn with happy effect in the midst of the chilly landscape.

Picture dressing in Paris among the really smart set is entirely confined to evening toilettes, but for morning wear the neat tailor gown is generally adopted. Parisian "grandes dames" nearly always dress suitably to the occasion; they are picturesque and practical by turns and always smart. The Comtesse de Vitalis always wears sumptuous apparel, but in quiet tones—always gray, fawn, white or black—trailing skirts and magnificent furs; small hats, generally black, and much fluffy white at the throat, tulle or lace. Another well-known personage in the Bois in the morning is Madame de Yturbe, whose warm Spanish coloring is admirably set off by a certain blue cloth costume, with priceless silver foxes around her neck. For the time being, silver fox has quite superseded sable and can hardly be obtained to meet the demand.

HOUSE PASSES THE AGRICULTURAL BILL

Incidentally Learns Something New About Polygamy.

An Amendment to Bar Utah College from Benefits Under the Bill Causes a Lively Wrangle.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—After a spirited debate the House this afternoon passed the Agricultural Appropriation bill. When Mr. Landis of Indiana offered an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation should go to the Utah Agricultural College until the Secretary of Agriculture was satisfied that no one connected with the institution was engaged in the practice of polygamy or polygamous relations it aroused Mr. King of Utah, and a lively wrangle ensued.

Mr. King declared vigorously that it was a continuation of "the crusade against polygamy" which resulted in the expulsion of his predecessor, Mr. Roberts, and that no polygamy existed. Mr. Landis retorted by saying that he had learned that there were polygamists in the faculty, and that one trustee had seven wives and thirty-nine children. The amendment was passed, but subsequently, on the demand of Mr. King for a separate vote, it was stricken from the bill.

When the bill was taken up by the House as a Committee of the Whole Mr. Latimer (Dem., S. C.) offered an amendment to increase the appropriations for farmers' bulletins to $50,000. Mr. Mahon (Rep., Penn.) declared that the increased dissemination of farmers' bulletins would not do the farmers any good. He declared that members desired to distribute these bulletins to make themselves popular with the farmers. They thought it was a good political move. He had thought so himself at one time, and had tried it.

"I put it to the test," said he. "I sent a public document to every registered voter in two counties in my district. The result was that I ran behind in every voting precinct in each one of them, and ran ahead in every precinct to which I did not send documents." [Laughter.]

"Perhaps where you distributed the most information you ran worst," suggested Mr. Lacey, (Rep., Iowa,) sententiously.

"That is possible," replied Mr. Mahon, dryly.

Mr. Talbert (Dem., S. C.,) and Mr. Shackleford, (Dem., Mo.,) supported the amendment. Both asserted that the farmers' bulletins were of great value. The latter said that one bulletin on the prevention of mildew on grapes had saved the grape growers of his district thousands of dollars. "Give the farmers a chance," said he.

TELLS WHAT FARMERS WANT.

Mr. Mahon made an impassioned reply. He inveighed against the alleged friends of the farmers who were always howling against railroads and prating of their friendship for the farmer. The farmers of Pennsylvania, he said, were the bone and sinew of his State and knew more about agriculture in an hour than the people at the department in a week. The secret of the prosperity of the farmers of his State was that in the neighborhood of every city and town there was a manufacturing plant which afforded the best market for their products which the world possessed. He represented the farmers and he declared they did not desire extravagant appropriations for the Agricultural Department or the indiscriminate distribution of the "stuff printed about agriculture" by the department.

Mr. Shackleford then replied to Mr. Mahon, referring sarcastically to his economical ideas on the subject of the appropriations for the Agricultural Department, while he pleaded for the payment of big claims for the down-trodden Cramps Shipbuilding Company. He spoke of Pennsylvania as a trust-ridden State and said that whenever a man from the Wild West championed the farmers' cause he was denominated a "Populist."

THE LANDIS AMENDMENT.

Mr. Latimer's amendment was adopted—92 to 86.

Mr. Landis (Rep., Ind.,) offered the following provision as an amendment to the section making appropriations for agricultural colleges:

Provided that no part of this appropriation shall be available for the Agricultural College of Utah until the Secretary of Agriculture shall be satisfied that no Trustee, officer, instructor, or employe of said college is engaged in the practice of polygamy or polygamous relations.

Mr. King, (Dem., Utah,) made a point of order against the amendment. He declared he would not oppose it if it had been offered in good faith, but he considered it simply an aftermath of what had been denominated the crusade against his predecessor, Mr. Roberts. Mr. King said the practice of polygamy in Utah was a thing of the past. No polygamous marriages were now made. A few of those who had entered into such marriages up to 1890 might still be secretly preserving polygamous relations, but they were very few in number.

Mr. Landis, in reply, said he was credibly informed that one of the professors in the Agricultural College had three wives, and that another had two, and that one of the Trustees had seven wives, who had blessed him with thirty-nine children. These statements, he said, had been made by one of the leading papers of Salt Lake City, and so far as he knew the official organ of the Mormon Church had not denied it. If those statements were true, not one single dollar should be appropriated for the support of the institution.

The chair ruled that the amendment was in order, and it was adopted 70 to 44.

MR. KING RETALIATES.

Mr. King, who was taken by surprise by the amendment, hastened to retaliate by offering an amendment providing that no person shall be a teacher in any agricultural college who has engaged in any lynching, or who has been guilty of adultery or improper conduct. The reading of this amendment created a furor. A score of members jumped to their feet with demands for recognition. Mr. Grosvenor, (Rep., Ohio,) was recognized. He said he desired to raise a point of order against the amendment, not one, but half a dozen. He argued that the amendment was an attempt to legislate upon an appropriation bill.

As Mr. Grosvenor proceeded he warmed up, and charged that the amendment was an aspersion upon the teachers in all the agricultural colleges. He became engaged in a wordy duel with Mr. King, in the course of which Mr. King declared that the Ohio member had become a common scold.

"If the law against common scolds were still in force," flashed back Mr. Grosvenor, "you would have been ducked to death long ago."

"And you would have been ducked anterior to that," retorted Mr. King.

At this point the chair intimated that the amendment as drawn was not in order. Mr. King changed it so as to place it in the exact language of the Landis amendment, and making it apply only to Utah and Indiana.

Mr. Payne, (Rep., N. Y.) who was in the chair, thought as the amendment would modify the previous amendment in its effect upon Utah, it would not be in order. Mr. King seized upon this suggestion and modified it so as to make it applicable to Indiana alone. In this form the chair held it was in order.

CONSIDERS IT AN AFFRONT.

Mr. King explained briefly that he would have been perfectly willing to include Utah with Indiana, but could not do so without leaving it subject to a point of order. He again reverted to the amendment already adopted, which he declared was a gratuitous insult to his State. He spoke of the agricultural college of Utah as one that had gained a splendid reputation by its achievements, and paid a high tribute to the Governor of Utah, who, he said, had appointed so-called "gentiles." If teachers had been appointed who were obnoxious they had been appointed by men outside of the pale of the dominant Church. The amendment was an affront to the people of Utah and to the Republican officials of the State.

Mr. Grosvenor here explained to Mr. King that he had not voted for the amendment with the idea of assailing the people of Utah.

Mr. Miers (Dem., Ind.) appealed to Mr. King to withdraw the amendment. It had served the gentleman's purpose, he said, and he appealed to him not to cast a reflection upon the college at Lafayette, Ind. The debate was cut short at this point by a demand for the previous question, and the amendment was voted down by a viva voce vote.

After this action had been taken Mr. King asked the privilege of withdrawing it. He said it had not been his intention to allow it to come to a vote. The request was not granted.

The paragraph appropriating $50,000 for investigating the question of irrigation and for the publication of reports on the subject precipitated another lively debate. Mr. Moody, (Dem., Mass.) a member of the Committee on Appropriations, called attention to this paragraph, and warned the House that it means that Congress would soon be called upon to deal with this whole subject involving vast expenditures of money.

Mr. Newlands (Silver, Nev.) replied to Mr. Moody, pointing out the various methods by which the irrigation of the arid land so much desired by the West could be accomplished.

When the bill was reported to the House Mr. King demanded a separate vote upon the Landis amendment, which was then stricken from the bill by a rising vote, 69 to 19. The bill was then passed and the House adjourned.

AGAINST THE SUBSIDY BILL.

Senator Jones Calls It a Measure to Allow Select Coterie of Ship Owners to Loot the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Speeches were made in the Senate to-day in opposition to the Ship Subsidy bill by Mr. Turley (Dem., Tenn.,) and Mr. Jones, (Dem., Ark.) Mr. Turley, the first speaker, began by pointing out the large expenditures involved. He declared that already the shipping interests had unusual privileges, under the tariff, the postal bounty laws, and in many other ways.

Mr. Turley compared the cost of shipbuilding in various countries. This brought out a statement from Mr. Vest (Dem., Mo.,) that ships could be built for less in the United States than in any other country. As proof of this, he said, Japan had advertised for the lowest and best bid on a cruiser and the American bidders had taken the contract, underbidding the British shipbuilders by 20 per cent. Later, when Russia called for like bids, the American builders again underbid the foreigners. Only two weeks ago, Mr. Vest said, the Cramps had secured a contract for building a cruiser for Turkey as against all other competitors.

Mr. Turley spoke for two hours and was followed by Mr. Jones in opposition to the measure. Mr. Jones said the bill proposed to take millions out of the public treasury and give it as a free gift to certain favored "subsidy beggars." One of the worst features of the measure, he said, was that the vast sums to be paid as subsidies to a few wealthy concerns were wrung from the laboring people and the poor. Mr. Jones said the bill should be entitled "A Bill to Enable a Select Coterie of Shipowners to Loot the United States Treasury." He argued that commercial development must come from our natural advantages and enterprise and not from the legislative stimulus of subsidies.

Mr. Jones spoke for two hours, and then Mr. Berry (Dem., Ark.,) called for the formal reading of the bill. This brought on considerable controversy as to the present form of the bill. Mr. Frye (Rep., Me.,) declared that Democratic Senators were delivering New York Reform Club speeches against the measure, apparently believing it was the Hanna bill of two years ago, whereas it had been entirely changed and bore little resemblance to that measure.

Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.,) said he thought very few Senators knew what was in the bill. He had been "fox hunting" trying to locate amendments and learn what was in the bill, but had been unable to do so. Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.,) also spoke of the kaleidoscopic changes in the bill and the inability of the people to keep track of it. As a matter of information, the detailed reading of the bill was agreed to, and the bill was read.

Mr. Aldrich (Rep., R. I.,) gave notice of two amendments, one providing that applicants for subsidy shall contract to build a new vessel within the United States within three years, and a second, providing that the utmost limit of subsidy shall be fifteen years instead of twenty years, as provided in the bill.

Senator Clay (Dem., Ga.,) offered a number of amendments intended to limit contracts under the bill to ten years instead of twenty, as provided by the bill, and to limit the vessels on which a subsidy may be paid to vessels of 16 knots or less and also to make the terms of the bill applicable to vessels completed or in process of construction in March, 1901.

Early in the day an unsuccessful effort was made to secure agreement to the conference report on the Army Reorganization bill. Consideration of the report was suspended at 2 o'clock, when the Subsidy bill was laid before the Senate as unfinished business. The report will be taken up again early to-morrow.

TO SETTLE THE BILL'S FATE.

Democrats, Populists, and Silverites Confer on the Measure To-day—No One Wants Extra Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A conference of Democrats and their associates of the Populist and Silver Republican faith will be held to-morrow as a result of the declaration yesterday by Mr. Frye that he intended to push the consideration of the Ship Subsidy bill to the exclusion of all other business, yielding only to a vote of the Senate. This conference will determine the fate of the bill. If the opponents of the measure decide to continue a stiff fight and debate the measure at great length, it will mean defeat at this session, with the short time remaining to pass the appropriation bills.

The conference also will take into consideration whether the minority will desire to take the responsibility of defeating a party measure on the part of the majority. Some of the opponents of the bill on the Democratic side feel that if the Republicans are determined to pass the bill, the minority should not go further than to state their objections fully and vote against it, and to let the Republicans take the responsibility which is theirs.

It also develops that no one wants an extra session and that one will be avoided if there is any possible way of doing so. It is even said that the Spooner bill will be passed in order to avoid such session after the 4th of March. Republican leaders say that they believe an extra session can be avoided. They also say that the Democrats must decide whether they will take the responsibility of defeating the Subsidy bill and, if it is demonstrated that they are willing to take that responsibility, then other necessary legislation will be pressed rapidly to avoid an extra session. Representative Cannon does not believe there will be an extra session.

"I do not think an extra session is necessary," he said, "and I do not see any indications of one being called. We will go right along with the business before us and will proceed in an orderly manner. It is true the Cuban Constitution must be acted on by Congress, but it has not reached us yet, and there is no particular reason why Congress should be called in extraordinary session for the purpose of considering that instrument. If it arrives before adjournment there may be time in which to act on it, but if it does not reach us in time no damage will be done if the Cubans must wait until the next regular session.

"We have stood sponsor for Cuba to the world, and should have the whip hand for some time to come, and wait until the Cubans demonstrate their ability to govern themselves before we get out of the island."

Larger Pension for Philip's Widow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The House Committee on Pensions to-day recommended an increase from $30 to $50 per month in the pension of the widow of Rear Admiral Philip, who participated in the battle off Santiago.

Favorable Action on Banking Bills.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The House Committee on Banking and Currency acted to-day favorably on the bills "to amend the National banking laws so as to permit National banks to consider and treat their surplus as capital in the restrictions on loans," and amending the banking law as to the designation of public depositories.

Congressional Notes.

In the House yesterday Mr. Taylor, Chairman of the Committee on Elections Number One, submitted the report on the contested election case of Walker vs. Rhea, from the Ninth Virginia District. The committee found that while gross frauds and irregularities occurred in the election, they fell very far short of changing the result. The committee, therefore, recommended that Mr. Rhea, the sitting member, who is a Democrat, should retain his seat. Messrs. Linney and Davenport dissent from the conclusion of the majority.

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday heard the members of the Board of General Appraisers in advocacy of the bill for the retirement of Appraisers who shall have served fifteen years' service, or who shall have reached the age of sixty-five years. R. W. Moore of New York was heard on the bill increasing the compensation of Customs Examiners from $2,500 to $4,000 annually. The committee did not act on the measures.

Representative Wanger of Pennsylvania has introduced in the House a bill to establish a national military park at the place where Washington crossed the Delaware. The bill authorized the President to appoint a commission to locate definitely the territory occupied by Washington at the crossing of the Delaware at what is known as "Washington's Crossing," and appropriates $100,000 for its acquisition.

MR. CLAYTON WANTS OFFICE.

New York Congressmen Urge the President to Make the Brooklynite a Paymaster in the Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—President McKinley to-day received a Congressional delegation of considerable size at the White House. It consisted of about twenty members of the New York delegation in the House and a number of Representatives from Southern States. The object of the visit was to urge the claims of Col. Bertram T. Clayton of Brooklyn, the Representative from the Fourth District, to a commission under the new Army bill. Both parties were represented and the spokesman of the delegation was Representative Sherman of New York, a Republican.

Col. Clayton wants to be appointed a Paymaster in the army, with the rank of Major. He is a Democrat and was defeated for re-election last year, going down in the general Republican landslide, although he was personally popular and his re-election had been expected. He is a graduate of West Point, having finished there in the class of 1886. He was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Eleventh Infantry, and served until 1888, when he resigned to go into the business of civil engineering.

When the project of adding some cavalry troops to the National Guard of New York was mooted, he interested himself in the subject and organized Troop C of Brooklyn, of which he became Captain. The troop volunteered for the Spanish war, and Clayton won warm commendation for his work at Camp Black and Camp Alger. The troop was ordered to Porto Rico, where it participated in all the small battles and skirmishes of that campaign.

Clayton and his men received a great welcome on their return to Brooklyn, and Clayton was promptly nominated for Congress and elected by a sweeping majority. He was afterward made Colonel of the Fourteenth Regiment, which position he still holds. His record in Congress has been characterized by independence.

The President, after listening to what Mr. Sherman had to say, spoke in most favorable terms of Col. Clayton. It is believed that the request will be granted, although the President will not make any definite promises until after the Army bill becomes a law.

PANICKY FEELING IN HAVANA.

Rumor that Government Will Be Turned Over to Cubans Causes Apprehension.

HAVANA, Jan. 30.—Business was in a panicky condition to-day in consequence of the rumor that the United States would soon turn over the Government to the Cubans. Stocks dropped two points and business men are considering the cancellation of large orders.

Governor General Wood and Collector Bliss are being besieged for definite information regarding the intention of the United States Government. The merchants say the uncertainty is killing business, and they believe Washington should declare its purposes concerning Cuba.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN CUBA.

Convention Inserts Clause Providing for It in the Constitution.

HAVANA, Jan. 30.—The Cuban Constitutional Convention to-day voted by a large majority to insert a clause in the Constitution allowing universal suffrage. Article 24 of Section 3, relating to the suspension of rights of citizens when the security of the State required it and in time of invasion, was taken from the table. Señor De Quesada moved to strike out the clause "when the safety of the State requires this suspension." He said that he believed the inviolability of the home should be maintained in all circumstances.

The convention, however, voted to suspend the rights outlined in Article 24, with the exception of the secrecy of correspondence guaranteed in Article 11, allowing, nevertheless, that the will of the people is sovereign.

The principle of minority representation was adopted.

CORPORATIONS IN PORTO RICO.

Senator Jones Wants to Know What Favors They Have Received.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Senator Jones of Arkansas to-day introduced the following resolution in the Senate:

That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to inform the Senate whether the Executive Council of Porto Rico has undertaken to guarantee dividends to corporations doing business in that island, and if so, to state all the facts in the premises, and also whether said Executive Council has donated public property of any character to any individual firms or corporations, and, if so, to state the quantity and character of such public property so proposed to be donated and its value, and also by what authority of law any of said acts have been done by said Executive Council.

The resolution was agreed to.

Senator Jones said, in reply to an inquiry, that he had presented the resolution upon the strength of information contained in a San Juan (Porto Rico) newspaper of the 10th inst., saying that the Council originally had agreed to guarantee dividends to the French Railway Company, but, in default of that action, had donated property to that company valued at $100,000, and agreed to exempt the company from taxation.

Maine Relief Fund Reduced to $1,300.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The relief fund raised by the American people to aid the families of the victims of the Maine disaster has now dwindled down to about $1,300. This balance is now in the hands of Capt. Charles D. Sigsbee, Chief of the Naval Intelligence Bureau, who was in command of the battleship when she was blown up. Applications for a share of the fund have been few of late, but those that have been received have come over a circuitous route, owing to ignorance as to the whereabouts of the person now in charge of the remainder of the money. Such applications should be addressed directly to Capt. Sigsbee at the Navy Department.

PHILIPPINE CHURCH PROBLEM.

Many Native Leaders Assert Their Fealty to the Catholic Organization.

MANILA, Jan. 30.—All the Filipino leaders of the Federal Party assert their continued fealty to the Catholic Church, excepting Buencamino, Rosario, and Ner. The Church authorities, while intimating unofficially that there is no intention of returning the friars to the localities where the people object to them, have not assured the representatives of the Government to this effect. Both the legislative and executive authorities are determined to permit the utmost freedom of worship, but Judge Taft (President of the United States Philippine Commission) said to-day that it was an undetermined question where the Government ought to draw the line in localities where the presence of the friars may tend to cause unrest and disturbance. The attempt of Buencamino and his confreres about Tondo to organize an Evangelical Church was precipitated by arrests made, on the information of priests, of certain alleged supporters of the insurrection. The question of the release of some of them is pending.

There is much speculation as to the extent to which Buencamino will be able to control religious sentiment in his ward, in which reside the poorest class of natives. Little interest in the matter is apparent in the Binondo and neighboring wards.

Dr. Bourns, the only American on the Federal Party Directorate, says the Evangelical movement was originated by the political leaders at Tondo and was disapproved by the party directors.

The American soldiers and civilians deprecate the attempts to mix religious agitations with the peace reforms which the Federal Party has fathered and extended. While the religious belief of the Filipinos is apparently sincere, it is impossible to predict to what extent it may be swayed by their leaders, aided by Protestant missionaries. Nothing has yet been accomplished in the line of wholesale conversions to Protestantism in Manila. Buencamino is erecting the framework of an evangelical organization and hopes shortly to gather a big membership.

MOSQUITO FLEET SAFE.

Notice of Its Arrival at the Canaries Received in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Navy Department has been notified of the arrival of the mosquito fleet at the Canary Islands. This fleet of small vessels consists of the cruiser Annapolis, the converted yacht Frolic, and the tugs Wompatuck and Piscataqua. They left the Bermudas Jan. 12, and are en route to Manila for patrol duty in the Philippines.

The department had been much alarmed as to the safety of the fleet, because merchant shipping in the same waters has suffered severely. Secretary Long sent the following cablegram to the senior officer of the fleet, Commander Rohrer, of the Annapolis:

Washington, Jan. 30.

Annapolis, Teneriffe, Canaries:

Department congratulates you and squadron on successful passage.

Another dispatch just received announces the arrival at Bermuda of the big naval collier Caesar. She is twenty-five days out, and much apprehension was felt for her safety.

GOVERNMENT REFUSED HELP.

Would Not Interfere Between a Corporation and Santo Domingo.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The press reports about the repudiation of its obligations to the Santo Domingo Improvement Company by the Government of that republic have now been officially confirmed by Minister Powell at Haiti. The United States will, however, take no action. The Dominican Minister of Foreign Affairs has promised to visit this country and explain the action of his Government, and the United States has agreed to make no move until he does so.

The company has asked the Government to take action to prevent the annulment of the contract, but has been informed that the Government cannot enforce contracts.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President to-day sent the following nominations to the Senate:

Thomas B. Hildebrand of Iowa, Receiver of Public Moneys at St. Michael, Alaska.

Army.—Volunteers—First Lieut. M. C. Gustin, Eleventh Cavalry, to be Captain; Second Lieut. Emory S. West, Eleventh Cavalry, to be First Lieutenant.

Regulars.—Infantry—Second Lieutenants to be First Lieutenants: Clyffard Game, Eleventh; George W. Stuart, Seventh; William T. Patten, Thirteenth; Fred B. Kerr, Twenty-second; Lawrence D. Cabell, Fifth; William T. Merry, Twenty-third; Fred R. Brown, Ninth.

FOUND HER FIANCE DEAD.

George Meismeier Had Been Ill and Miss Cunningham Called to See Him.

A young woman who was soon to marry a German chemist went to see her fiancé yesterday and found him lying in bed, dead—George Meismeier, who boarded with Mrs. Schaffer, at 66 Throop Avenue, Brooklyn. He was engaged to Lucy Cunningham, employed at the same chemical works, and they had almost completed arrangements for their wedding. A week ago Meismeier was taken ill with pleurisy and obliged to take to his bed, and both Miss Cunningham and the landlady nursed him. His condition was not considered serious by any means, and when Miss Cunningham went to see him yesterday afternoon it was with a light heart that she tripped up the stairs to his room with delicacies for the invalid in her hands. Opening the door, she cried:

"See, George, what I've brought you."

But no response came from the man, although his eyes were open and fixed on her.

Alarmed, the young woman summoned the landlady, and then it was seen that Meismeier was dead.

The young woman had the body taken to an undertaking establishment at 55 Bartlett Street, from where the funeral will take place to-morrow. The burial will be in Evergreens Cemetery, where Miss Cunningham has purchased a grave.

MOVE TO BALK ADDICKS.

Delaware House Tries to Prevent His Appointment by the Governor.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 30.—The House to-day amended the joint resolution adopted by that body yesterday and changed the date of adjournment from March 1 to March 8. Feb. 20 was decided on as the final date for receiving new business.

As United States Senator Kenney's term will not expire until March 4, it is intimated that the date of adjournment was changed in order to prevent the appointment of a Senator by the Governor, which would be possible if a vacancy occurred during a recess of the General Assembly. It is the opinion that if such a contingency arose Gov. Hunn would appoint Mr. Addicks.

The only change in the balloting to-day was a vote cast for ex-United States Senator Anthony Higgins by Representative Hitchen, who had been voting for Mr. Du Pont.

Other Senatorial Contests.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 30.—The vote on United States Senator to-day was: Allen, (Fusion,) 38; Hitchcock, (Fusion,) 47; W. H. Thompson, (Fusion,) 4; D. E. Thompson, 35; Melkiejohn, 29; Hinshaw, 12; Rosewater, 18; Currie, 20; Halner, 4; Crounse, 8; Martin, 6; Kinkaid, 4; Berge, (Fusion,) 22; Smythe, (Fusion,) 4; scattering, 9.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 30.—To-day's ballot for United States Senator resulted as follows: Mantle, (Rep.,) 29; Frank, (Dem.,) 24; MacGinnis, (Dem.,) 10; scattering, 24.

SALEM, Oregon, Jan. 30.—The Senatorial vote to-day was: Corbett, 28; Smith, 26; McBride, 18; Herrman, 7; Moore, 2; Fulton, 2; Williams, 1; Lowell, 1; paired, 2; not voting, 1; absent, 1.

Bowery Republican Headquarters.

The Campaign Committee of the Republican Club has decided to pursue, in the coming campaign, the same line of operations which proved so successful last year. As the first move in this direction the committee determined to again establish a general headquarters on the Bowery. The building at 274 Bowery will be fitted up. Meetings will be held every week from now until the campaign becomes active, when noonday and evening meeting will be regularly held.

TIRED OF SYMPATHY STRIKE.

Boilermakers Confess that Their Struggle Has Done No Good.

The strike at the shop of the De La Vergne Refrigerating Company, in Port Morris, which started eight months ago, was ended yesterday as far as the boilermakers are concerned. The strike began with the machinists, who demanded the abolition of piece work, and the boilermakers, who belong to the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, went out in sympathy. They admitted that they had no grievances of their own, and that it was not binding on them to strike.

The failure of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and James O'Connell, President of the International Association of Machinists, who had a conference with the company on Monday, to settle the strike of the machinists, discouraged the boilermakers. They decided that, as they had no grievances of their own, the game was not worth the candle and abandoned the strike. Notices to other unions that they were on strike were withdrawn yesterday.

The boilermakers admit that their sympathetic strike has done no good, and that they have nothing to show to offset their eight months of idleness. They have not a single strike in the New York district at present, and their union has no grievances, they say, against the De La Vergne Company. This action, it was stated, will soon end the strike of the machinists.

VOTING UNDER ORDERS.

A machine-made Senator can be trusted to vote as his maker bids him. But a legislator who votes against his convictions for a vicious bill which his party organization has ordered the Legislature to pass is a poor sort of public servant. This appears to be the position of Senators ELLSWORTH and MARSHALL in respect to the Stranahan Police bill. They frankly confess their disapproval of the dual power of removal, yet they voted for the bill. We may add that a Governor who should sign a bill which he believed to be unsound in obedience to the behest of the organization would be an unworthy and dangerous public servant. If Gov. ODELL shares the conviction of the two Senators we have mentioned he ought to veto the Police bill.

The bill is stupid as well as vicious. Gov. ODELL is not stupid and he is very far from being vicious. Why should he sign such an objectionable and uncalled-for measure? We believe it to be a moral certainty that the Governor considers the principle of this bill to be wrong. Nobody but a perfectly unscrupulous machine person could undertake to defend the proposition that the Mayor's subordinates and appointees should be made subject to removal by the Governor. It is outrageous, insulting to common sense, and disgraceful to its sponsors. Why should the Governor sign it? Legislation that is inherently bad and is moreover offensive to all respectable public opinion in the community which it affects and affronts cannot directly or indirectly help the Republican Party. Why should anybody think that the Governor will sign such a bill? The hypothesis must rest upon an antecedent distrust of his intelligence and of his public virtue.

Gov. ODELL is thought to have made a very good beginning. But he must see that his probationary period is by no means past. If he should make himself the accomplice or show himself to be the obedient instrument of the Republican organization by giving his approval to the Police bill the good effect of his message would be quite effaced and he would continue his executive career without that public respect and confidence that we should suppose he would not willingly forfeit. Whether he signs or vetoes the bill, the act will be conspicuous. Everybody will know about it, and everybody will know at once that his relation to the party machine is established one way or the other for his term of office.

A SCHEME OF PRETENSE.

It is part of the tactics of those who are trying to push through the Hanna-Payne Subsidy bill to meet a demand for amendment by some provision which, to the eyes of those who are not familiar with the facts, meets the objection, but which in reality preserves all the benefits which the bill originally gave to the specially favored intereats. For example: At the recent conference of Republican Senators it was suggested that the objection to the twenty-year contract originally provided for by the bill be met by reducing the period to fifteen years. This would seem a substantial concession until it is remembered that the profitable life of a first-class vessel does not exceed fifteen years, so the subsidy seekers can well afford to submit to this amendment.

Then there is the provision for paying subsidy to foreign-built ships owned by or under construction for Americans on Feb. 1, 1899. Why should the United States Government, under a scheme intended to build up its own shipbuilding industry, pay subsidy on foreign-built ships which happened to be owned by Americans at a certain fixed date in the past? To meet the general complaint on this subject Mr. HANNA and his associates now propose an amendment by which the number of foreign-built steamers thus admitted to American registry and to the subsidy is to be limited, and that not more than four of such ships belonging to any single steamship company or line are to receive subsidy. Now, the International Steamship Company, which is admitted to be by far the largest beneficiary under the bill, conducts two lines, one to Southampton and the other to Antwerp. It has five foreign-built ships on the Red Star Line to Antwerp, and will have four foreign-built ships on the line to Southampton when the vessels now under construction are completed. This amendment apparently permits each of these separate lines to receive subsidy on four foreign-built ships. So that, in this concession to a public demand in reference to foreign-built ships, the proposed amendment will quite suit the requirements of the International Navigation Company. This is in line with the amendment recently proposed to limit to $2,000,000 the annual subsidy to vessels of over twenty-knot speed. For, as was immediately pointed out, the only vessels of that speed which could be subsidy earners were the fast ships of the American Line, which could all be paid full subsidies at a little less than the $2,000,000 limit.

In almost every speech in reference to the bill its supporters declare that it is not intended to benefit any single interest or group of interests. Yet this single International Navigation Company, with its two lines and with its vessels now under construction, will have in all a fleet of fifteen ships, and when this entire fleet is in operation will receive, under the terms of the bill, out of the public funds about $2,500,000 annually, or something over 17 per cent. per annum on its capital.

Senator FRYE arrogantly took the middle of the road with this bill on Tuesday, and declared that he would not "yield to anybody for anything" during its consideration. With only a month of the session left, this private job holds the right of way. The public interest may go hang, but the shipowning gentlemen who got up this bill shall not be disappointed by the Republican Party. But Mr. PERKINS, Republican Senator from California, says that he will not vote for subsidies to foreign-built ships. Republicans, as well as Democrats, are demanding that the bill be made what its promoters claim it to be. The farmers and exporters, who have been told that it will benefit them by increasing exports, demand that the subsidy be then paid on the basis of cargoes actually carried, as shown by the manifests filed in Custom Houses. Those who desire to see a trained body of American sailors available for use in time of need demand that on subsidized ships either none but American citizens be employed, or, if foreigners are employed, the subsidy, which is paid on the basis of the higher American wages, be reduced accordingly; and our shipbuilders, together with all who believe that we ought to be able to build our own ships, demand that no subsidy, under any excuse whatever, be paid to foreign-built ships. Waiving for the moment all free-ship theories and all opposition to Government aid to particular industries, let the backers of the bill make it what they say it is and what they can make it by a few very simple amendments which are being urged from all quarters.

The special subsidies which the United States Government has given in the past are admitted to have been absolute failures, to say nothing of the scandal which one of them involved. The present scheme is of far more importance to the general business community than any special subsidy could be, for it commits the American people, for twenty or thirty years to come, to the principle that success in foreign commerce is to be achieved not by the business ability and energy which are now carrying it forward, but by means of political favor and Government donations in aid of dividends. If the majority of the people of the United States desire this, they are certainly entitled to make the experiment, whatever the result may be; but the supporters of the scheme may be fairly asked by a public which is to pay the subsidy to strip the bill of its uncertainties and at least make it what they claim it to be. Let it be admitted that it is desirable that we should build our own ships, that we should have our own sailors, and that exports should be increased. The present bill either is or is not drawn so as to promote these objects. If it is so drawn, these amendments will not defeat the purpose of the bill, and if it is not so drawn, then the small circle who are so strenuously pressing the bill are not keeping faith with the public. These gentlemen are respectfully requested to choose either horn of the dilemma they find the more comfortable.

"OVERLORDSHIP" IN THE TRANSVAAL.

No doubt that was a curious phrase in the proclamation at Pretoria of the accession of EDWARD VII. and one that was calculated to excite the attention which it has in fact excited. He was proclaimed there, it seems, as King of Great Britain and Ireland, Emperor of India, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, and also as "Supreme Lord of and Over the Transvaal."

It is a striking appellation. It is simply the translation into rhetorical English of the claim of British "suzerainty" over the two republics. The claim of suzerainty, which meant in practice a prohibition upon the republics of making foreign treaties without the assent of Great Britain, was one to which they assented for many years, before Mr. CHAMBERLAIN came in as one of the leading figures in imperial politics, and magnified his office to the extent of forcing on a war in South Africa. The results of his statesmanship are visible to all the world. Any Englishman who thinks that the prestige of Great Britain is as great now as it was in the month of September, 1899, must have stuck close to his native island in the meantime and refrained from reading any but stanchly "imperialistic" British organs. The actual result must be very visible to the members of the British Cabinet. Lord SALISBURY, since he delivered his celebrated ultimatum that "not a shred of independence" must be left to either republic must have been frequently led to question his own wisdom in that particular utterance.

A change of monarchs, such as has been brought about by the death of the Queen and the accession of a new King, has this great advantage at such a juncture, that it enables the Ministry of the day to revise its own conclusions. If it has made a huge and perilous mistake such a change gives it a chance to correct the mistake. Under the form of a royal proclamation, it has now an opportunity to retract the extreme claims which it has made, and which have nerved every man of Dutch descent in South Africa to take up arms against it, or to aid and abet every man who did so. If Great Britain is willing to fall back upon her "suzerainty," very much of this opposition will lose its sting by losing its substantial and responsible backing. So we see that the change, even of constitutional and very limited monarchies, may perhaps work great changes in the political world. To the great majority of Americans we believe that any occasion that might occur which should enable Great Britain to retrieve her political errors and to resume her place as the leader of Europe, instead of abdicating that place, would be to that extent sincerely welcome.

THE HELPFUL FRIEND.

Fire Commissioner SCANNELL's defense of the noble virtue of constancy to friends reveals a perfect understanding of the Tammany philosophy of politics. I do buy about all the supplies of the Fire Department through this agent MARKS, said the Commissioner. He is my friend. I believe in sticking by friends. I shall stick by MARKS.

To Fire Commissioner SCANNELL the friendship of MARKS is dearer and more useful in his business than the confidence of the public. And this is the great maxim of policy for all the statesmen of Tammany, to stick by their friends and let the public rave. Three years ago all that part of the public that is by conviction opposed to the rule of Tammany proved itself unequal to the task of defeating it at the polls. Since that time what Tammany man has showed the least concern about public opinion? CROKER defies it, the Mayor daily flouts it, and SCANNELL, even in the awkward moment of exposure, exhibits a calm but complete contempt for it. Not one of these men would sacrifice a friend or close a single one of his own sources of revenue to win the approval of all the respectable men and women in the City of New York. They simply don't care what the public thinks of them. But they are punctilious about the obligations of friendship.

This is the most natural thing in the world, and the system works to perfection. MARKS, we have no doubt, is a gentleman who stirs around on election day. At least, he is typical of the very large class of the beneficiaries of Tammany friendships who make it their business to control votes for the organization. There is a multitude of them, and they control legions of votes of the ignorant and the mercenary, every one of which is faithfully cast for Tammany. This is the reward of constancy in friendship. Mr. SCANNELL understands his business. The public cannot do him any harm. MARKS can do him much good.

Now the cost of MARKS's keep comes out of the despised public. His commissions on purchases for the Fire Department, said to be 10 per cent., which seems to be a beggarly bounty to so true a friend, are not a legitimate charge on the public funds, are, in fact, illegitimate, and so closely resembling peculation that it would take a jury to determine the difference. The public maintains him because he is a friend of Mr. SCANNELL, and his repayment of the obligation is to SCANNELL, not to the public, to which he renders no service whatever. The taxpayers' money is used to keep the taxeaters in power. That is the invariable practice with the taxeating gentry. We hope Mr. SCANNELL will pardon us if we refer to Mr. MARKS's commissions as a "rake-off." We are afraid the term will be quite unfamiliar to him, but if he happens to have some Tammany friend who is acquainted with the system of protection to gambling houses in this city he can readily get a gloss on the word that will make it comprehensible. This "rake-off" is an unearned beneficial interest in the public funds. So long as Commissioner SCANNELL permits MARKS to enjoy it MARKS will be true and helpful to him; and Mr. SCANNELL, defying the Controller and indifferent to what the community thinks about it, announces that he shall stick by MARKS.

The incident is of manifest value as a proof of the Tammany spirit and practice. So long as the public consents to pay the bills incurred in these manifestations of Tammany constancy there is no visible reason why the virtue should not continue to be cultivated.

JUDGES AND JURIES.

We own that the data thus far supplied are not sufficient to enable us to understand the attitude which Justice MACLEAN took in the trial of the case of DILLON against the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. And yet the data seem to suffice. And, to many of our readers enjoying a position of "greater freedom and less responsibility" than our own, to quote a famous remark of Mr. GLADSTONE's, they may have very probably sufficed as the materials for a summary judgment of the Judge.

Somebody was suing the Metropolitan Street Railway Company for damages. There is nothing strange about that. Somebody is doing that every working day. Some of the suits are meritorious. Some of them have no merit whatever. The temptation, largely supplied by the management of the road itself, to begin action against it, is found irresistible by large and increasing numbers of citizens. It is quite right for the road to protect itself by inquisition of particular cases. It is even a matter of evident caution for it to equip itself with a detective bureau to expose the hollowness of pretended causes of action against it. When this bureau shows symptoms of becoming, as it has in some cases, a bureau for the subornation of perjury, the case becomes much altered.

But all this is a "question for the jury." The present case was a question for the Judge. And, accordingly, Judge MACLEAN decided it. The plaintiff, represented by our sparkling political friend, Col. ABE GRUBER, had "exhausted her challenges." After the exhaustion entera a talesman who declares, answering the questions of Col. GRUBER, that he is in the employ of the Metropolitan Company as a track foreman. Seeing that this talesman is subject to a peremptory challenge from his employer as to his means of livelihood, and that this challenge is fairly certain to be exercised if he allows a large verdict to be found against the company by a jury of which he is a member, Col. GRUBER appeals to the equity ear of the Court, having estopped himself from appealing to its purely legal ear. The answer he got was "Proceed with the trial." Col. GRUBER thereupon asked for a dismissal of the complaint, with the view of getting rid of the obnoxious juryman. It was his last resort, and it compelled his client to wait for an indeterminate time and to begin a new action, at the risk of not being alive to profit by the result of her new action and at the certainty of a long and costly delay.

Perhaps this is all right. Perhaps it is "the administration of justice according to law." But it does not, on the surface, wear that aspect. We should like very much to defend Justice MACLEAN against the obvious and sinister suggestions of the record, as given in the newspapers to lay readers unfamiliar with the sublime mysteries of jurisprudence. But it is evident we shall get no help from him. To the reporters who applied to him for information, struck by the apparent singularity of his behavior, all that he would say was that Col. GRUBER "was a very clever lawyer." Out of respect to the bench we decline to draw the obvious conclusion from Justice MACLEAN's decisions and refusals to give explanations. But we wish he would assist us to give some other than the obvious explanations.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—We are informed on indisputable authority that nobody is contemplating the erection at Lenox of a Summer residence modeled either closely or remotely after a mediaeval castle of the Scottish or other variety. The grief which we felt—and expressed—when the planning of such a castle was reported was, therefore, a waste of good emotion that might have been profitably utilized in other directions, but perhaps what was unnecessary as criticism and condemnation will serve as warning and advice in regions remote from this centre of enlightenment, and if that should happen to be the case the loss would not be total. Anyway, New York is justified of its architects by our later and better information, and the sorrowful surprise with which the news that one of them was preparing to violate the fundamental principles of his art was received, can, now that the news is known to have been false, be replaced by the happy conviction, which it momentarily displaced, that the architects of the metropolis would discourage the construction of mediaeval keeps in places where mediaeval keeps would justify either lamentation, anger, or derision. The subject must not be dropped, however, without adding that New York is justified of her wealthy residents as well as of her architects by this refutation of a grisly rumor. As there is to be no castle, it is evident that nobody wanted one, for what our wealthy residents want they get, if not with the assistance of trained advisers, then without it.

—One bit of testimony brought out this week in a libel suit on trial in London cannot fail to be a little embarrassing to that eminent British journalist a good deal of whose time since his recent arrival in this country has been devoted to telling us what a nice lot of people we are and how much he admires us. For in the suit mentioned, the defendant, who is described as "an American newspaper man," had to do what he could toward showing that his method of securing and selling certain private documents was, if not exactly admirable, at least more or less legitimate and pardonable. With this object in view, he exhibited a letter in which our amiable visitor Mr. HARMSWORTH wrote: "Seeing that TURNBULL has expressed regret, and, as his serious offense was really due to his American training, I will give him another trial." Now, the "serious offense" in question had caused Mr. HARMSWORTH to discharge Mr. TURNBULL from his employ, but, on thinking the matter over and giving due weight to the "American training," the decree of banishment was revoked! The episode apparently reveals that there exists—or existed—in Mr. HARMSWORTH'S mind an impression that American newspaper men are trained to do things which, for reasons of morals or the proprieties, English newspaper men are not expected or even allowed to do. The thought of this is very harrowing, for the criticism involved casts a gloom of some density over the compliments we have all enjoyed so thoroughly.

Fame and Death, upon a day,
Met and chatted on the way.

"Greeting, friend," in kindest tones,
Murmured Death, with happy smile,
"Let us rest beside the way.
Need we hurry all the while?"

"I must hurry," answered Fame,
"Further down the way I haste.
One abides there whom I must Bid my sweetest fruits to taste."

"Rest you, rest you, brother mine,"
Death insisted, graciously,
"But an hour ago that one

ANDRADE GOES TO AID VENEZUELAN REBELS

Ex-President Moves Against His Enemy and Conqueror.

CASTRO'S POSITION INSECURE

Question Is Not Who Shall Be President, but How Soon Shall Castro Be Driven Out.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Jan. 30.—Señor Andrade, the former President of Venezuela, sailed for Santiago de Cuba and Havana yesterday, incognito. It is rumored that he intends meeting a filibustering expedition which is reported to be on its way to Venezuela by way of Cuba. He is said to have purchased arms and to have arranged the details of the expedition when in New York last Autumn.

There is no doubt Andrade is interested in the revolution and in the efforts to overthrow President Castro, who drove him from the Presidency in 1899 and caused him to seek refuge here. Insiders in Porto Rico, however, express the opinion that Andrade does not aspire to resuming the Presidency of Venezuela. He is considered to be a weak man by those who know him here.

It is reported here that the Venezuelan gunboat Restaurador, formerly George Gould's yacht Atalanta, is on her way from Brooklyn, N. Y., with orders from President Castro to intercept Senhor Andrade's filibustering expedition in the Caribbean Sea.

Passengers on board the Red "D" Line steamer Philadelphia, from La Guayra Jan. 27, which left for New York to-day, asserted that Caracas was in a state of suppressed excitement when the steamer left Venezuelan waters. President Castro's troops had defeated the insurgents near Cumana, and a comparatively unimportant mutiny among the troops in barracks at Caracas had been quelled.

They also reported that the Venezuelan Congress would meet Feb. 20 to legalize the acts of President Castro, who, since the expulsion of Senhor Andrade, has been a dictator, acting without electoral sanction. It was further gathered from the passengers that a general uprising might take place about the time of the assembling of Congress, but that the Nationalist Party, a prominent organization in Venezuela, had offered its services to President Castro to maintain peace.

The latest issue of The Venezuelan Herald contains an editorial, under the caption "The Remedy Against Revolution," in which the uprising is clearly admitted between the lines. The paper is a Castro organ and inspired.

A gentleman of this city, who is well informed in Venezuelan affairs, and who has been closely watching the trend of events in that country, said yesterday:

"The situation in Venezuela, so far as relates to the general uprising, is hourly becoming more apparent and pronounced. The rumors of an expedition under Gen. Ignacio Andrade being about to sail from Santiago de Cuba may be credited so far as the expedition is concerned, but that it will take its departure from the port named may be questioned, as such an act might provoke the intervention of the United States authorities. It is known that it will not be many days before an expedition will positively reach Venezuelan shores, and that its members are warm supporters of Gen. Andrade.

"Gen. Pietri, whose name is mentioned in the latest cables, is a brilliant officer of Corsican extraction. He was formerly the confidential secretary of the late Gen. Jacquin Crespo. Gen. Pietri is one of Andrade's closest friends, and will carry with him almost the entire old Crespo following, among which are the plaiamen or cowboy element of the republic, a mounted force not to be despised in times of war.

"No one will dispute the fact that Gen. Hernandez "El Mocho," the greatest revolutionist ever in Venezuela, will be an important factor in coming events. At present he is a prisoner in the fortress at Maricaibo, but possibly Castro may release him at the last moment to take sides against Andrade. There is a strong belief, however, that when Hernandez obtains his freedom he will aid Andrade, but with the positive assurance that when the latter shall have completed his term of office he, Hernandez, shall be the successor, and there are many leading Venezuelans who believe this action will be taken, especially as two of his friends recently attempted to have Castro release him, but Castro feared to trust him and would not consent.

"It is said that these distinguished emissaries, who had been in exile for some months, then appealed to Andrade, who gave the matter favorable consideration.

"Every fortress, prison, and jail in Venezuela at the present time is overcrowded with political prisoners, and it would not be surprising that at an early day we may hear of a general jail delivery and thus let loose upon the several districts a small army of men sworn to do up Castro.

"The first trouble among the troops surrounding Castro at Caracas some weeks ago was due to the fact that a certain day had been fixed for the general uprising, but the leaders in the outlying districts could not complete their plans by the date fixed, and, telegraphic communication being suddenly cut off, there was no means of communicating with the garrison, so that the premature action was but a flash in the pan.

"The second uprising was the result of Castro's orders to shoot down a large number of the leading men of the capital, an un-heard-of procedure in the methods of revolution, and naturally the chief of the battalion of troops refused to obey the order, and therefore to-day it would appear that Castro can no longer place any reliance upon his bodyguard.

"Advices received in the city yesterday show that the uprising is spreading far and wide, and that a large reserve force is on the Colombian frontier ready to take part in the overthrow of Castro, who is in bad odor with the Colombian Government for the aid and comfort he gave to the rebels of that republic.

"The question of the hour is not so much who shall be President, as to how soon Castro shall be overthrown, driven out of the country, or killed. Never in the history of the republic has the Chief Executive ever dared to issue an order for the shooting of a political enemy, save once, and the order which was obeyed cost two lives and the degradation of the man who issued it, and he was driven out of the country and died in exile.

"The correspondence from the points involved in this unhappy state of affairs continues to harp upon the asphalt business. All Venezuelans are too much engaged in their revolutionary work to bother themselves about the differences between two rival asphalt concerns, and hence the yarns that come from the Pitch Lake must be read and digested with a large degree of caution. For instance, it is reported that only twenty-five Americans are left to protect the property and lives of American families,' all the West Indian negroes having fled. It is very doubtful if there are a dozen American citizens in the entire State of Bermudez.

"The records show that the usual complement of American citizens at Guanoco are as follows: The Managing Director and wife, one Superintendent—sometimes a married man—a master mechanic, and possibly one American bookkeeper—say, six. As to 'American families,' they never have been known of in that locality. Certainly the insurgents have no reason to 'fire into the jungles' no more than the Government troops have, and a more potent reason is that neither side has any ammunition to waste by firing it into the jungles when the six American citizens dwell in a fortress with twelve-inch concrete walls and on a clearing far removed from any semblance of jungle, and, what is more, some twenty-five miles from the scene of operations of the fighting forces.

"The steamer Rescue, which plies between Guanoco and the Port of Spain, and is the property of the Guanoco Company, flies the American flag, and has a United States register. She has been commanded for several years by a Nova Scotian second mate, her engineer, firemen, deckhands, cook, and messboy all being Trinidad negroes and subjects of Edward VII., King of England. In all reports to hand she does not seem to have been molested, and makes her regular trips without fear or danger of capture by either the insurgents or Federal forces.

"If it be true that those American citizens are 'imploring protection from the United States Legation at Caracas,' they are evidently very much frightened, and need some nerve tonic administered to them without delay."

REBEL LEADERS PRISONERS.

Two Victories for Government Troops Reported from Caracas.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Jan. 30.—The revolutionists have been defeated near Carupano, State of Bermudez, with numerous losses. Two sons of Gen. Acosta have been made prisoners.

A recent battle fought at Caripe, near Maturin, State of Bermudez, was won by the Government. Mejano, Rojas, Carabano, and Izarra were taken prisoners.

Guiria has been reoccupied by the Government forces.

The United States training ship Lancaster has arrived at La Guayra.

DOUBT IN WASHINGTON.

Report that 25 Americans Are Besieged Not Credited—Courts to Decide Asphalt Dispute.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The State Department is inclined to discredit the report from Port of Spain to the effect that twenty-five Americans, deserted by their negro employes, are holding out against a band of attacking revolutionists. It is pointed out that if it were true, Minister Loomis would certainly have notified the department. It is stated in the dispatch that Mr. Loomis was aware of the report, and, while inclined to consider it exaggerated, had promised to inform the department. This would be his duty, but he has not done it, and the department is, therefore, skeptical of the report.

The similar story which was sent in some time ago, and on the strength of which the Navy Department sent the Scorpion to the scene of alleged hostilities, did not come from Minister Loomis, but from the Vice President of the Asphalt Trust, who claimed to have received it from a reliable source. Since then the department has hesitated to credit reports that do not come from Minister Loomis.

A native of Venezuela who is acquainted with the situation as it was up to the outbreak of the revolution, said to-day that if there is any truth in the revolution stories it is incredible that the revolutionists should attack the Asphalt Trust.

"In time of revolution," said he, "the party opposed to the Government does not make war upon the other enemies of the Government. The Asphalt Trust is certainly unfriendly to the Government, and the natural course for the insurgents would be to make friends with the Asphalt Trust, or at least not to attack it. Even if they have hostile designs on the trust, which is incredible, they would naturally wait until they had overthrown the Government before making any unfriendly move."

Minister Loomis has acquainted the State Department with the fact that the Venezuelan Government is willing and anxious to have the merits of the rival asphalt concessions left to the determination of the Venezuelan courts. The department has decided that that is the proper course to pursue, and has so informed the Minister.

It is true that there has been no lack of insinuations touching the integrity of the Venezuelan judicial tribunals, but the State Department does not feel itself absolved on that score from following the well-established practice in such cases and refraining from intervention until it shall become absolutely evident that there has been a denial of justice. Therefore the asphalt companies must make their fight before the Venezuelan courts, to begin with at least.

ASPHALT TRUST SPREADS.

Absorbs Two More Paving Companies—Employes Dismissed.

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The Utica Paving Company, which had the right to use Alcatraz asphalt in all of this State outside Greater New York, and which has carried on extensive operations in several cities, and the Warren-Scharfe Asphalt Paving Company, which was capitalized at $1,000,000 and carried on work in sixty cities, have been absorbed by the American Asphalt Company, and the work of laying asphalt pavement will hereafter be done by the Barber Asphalt Company.

Charles I. Williams, President of the Utica Company, has resigned, and the plant is being torn down to-day. George C. Warren, the manager of the Warren-Scharfe Company, has been dismissed. Orders have come to change the sign on the door of his company to the Barber Company. Very little information is given out, but a number of employes of both companies have been discharged, and more expect to go.

THE COLOMBIAN REVOLUTION.

Revolutionary Leader Coming Here to Purchase Arms.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Jan. 30.—Gen. Uribe-Uribe, the Colombian revolutionary leader, is a passenger bound for New York on the Red "D" Line Steamer Philadelphia, which left San Juan this afternoon.

He goes to purchase arms, and predicts the success of the insurgents. Fighting, he says, is still in progress in the interior, where he has 5,000 men, though without ammunition.

He believes that the City of Panama is likely to be attacked by the revolutionists.

FUNERAL OF VERDI.

Arrangements of Extreme Simplicity, but Great Crowds Line the Streets.

MILAN, Jan. 30.—The funeral of Giuseppe Verdi took place this morning. The ceremony was most simple, owing to the silent homage of the populace, who were present in immense numbers.

The body of Verdi was borne from his residence at 7 o'clock and placed in a very modest funeral car, which, followed by a few intimate friends, proceeded to the Church of St. Francis, the façade of which bore the inscription, "Peace to the Soul of Giuseppe Verdi."

The religious ceremony lasted only five minutes. Then a procession was formed, headed by priests and with firemen marching beside the car, which was followed by friends of the dead composer, the local authorities, and leading citizens, bareheaded. A vast concourse lined the route, and people even climbed the trees to get a glimpse of the cortège. Several houses were draped with mourning.

On the arrival of the body at the cemetery the crowd was so large that two squadrons of Carbineers were unable to keep open a space around the graveside. The body was interred without ceremony and there were no speeches.

WANT EMPEROR BACK IN PEKING.

PEKING, Jan. 30.—Three hundred prominent Chinese residents of Kiang-Si province have sent a memorial to the Emperor requesting his Majesty to make public announcement of a certain date for his return to Peking in order to satisfy the people. They assert that the Boxer troubles were entirely due to a few high officials, but as these officials are now to be punished, the Court ought to return to Peking, as the palaces, tombs, and other property are there, and the responsibilities of two hundred years cannot lightly be thrown aside.

The Chiah-Pao, a Chinese paper, bemoans the destruction of the Tien-Tsin wall, the whole of which is now being levelled, and laments that a work which occupied three hundred years in construction should be destroyed in a space of comparatively few days.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 30.—The Court is about to send an official to Singapore and other points to appeal to wealthy Chinese for financial assistance. Contributors will, it is said, be suitably rewarded.

RUSSIA'S ALLEGED TERMS.

She Is Said to Want $21,600,000 for Returning Manchuria.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 30.—The statement is made here that Russia, besides indemnity, will demand the sum of 30,000,000 taels ($21,600,000) for restoring Manchuria to China.

It is also said that Count von Waldersee will demand 5,000,000 taels as compensation for the killing of Baron von Ketteler, the German Minister.

Forty Japanese Killed by Explosion.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 30.—The North China Daily News asserts that while a quantity of Chinese gunpowder was being destroyed at Shan-hai-Kwan there was an explosion, and forty Japanese soldiers were killed.

PEKING MISSIONARI PRESENT RESOL

Address an Appeal to the and American Minister

ASK FOR FULL PROTE

Complain that the Joint Note Nothing on the Subject—Mo Passed by Reichstag Committ

PEKING, Jan. 30.—The missionaric last night and prepared final resolt which were presented to the British M ter, Sir Ernest M. Satow, and United S Minister Conger to-day.

The preamble sets forth the facts ' sufficiently emphasized in the note," the Chinese attacked everything repres ing progress; that there has been no a quate rebuke for the flagrant violation treaties, and that no indemnity is asked the Christian Chinese who suffered hea loss. Finally, the missionaries say, nothi has been inserted in the note safeguardi the missionaries, and they earnestly reque Sir Ernest and Mr. Conger to see that tl former treaties protecting missionaries ar reaffirmed; that the Government shall b forced to allow Chinese of any rank to ac cept Christianity without injury to thei prospects; that the missionaries shall be allowed to live in the interior, own prope ty, and possess passports compelling their official acceptance; that friendly inter course between the missionaries and offi cials be encouraged, and that relief shall be found for the suffering native Chris tians.

The missionaries earnestly hope that Great Britain and the United States will take a leading part in the coming trans formation of China, helping the rulers to follow lines of reform which alone can save the country.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Herr von Mühlberg, in the debate on the China bill in the Budget Committee of the Reichstag to-day, referring to the resolution of Dr. Lieber, the Centrist leader, said that the resolution clearly set forth the existing treaties regarding Chinese Christians, and that the Ministers at Peking must decide individual cases, and whether intervention is expedient. Up to the present, he added, protection had been refused to Chinese Christians.

The committee finally adopted by a large majority Dr. Lieber's resolution, which calls upon the Government to see that the treaty settling the Chinese question shall provide for the free exercise of the Christian religion, the latter being placed under the protection of the signatory powers.

WANT LENIENCY FOR CHINA.

America, Russia, and Japan Unite to Prevent Presentation of Over Harsh Demands.

PEKING, Jan. 30.—The Ministers' Punishment Committee met this morning to continue the discussion of what measure of punishment shall be demanded for officials of places where foreigners have been killed. The Ministers refused to furnish any information as to the result of their deliberations.

A meeting of all the Ministers will probably be held to-morrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Russia, America, and Japan are making a united effort to put an end to the Peking tangle, and to do this they have been obliged to present a united front to the other powers, who are complicating the situation by making demands on China which were not included, and were even by implication excluded from the joint note. Irritation over the actions of these other powers has given way to a feeling of resignation in official circles, but the United States has no intention of relaxing its position in the least, and it is most effectually backed by Russia and Japan.

The joint note expressly left to China the punishment of the leading Chinese rebels, stipulating only that the punishments were to be as severe as China could inflict. This left it to China to decide what were the severest punishments practicable. Notwithstanding this, the envoys of most of the powers have been trying to dictate to China the form of the punishment to be inflicted upon several of the most powerful Princes and Generals in the empire. The punishment demanded is death.

Against this the three powers named have been standing out. All three recognize the impossibility of executing such men as Gen. Tung-Fu-Siang and Prince Tuan, and know that to make such a demand on China is to compel the Emperor to choose between foreign invasion on the one hand and assassination and internal revolution on the other. It was for this reason that the United States insisted on omitting from the joint note any prescription of the form of punishment. It was omitted, but some of the envoys now seem to be attempting to gain their object in another way. Minister Conger, whatever may be his personal opinions, seems now to be loyally attempting to carry out the instructions of his Government; at least nothing has been received to indicate the contrary, and newspaper reports from Peking to the contrary are discredited at the State Department.

The position of Russia and Japan in the matter occasions no surprise here. "Those two powers," said a well-informed official to-day, "are Asiatic powers, and it is to be expected that they will take a more reasonable view of the case than do some of the European powers. Being Asiatic powers, they understand the situation better, and have a better comprehension of what is possible and what is impossible. They know that to demand the head of a great General surrounded by his army is to ask the Chinese Emperor to do what is flatly impossible. Their stand in favor of moderation and reason is therefore not astonishing."

It is a fact that these three powers have been acting together in the Chinese matter ever since the middle of last August. The only occasion when there was any divergence was when the United States attempted to have the word "irrevocable" stricken out of the joint note. On that occasion Great Britain supported the United States, and most of the other powers were on the other side. With that single exception the United States, Russia, and Japan have found themselves acting in the same direction at every point.

This began when the foreign Admirals decided to hold Li-Hung-Chang. Russia and the United States immediately protested. Then came the proposition to evacuate Peking, and then the proposition to take the negotiations away from Peking and transfer them to Washington or The Hague. On these important points and a number of minor ones Russia and the United States have acted in absolute unison, and Japan has supported them. This is not due so much to an identity of general policy as to the fact that the immediate ends which all three powers are trying to reach are the same.

TWO AMERICANS SENTENCED.

Soldiers Get Long Terms for Blackmailing Chinese Villages—German Troops Denounced.

PEKING, Jan. 30.—A court-martial which has caused considerable interest has been held in Tien-Tsin during the last two weeks. The men on trial were Privates Dickson and Seamons of the Fifteenth United States Infantry. In October last, while these men were on guard duty along the river, they blackmailed several villagers, demanding from 100 to 200 taels protection money, and in some cases their demands were complied with. They were captured by the French and turned over to the American authorities.

Dickson escaped after the trial began, and is still at liberty. Seamons was sentenced to twenty years imprisonment, and Dickson to twenty-one years.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—A dispatch to the Cologne Volkes Zeitung from China relates horrible details about the warfare in that country, and says:

"We hope these awful conditions will soon cease. The depravity and bestiality among our troops are enormously on the increase. Large numbers of old soldiers are sentenced to long terms in the penitentiary and jail for murder, burglary, and ill-treatment of women. Our losses are certainly greater that way than by death. Diseases are still rampant, especially typhus."

QUEEN'S FUNERAL TO BE A SPLENDID SPECTACLE

'INDOW SEATS VERY COSTLY

ll from £10 to £30 Each—Stoppage of Business Will Cause a Great Deal of Inconvenience.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The procession which ill escort the body of Queen Victoria cross London on Saturday, as indicated by the War Office orders, issued last evening, will be a gorgeous military pageant. Detachments of forty regiments, with an almost equal number of distinctive uniforms, embracing all arms of the service, will make a constantly changing picture. The uniforms of all the great armies of the world will appear, for, in addition to the brilliant entourages of the visiting Kings and Princely envoys, there will be the military attachés of the embassies and legations.

All the Field Marshals of the British Army able to endure the fatigue will ride with their staffs. The Naval Corps will also take part in the procession, which will be two miles long.

The heavy work of arranging the elaborate military details of the procession will prevent the official programme being issued before this evening. Some idea of the extent of the labor involved will be gained from the fact that a firm of caterers has been instructed by the War Office to provide breakfast and dinner for 25,000 troops.

The military dispositions, however, have been practically settled. It is now understood that part of the military and naval escort will march in the front, that after the escort will come the headquarters staff of the army, the foreign military attachés and various military bands, and that then will come the coffin, followed by King Edward, Emperor William, and King Carlos of Portugal, the Royal mourners, representatives of foreign States, mourning carriages with the Princesses, and then the remainder of the military escort. All the troops will march with reversed arms.

The War Office directs that Beethoven's and Chopin's funeral marches only shall be played. From the time the coffin reaches London to its departure guns will boom slowly in Hyde Park.

At the Privy Council meeting yesterday morning the King signed a proclamation suspending business on Saturday throughout the United Kingdom. The closing down will be so complete that even the restaurants and saloons will be shut up for four or five hours in the middle of the day.

Londoners are just awakening to the full proportions of the observance and the real meaning of the day of mourning, and this awakening is causing consternation. Suddenly to stop every industry and to turn the masses into the streets, with millions hoping to concentrate along the two miles of the route of the procession in London, is an undertaking which has begun to be fully appreciated by the police, but the public of London is dismayed to find that all the great markets—Covent Garden, Smithfield, and others—where the food of the metropolis is supplied, are to be absolutely closed on the last day of the week. London is a world in itself, living from hand to mouth, and the closing of the accustomed avenues for the supply and distribution of food, drink, and amusement from Friday to Monday will mean a loss and inconvenience that the people of no American city can realize.

The newspapers are protesting against the lack of arrangements for the press in London and Windsor, while householders along the route were asking a year's rent last evening for single windows. A member of the United States Embassy sent an agent to secure a window for his family, but neither official influence nor anything else could procure a small window even on a side street near St. James's Street for less than £100, and places of full vantage have already been engaged at prices prohibitive to any but millionaires. Ordinary window seats are selling for £10 each. Store windows have been let for £150 and £200, but the storekeepers prefer to let single seats at £10 to £15 each. Stores and hotels in Piccadilly commanding a view of the incline from there to St. James's Palace are getting immense prices, balcony seats fetching £25 and £60.

London learned last year how totally inadequate the police and military are to protect its citizens, and the apprehensions of Saturday's crush are enough to appall Londoners, but, apparently, these considerations do not deter thousands of every rank from flocking to the metropolis.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 31.—The khaki-painted gun carriage, with a specially constructed coffin-shaped structure, which will carry Queen Victoria's coffin, has arrived here. With six artillery horses a rehearsal was gone through from Trinity Pier to Osborne House yesterday.

The construction of the mortuary chapel in the quarterdeck of the royal yacht Alberta is proceeding apace.

The Deputy Governor has ordered that all business places on the Isle of Wight be closed from 12 o'clock to 4 P. M. to-morrow.

Emperor William and the Duke of Connaught will sleep on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern to-morrow night, while King Edward, Queen Alexandra, and other members of the royal family will be distributed on board the royal yachts Osborne and Victoria and Albert.

The detectives continue the same rigorous precautions which have prevailed since the arrival here of Emperor William. Every steamer or launch arriving on either side of the Medina River is closely scrutinized, while the approaches to Osborne House are as effectually guarded as ever, though the authorities deprecate the idea that they have any particular apprehension of the presence of undesirable foreigners.

FRIDAY'S NAVAL DISPLAY.

PORTSMOUTH, Jan. 31.—The warships are already assembling for the great naval pageant on Friday. The arrangements, which have been completed, provide that eight torpedo boat destroyers will lead the procession from Cowes, followed by the royal yacht Alberta, with the Queen's body on board; the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, with King Edward and Queen Alexandra and the English royal family; the royal yacht Osborne, with other royalties; the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with Emperor William, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and others; the Admiralty yacht Enchantress, and a Trinity House yacht, with the officials on board.

The main squadron of battleships and cruisers will be moored two and a half cables apart, in one line, extending from Cowes to Spithead. The Channel fleet, under the command of Vice Admiral Sir Harry Holdsworth Rawson, will form the eastern portion, and the reserve fleet, under Rear Admiral Sir Gerard Henry Noel, the western portion. The foreign war vessels are to be moored southwest of the British ships, in the order of their arrival, and alongside of them will be moored eight British gunboats, the Antelope, Gleaner, Fkipjack, Leda, Rattlesnake, Alert, Circe, and Speedwell.

After leaving Trinity Pier, the Alberta, with her attendant escort, will steam along the deep channel between the coast of the Isle of Wight and the single line of battleships and cruisers. The main line will be as follows: Beginning at Cowes the Alexandra, Camperdown, Rodney, Benbow, Collingwood, Colossus, Sans Pareil, Nile, Howe, Melampus, Severn, Galatea, Belfona, Pactolus, Pelorus, Diana, Conqueror, Arrogant, Minerva, Niobe, Nero, Hood, Trafalgar, Resolution, Jupiter, Hannibal, Mars, Prince George, and Majestic.

On their arrival at Portsmouth the royal yachts will remain in the harbor for the night.

Minute guns will be fired by all the ships in the Solent and at Cowes, commencing when the Alberta leaves the pier. Each ship will be directed to cease firing immediately the tail of the procession has passed her. After the procession has passed the Majestic the forts and ships in Portsmouth Harbor will commence firing minute guns and continue firing until the Alberta is alongside the wharf. The bands are to play the funeral marches of Chopin and Beethoven only. No national anthem will be played.

On the approach of the procession the ships will be manned and the guards and bands will be paraded. The officers will wear full dress and the men "No. 1 rig" and straw hats. The guards will present arms as the Alberta passes each ship, and then rest on their arms reversed until the procession is past.

A detachment of marines and an Admiral's band will be on board Nelson's old flagship, the Victory, lying in Portsmouth Harbor.

All the seafront and dockyards will be manned by marines and sailors, while Barrow Island is to be manned by boys from the training ship St. Vincent and men from the gunnery ship Excellent.

Participants in the Cuban war will be interested in the fact that the Spanish battleship Pelayo, Spain's representative at the display, is commanded by Capt. Diaz Moreu, who was commander of the Cristofero Colombo, lost in the battle of Santiago.

COWES, Jan. 31.—The curtains of the mortuary pavilion on the deck of the Alberta will be looped up if the weather is not stormy on Friday, and thus the men-of-war's men manning the lane of ships through which the funeral yacht will slowly move, will be able to see the coffin resting on a high crimson-covered bier.

The gray clouds and heavy seas of the past week are giving way to a blue sky and smooth water.

The arrival of the warships is somewhat diverting interest from Osborne House. The Esplanade was lined with people yesterday, and the numerous yachts in these waters give the roads the aspect of racing week.

THE SERVICE AT WINDSOR.

WINDSOR, Jan. 30.—The funeral service in St. George's Chapel on Saturday will begin at 2 o'clock. The body will, it is expected, arrive at Windsor at 1:30 P. M. The route to the chapel will be lined by troops two deep.

The service will be the ordinary rite for the burial of the dead, with special music. The choir will sing from the altar steps, whence also the Garter King of Arms will announce the decease of the sovereign, stating all her rights and titles.

The service will be conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Dean of Windsor. The Archbishop of York and the Bishop of Oxford will be present.

The burial on Monday will be conducted by the Bishop of Winchester and the Dean of Windsor.

Enormous numbers of floral emblems are pouring in, and are being hung in the chapel. Everything sent, from rare blossoms that are the gifts of royal personages down to humble posies sent by children, is exposed to view. There are already several thousand flower pieces, including tokens from most of the members of the aristocracy, numerous clubs, country towns, cities, societies, regiments, and inmates of workhouses. Some of the flowers are fading, but every train brings additions. Only the wreaths from the royal family will be deposited round the catafalque.

A small crowd gathered this afternoon to view the wreaths sent from Osborne and placed around the ancient cloister adjoining St. George's Chapel. Windsor Castle was deserted save for these sightseers. The standard floated at half mast on top of the great tower, rooks cawed mournfully around the ivy-covered buttresses, and from the chapel came the clang of carpenters' hammers. Cartloads of timber are constantly arriving, with which stands are being built about the chapel to accommodate those who will view the service on Saturday.

In the town, black and purple drapery is beginning to cover the antiquated houses. Practically the whole of the royal borough will be draped in mourning on Saturday, whereas elsewhere only the route of the procession will be thus marked.

Enormous crowds are expected. People are willingly paying £20 for a window from which to view the procession.

SCOTTISH PEERS MEET.

Lord Rosebery Says Queen Victoria's Knowledge Was Unequaled by Any Constitutional Historian.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Lord Rosebery presided this morning at a special meeting of the Royal Scottish Corporation called in London to pass resolutions expressing sorrow at the death of Queen Victoria and of congratulation on the accession of King Edward VII. There was a crowded attendance. Nearly all the Scottish Peers were present.

Lord Rosebery, remarking that he would pass lightly over the congratulatory part of the programme, said his Majesty's speech at the Privy Council meeting sufficiently indicated the laws by which he intended that his reign should be governed, thus promising to make his rule no less illustrious than that of his parent.

Lord Rosebery then dwelt in eloquent terms on the life and death of Queen Victoria, saying that in the whole history of mankind no death had so touched such a large number of persons in the entire world. There was scarcely an intelligent individual in the civilized world but was profoundly moved. He wondered if her subjects yet realized how much they had lost and what an enormous weight the Queen had in the councils of the world. It was not brilliancy or genius which could supply the advantage she gave to Great Britain by her fund of knowledge, which was unequaled by any Constitutional historian. It was no disparagement of other Kings to say that she was the chief of the European sovereigns, and her influence in the councils of nations was always used for peace, freedom, and good government.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal (the Canadian High Commissioner) seconded the resolutions.

ROYALTIES BEGIN TO ARRIVE.

Kings of Portugal and Greece Among Those Who Are Already in London.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—King Carlos of Portugal, with a large suite, arrived here yesterday. He was accompanied from Dover by the Portuguese Minister. Senhor de Soveral, and his staff, and reached Victoria Station at noon.

King Carlos was met on the platform of the station by Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein on behalf of King Edward, and by various officials of King Edward's household. His Majesty's Equerry delivered an autograph message from King Edward to King Carlos, and the latter and his suite were immediately driven in royal carriages to Buckingham Palace. King Carlos was warmly greeted by the fair-sized crowds which had gathered along the route in anticipation of his arrival. There was no military escort.

King Edward visited the King of Portugal shortly afterward.

The King of Greece, the Duke of Sparta, and the Grand Duke of Baden reached Victoria Station at 5 o'clock. They were received by Prince Charles of Denmark and members of the King's household. The visitors proceeded to Marlborough House.

DUKE OF CORNWALL'S ILLNESS.

His Visit to Australia May Have to Be Postponed.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 31.—An official bulletin issued yesterday said that the Duke of Cornwall and York, who is suffering from German measles, was progressing satisfactorily.

It has, however, been finally decided that though the Duke's condition is not serious he will be unable to attend Queen Victoria's funeral.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—To-day's Court Circular says the Duke of Cornwall and York is suffering from a severe attack of German measles, which has caused him much sleeplessness and great discomfort. He is progressing satisfactorily.

Concession by the Jacobite Leagues.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—In view of the general mourning, the Legitimatist and Jacobite Leagues contented themselves to-day with commemorating the two hundred and fifty-second anniversary of the execution of King Charles I. by special church services and omitted the usual decoration of the statue of the "Martyr King." Many wreaths were sent for this purpose; but, with the exception of one placed on the statue surreptitiously in the night, none was used.

German Papers Praise King Edward.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Apparently the German press is growing more friendly toward King Edward VII. The Kreuz Zeitung points out the new monarch's "great popularity and great knowledge of men." The Berliner Tageblatt, in the course of a long article, praises his courage and the "complete fearlessness at the time of attempts at assassination" which he has displayed, adding that he "undertands the English character thoroughly, and possesses remarkable tact."

THE KING BACK AT OSBORNE.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 31.—King Edward arrived here soon after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Count von Eulenberg, Emperor William's Grand Court Marshal, accompanied him.

As the royal yacht Osborne approached, the flags were mast-headed on the Hohenzollern, the other yachts dressed ship, and the bluejackets manned ship. A large crowd of spectators was present.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The brides of yesterday—and there were quite a number—did not have ideal weather, neither did the many voyagers who left this port for Europe. The White Star dock was crowded with friends of the travelers. The first going away of the Winter is always more or less a social event. It means the breaking up of the season, and there is the very least bit of a note, or a strain, rather, of sadness. But those who sailed yesterday will be back in New York for the Newport season, which, even at this early day, has a promise of being very gay. Besides the weddings—and the largest and most fashionable was that of Miss Williams to Mr. William H. Dixon, where there was a notable throng, both at church and at the reception—there was not very much on the social programme. The season is beginning to wane.

Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb (Miss Lila Osgood Vanderbilt) gave last night the second of two dances at their town house for their daughter, Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb. The dance differed little from the first, which was given on Jan. 16, save that at this dance there were fewer débutantes and more young married people. The decorations of plants and flowers were simple. A few palms were placed here and there in the corners of the large entrance hall, on whose paneled walls of dark wood are fastened a number of antlered heads, trophies of Dr. Webb's prowess in deer hunting, and in the palms there glowed a few blossoms of the oxblood red poinsettia. Mrs. Webb and her daughter received in the reception room, and there was general dancing to the music of Lander's Orchestra until after supper. The supper was served at small tables placed in the dining room and hall, at 12:30, and the cotillion of fifty couples was started a little before 2. It was led by Craig Wadsworth, who danced with Miss Webb.

There were several favor figures. Vinlagrettes of various styles were used in one figure for the girls, and paper cutters were given their partners. In another brilliant tinsel butterflies for the hair were handed the women, while their partners received rosettes to decorate their coats. Another set of favors were fancy miniature toboggans for the girls and snowshoes for the men, and in another ribbons and bells and picture frames were supplied by Mrs. Collins. The Hopkins residence is at 80 Columbia Heights, but because of a recent death in the family, the wedding anniversary was celebrated at the home of Mr. White.

Col. Hopkins was born in Albion, N. Y., in 1828. He went West when a young man and for a number of years was a prominent dry goods merchant in Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1862 he was made a member of the Governor's staff in Ohio, with the rank of Colonel. Coming to this city Col. Hopkins entered the life insurance business. Ten years ago he wrote five policies of $100,000 each for the Havemeyer family. Col. and Mrs. Hopkins have two sons, Franklin W. "Romeo et Juliette" at the Opera.

Gounod's "Romeo et Juliette" was brought forward once again at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. There was a large audience, one of the largest of the season. This has not always been the case at the performance of this work, but it is so when Mr. Jean de Reszke is the representative of the lover. Years ago there was no thought of comparing this opera with Gounod's acknowledged masterpiece. It was relegated to a secondary place, and it deserved it. But since the line of noted Juliets, which began with Mme. Patti, has been supplemented by a famous Romeo, the vogue of the opera has been very large. In 1889, Mme. Emma Eames created a sensation in Paris by her beauty and her voice in Juliet, but she was not favored with any great Romeos. It has been the fortune of Mr. de Reszke, however, to play the lover to many admirable Juliets. His association with Mme. Melba in this opera is regarded as a festal occasion in London, and Mr. Grau raises the prices. There, however, great casts are the rule in this opera. It would be difficult to get a better one than that of last night. Mme. Melba was the Juliet, Miss Bridewell, Stephano; Mr. Jean de Reszke, Romeo; Mr. Edouard de Reszke, Frère Laurence, Mr. Plançon, Capulet; Mr. Bars, Tybalt, and Mr. Sizes, Mercutio. Improvement might be made on the last two, but hardly on the others, except in the case of Mme. Melba, who was again careless last night.

With this record, comment on last night's performance might easily end. The rest is only a statement of the mood or voice of such and such a singer. Mr. Jean de Reszke sang as he has been doing all this season, with abundant tone and with beautiful eloquence. He has made Romeo one of his unique interpretations, and as such it will linger to a ripe old age in the memory of operagoers now young. Mme. Melba's voice is so excellently suited to the youthfulness of Juliet that it is not difficult to forgive her deficiencies in acting. Mr. Edouard de Reszke and Mr. Plançon suit their parts perfectly, and Miss Bridewell is at her best as Stephano. The performance was generally smooth and effective, and Mr. Mancinelli conducted with skill.

John Delmar's Will Stands.

The suit was brought against Mrs. Delmar's widow. Justice Marean granted an extra allowance of $1,000 against the plaintiffs.

WHITNEY BUYS HAMBURG

Millionaire Turfman Paid $60,000 for Famous Race Horse.

J. B. HAGGIN HIS OPPONENT

A Crowd of 7,000 People in Attendance at Marcus Daly Estate Sale in Madison Square Garden.

With two Commissioners bidding for him, William C. Whitney, millionaire turfman, kept his only competitor for the ownership of the famous race horse and young stallion, Hamburg, between two fires, and by sharp bidding secured the horse for the remarkable price of $60,000, to the discomfiture of his opponent, the millionaire breeder of California and Kentucky, J. B. Haggin. Fully 7,000 persons crowded into Madison Squnre Garden to witness the sale, which was the dispersal of the late Marcus Daly's celebrated nursery of thoroughbred horses, the Bitter Root Stud, Hamilton, Mon., and the most important offering of race horses that has taken place in the United States in the past ten years. The Fasig-Tipton Company, in charge of the sale, anticipated a great crowd and made preparations for it, but there was none too much room at that. It was almost impossible to move about anywhere near the ring, which was placed back near the Madison Avenue end of the Garden, while the seats from the boxes to the gallery just under the roof were filled. The attendance was the most singular that has ever attended a horse sale in New York, and would have done credit to the horse show on a fashionable night. Aside from the men in evening clothes and the handsomely dressed women, there were present a full representation of the turf of both East and West, from rich owners and breeders of race horses to tattered stable hands and the loudly dressed touts of African origin, who deserted Sixth Avenue for the night to see again the most noted horse of his time, the wonderful Hamburg.

The offering of the celebrated Hamburg, winner of sixteen races and $64,521 in his two years on the turf, and the best in blood performance and appearance of three great winning families, opened the sale, and the presence of the crowd was a tribute to Hamburg alone. All interest centred in him, and turfmen on all sides predicted that he would bring a great price, his value naturally being enhanced by the deaths of Hanover, his sire, and of Domino, the best representative of his dam's family.

The crowd was not disappointed, for Hamburg brought a sensational price, and in addition provoked a contest of dollars between the two richest men interested in racing. That Mr. Whitney meant to buy Hamburg a few people knew, for he declared his intention a few days ago while on a visit to the horse at Morris Park, when he said that before a week passed Hamburg would be his property. Mr. Whitney did not bid in person, but had J. E. Madden, on one side of the ring and J. W. Rogers, his trainer, on the other. It is probable that Mr. Haggin, whose bids always separated the Whitney bids, thought he had two opponents, but whatever he thought he quit the contest after going to $58,000, and Hamburg was knocked down to Madden for Mr. Whitney. The great horse looked in splendid condition, except for two rather puffed hind ankles, or a slight cut on the left of these, said to have been caused by an accident while on the cars.

CHEERS FOR THE STALLION.

The sale did not begin until 8:30 o'clock, the great salesroom then being crowded, but the spectators packing closer together as the new-comers bustled in at the report which ran through the building that the famous Hamburg was about to be led into the ring. The shuffling of many feet, as the attendance increased, partly drowned the voice of Auctioneer William Easton as he made his speech, introducing the sale. Some among the crowd began to cheer as Hamburg, led by a groom from the Bitter Root Stud, entered the sawdust arena, while the auctioneer pleaded for quiet, fearing that the horse might become excited and unmanageable. Hamburg was accomposed as if he were in his own paddock in his far-away former home, unheeding the buzz of voices about him, and walking quietly behind his attendant, as he kept circling about the limited ring space.

The horse, star of the sale, had hardly entered when Jere Dunn, sitting beside John E. Madden, former owner of Hamburg, rose and shouted a starting bid of $40,000, Madden immediately confirming the offer as coming from him. The auctioneer, calling for a bid of $50,000, then for $45,000, dwelt on the first offer for several minutes, then accepted an advance to $41,000 made by Mathew Dwyer, the Western race starter, who bid for J. B. Haggin. The advances then came in quick order, the price being jumped to $45,000 by J. W. Rogers, trainer for W. C. Whitney, who bid in Mr. Whitney's interest, the next bid being $46,000 from Haggin; $47,000 by Rogers for Whitney; $48,000 by Haggin; $50,000 by Rogers; then a jump to $56,000 by Haggin; $57,000 by Madden, after the auctioneer refused to accept a $100 advance; $58,000 by Haggin, and finally $60,000, the successful bid, by Madden, Haggin refusing to go further, in spite of the efforts of the auctioneer to induce him to go on. Mr. Madden promptly announced that he had been bidding and had bought Hamburg for Mr. Whitney. The foreign breeders, whose agents it was said had come to New York to bid on Hamburg, were never heard from, though two English and one French breeder were represented by agents who bought other horses. Later, it was said that the first bid exceeded the prices the French breeder had one of the Englishmen had set as a limit, and that the other Englishman never had a chance, as the commission he had authorized was passed in the first few bids.

The crowd began to thin out after the sale of Hamburg, but about 5,000 people remained to see the others of the stallions pass under the hammer, Bathampton of these bringing the price next highest, $8,000, J. B. Haggin securing him, while G. E. Smith bought Isidor for $6,000, and M. Murphy, owner of Raffaello and other horses, got the celebrated horse Tammany, best three-year-old of his time, for $4,000. The brood mares sold later included some with foals dropped since they arrived in New York from Montana, these not being shown in the ring. Mr. Haggin was the largest buyer of these. H. Eugene Leigh and Eugene Fischof bought mares, as agents for breeders in England and France. The best of the mares and those that brought the best prices were nearly all in foal to Hamburg.

Catesby Woodford, G. H. Whitney, Clifton Shropshire, C. F. McMeekin, H. P. Headley, Kinzea Stone, J. A. Forsythe, Col. Milton Young, W. P. Norton, Leslie Coombs, S. C. Lyne, H. S. Berry, J. B. Ewing, F. Clay, R. A. Graddy, G. D. Wilson, Joseph Hawkins, W. Hukill, and Willis Field were the best known of the Kentucky contingent in attendance. Others present, who are well known in turf affairs all over the United States, were J. B. Haggin, owner of Rancho del Paso, Cal., and the Elmendorf Stud of Kentucky; John Mackey and C. J. Enright, managers, respectively, of the two Haggin establishments; John Hyland, trainer for August Belmont; J. W. Rogers, trainer for William C. Whitney; William A. Hendrie of Hamilton, Ontario; Dr. Andrew Smith of Toronto, John E. Race Track Results.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 30.—For his ride on Don Clarencio in the steeplechase to-day Jockey Pines was ruled off the turf. There was a bad mix-up in the fifth race and Eous and Command fell. Tully, who rode the former, was taken to the hospital, where he is now unconscious, suffering from concussion of the brain. The physicians think he may recover. Isen was the only winning favorite. The Premier Stake was the feature of the card. Haydon was the strong favorite, but was not contended. Slack took no chances on the Morris filly, The Hoyden, who was second choice, and won by two lengths. Weather cloudy; track fast. SARANAC LAKE ICE CARNIVAL.

Hockey Match and Skating Races Furnish Good Sport.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The hockey match here to-day between Huntington and Valleyfield, two Canadian teams, was intensely exciting, resulting in a score of 8 to 2 in favor of Huntington. Both teams played strong games. In the last half, Gurham, right wing of Valleyfield, fell and was carried off the ice. The teams lined up as follows:

Huntington—L. MacNaughton, goal; A. Boyd, point; W. Marshall, coverpoint; J. Marshall, W. Phillip, J. Moir, K. Daigleish, forwards.

Valleyfield—Robinson, goal; J. McMeekin, point; Thompson, coverpoint; McCallum, Gurham, D. McMeekin, W. Percival, forwards. Hunter of Huntington was the umpire; Dugette of Saranac Lake the referee.

In the junior skating race there were eight entries, of whom four were outclassed and forced to drop out. Conrad finished first, Ayres second, Finnegan third, Lashly fourth. In the three-mile race also there were eight entries, half of whom dropped out before the second mile was finished. Mullin won, Slater second, Baker third. Nilsson finished the afternoon programme with a brilliant exhibition of acrobatic skating.

At 8 o'clock there was a grand fancy dress carnival at the rink, witnessed by 3,000 persons. Some of the people in costume and the characters they represented were: J. T. Trowbridge of New York and B. A. Fincke of Chicago led the grand march as soldiers of fortune, Miss Huggins of New York and Huntington Wickham of New York as Japanese lady and gentleman, A. D. Moir of New York as Henry V., Mr. Maurice of Montreal as a German, Mrs. Charles Havens of Providence as Maude Muller; Mrs. Carl Gordon of New York as Pocahontas, Miss Wemple of New York as Red Riding Hood, A. P. Watson of New York as a Crusader. Three hundred and fifty persons from New York, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Montreal, Ottawa, and Quebec were in costume.

High Bred Live Stock Arrives Here.

The White Star steamship Tauric, which arrived from Liverpool yesterday, brought forty-one highly bred dogs from various English kenneis. They were consigned to the Swiss Mountain Kennels, at Germantown, Penn. Some of the dogs, it was said, would be exhibited at the coming Dog Show in Madison Square Garden.

The Atlantic transport steamer Mesaba, which also arrived yesterday, brought thirty-five finely bred French horses, consigned to various dealers in this city and Chicago.

COLLECTION OF TROPHIES.

Many N. Y. Y. C. Prizes on Exhibition in the Club's New Home.

A remarkable collection of yachting cups and trophies, such as probably was never before gotten together, is now on exhibition at the new clubhouse of the New York Yacht Club, in West Forty-fourth Street.

The cups, 192 in number, are displayed upon five tables in the large model room, and though not a complete collection, furnish a remarkable demonstration of the prize-winning abilities of the club fleet, and in their varied design an instructive exposition of progress in the art of the silversmith. The entire collection is valued at $150,000 to $200,000, and is insured for $100,000 while in the clubhouse.

High upon a pedestal upon the huge centre table is the famous America's Cup, won by the celebrated yacht of that name at Cowes on Aug. 22, 1851. Although surrounded by some seventy of the other principal prizes of the club, it bears comparison with any of them in both design and execution, and is, of course, the centre of interest from its sentimental associations.

Next in point of interest is the magnificent cup, standing twenty-seven inches high, which the club on Tuesday evening presented to former Commodore J. Pierpont Morgan in recognition of his many services to the organization.

Upon the same table is the oldest prize known to the club, a silver cup won by the yacht Cygnet on July 17, 1845. It has a single handle in the shape of an anchor and a hinged top, surmounted by a swan.

The gold Astor cup for schooners, won in 1890 by the Corona, and said to be the most valuable trophy in the collection, occupies a prominent place on this table, together with the other Astor cup. All the Goelet cups for both sloops and schooners presented annually by the late Ogden Goelet, with but four exceptions; the Bennett cups, the Brenton's Reef cup, which was taken to England by the Genesta and brought back by the Navahoe; the Commodore's cups, and a number of trophies won by the Vigilant in British waters in 1894. Among these are the Prince of Wales cup of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club and two cups, identical in design, representing the prize of £100 won by the Vigilant at the regatta of the Royal Cork Yacht Club on July 24 of that year. Other notable prizes on this table are the cup for cutters given by Commodore Morgan in 1887 and won by the Bedouin, the Commodore's cup for schooners won by the Colonia in 1897, and the schooner cup won by the Amorita in that same year.

The place of honor on the next table is occupied by the Lipton Cup, presented last Summer by Sir Thomas Lipton, and surrounding it are over sixty other trophies, including a handsome silver bowl on a tray, given as the Goelet prize for schooners in 1897, a silver cigar box given by G. L. Watson, the noted English designer, to the Mudhook Yacht Club, and won by Howard Gould's Niagara on July 2, 1896; the Astor Cup of 1897, won by Colonia from Defender, the semi-centennial trophy won by Wasp in 1894, and a number of minor prizes.

Two other tables are occupied by the prizes offered and won on the squadron cruise of the club last Summer, fifty-three in all, and the two prizes recently presented by the navy members of the club. These are two cups of classical design and severely plain except for an inscription on the side and the figure of a sailor on the top. The inscription upon the cup for schooners reads: "The United States Navy to the schooners of the New York Yacht Club, Jan. 1, 1901." The inscription upon the cup for sloops is identical except for the substitution of the word "sloops" for "schooners."

Receptions will be held by the club this afternoon and to-morrow afternoon, at which ladies will be admitted to view the clubhouse and trophies.

THE CHALLENGER'S FRAMEWORK.

Indications Point to Departure from Conventional Yacht Designing.

GLASGOW, Jan. 30.—In the framework of the America's Cup challenger already set up are, The Associated Press learns, indications of some striking departures from conventional yacht designing. The most noticeable of these is that the bulk of the yacht is thrown extraordinarily far forward. The timbers at present in position suggest the framework of the old bluff-bowed type of yacht more than the modern racing yacht. This appearance will be modified when the frames to carry forward the overhangs are in position. But is is certain the greatest beam will be far forward of the mast.

Every precaution is still taken to prevent information about the cup challenger getting abroad.

Yacht Madeleine in Fruit Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 30.—The old yacht Madeline, defender of America's Cup in two international contests, has just gone on the ways at Tampa for extensive repairs, and in another month she will be regularly engaged in the fruit trade between Honduras and Florida ports. It was in 1876 that the British challenger Countess of Dufferin first met the Madeline and returned defeated at the hands of the American defender.

The Madeline has had a remarkable career since that time, but for the first time since she was the most famous and popular racing vessel in the world repairs are being made.

The Madeline arrived at Tampa Thursday, Capt. Lord, the owner, in command, with a cargo of cocoanuts from Honduras. After her repairs, which will include new decks and cabin and new canvas, she will make a regular schedule between Honduras and Port Tampa.

Shaping the Defender's Metal.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 30.—All of the pieces of metal going into the construction of the Belmont cup defender are being smoothed up with unusual care, for the purpose of not only producing a boat that will show the finest workmanship, but also with the view of eliminating every atom of dead weight above the water line.

The timbering and work is being carried on with dispatch in the south shed. Floor plates and keel fastenings are being finished with a speed that keeps pace with the framing.

Yachtsmen Sail for Europe.

Among those who sailed on the White Star liner Oceanic for Liverpool yesterday were Harry Payne Whitney and Ashton Lemoine of the New York Yacht Club. It was said that they would while abroad look over and possibly purchase several English yachts for members of the New York Yacht Club. Mr. Lemoine was seen in regard to this, and while refusing to discuss the rumor, admitted that the party would look at some yachts while abroad. They would also take occasion to pay their respects to Sir Thomas Lipton, he added, while in London.

Yale to Play Harvard Hockey.

Yale and Harvard will be the guests of the St. Nicholas Skating Club on club night, Monday, Feb. 11. The two university teams will play a game of hockey in the St. Nicholas Rink that evening, to which the St. Nicholas Club will issue invitations to the members of the Yale and Harvard Clubs and to their friends. Admission will be by invitation only. A crowd of 2,500 supporters of the Blue and the Crimson are expected at the rink to witness the game, which is the chief intercollegiate hockey contest of the year.

For Target Championship.

Fred Gilbert, the crack trap shot of Spirit Lake, Ia., has announced his intention of taking part in the target championship events of the National Sportsmen's Association in connection with the coming Sportsmen's Show at Madison Square Garden. With three such phenomenal shots as Gilbert, "Jack" Fanning, and Rolla Heikes engaged in these contests, visitors to the Show will have an opportunity of witnessing an exhibition of target smashing that will doubtless prove little short of wonderful to many.

Harvard Teams Play Hockey.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 30.—The Harvard hockey team played a very exciting game against the Law School team this afternoon, the game finally ending in a tie, each side scoring 6 goals. The Harvard defense was very poor, and must be developed before the Yale game. The Inter-Class Hockey Society games began today. The juniors beat the seniors.

SEASON'S FIRST SLEIGHING

Trotters and Pacers Race for the Bottles of Wine.

ROAD HOUSES ENVIED GOALS

Seventh Avenue Crowded With Cutters Trim and Cumbersome During Yesterday Afternoon and Evening.

For the first time this year the merry jingle of sleigh bells was heard in the Park, and in Seventh Avenue yesterday. At 8 o'clock last night the going was excellent in Seventh Avenue, the runners of the cutters slipping free without cutting through to the macadam. Many well-known road drivers took advantage of the condition of the road, and braved the storm for the sake of enjoying the sport.

As soon as the snow began to fall yesterday morning the cutters that had been relegated to the lofts of various stables were brought out and cleaned up ready for use, and as soon as the ground was covered with "the beautiful" there was the usual scamper for the bottles of wine offered at the various road houses for the first sleigh to arrive. One of the rules regarding the winning of the prize bottle is that there must be sleighing the following day. This rule prevented Miss Ethel Youman from claiming the bottle at "The Club" at the head of the Speedway last November. She was the first to arrive, but the sleighing, what there was of it, only lasted a couple of hours. There is little doubt, however, but that Miss Youman will be able to claim the coveted bottle this time, as she arrived at "The Club" before 1 o'clock yesterday and filed her claim.

John J. Quinn, who has carried off the bottle at McGowan's Pass Tavern for years, followed out his usual custom yesterday and has first claim upon the liquid. At 11:30 he hooked up his bay gelding Wildwood to a cutter and started down Seventh Avenue at a furious gait. It was pretty hard going, however, and the sparks flew from the runners as they struck the stones. He made the trip, however, in record time, just ten minutes having elapsed from the time he left the stable until he pulled up in front of the tavern and was greeted by Gabe Case.

There was quite a contest for the bottle at the Clairmont, in Riverside Park. Irving, a well-known Harlem horseman, left Quinn's stable with Victor, (2:18,) shortly before 3 o'clock. On the road he heard that W. C. Reeber and James S. Burdette had started out with the crack pacer Wandering Willie in quest of the Clairmont bottle. Mr. Irving reached the park, but saw no tracks in the snow and gave Victor a slack rein. Suddenly he heard a jingle of bells behind him, and turning about, saw Reeber coming up the road as fast as he could. A cut of the whip started Victor off and a pretty race followed to the Clairmont, but Victor won easily, and Mr. Irving was out of his cutter and at the door ready to greet Mr. Reeber when the latter pulled up. The latter, however, had his revenge, as Victor was beaten by Wandering Willie in a hot brush on the way home. Burdette declared that the trip from the Clairmont to the stable was made in 3:18, and that Wandering Willie was too fast and too fond of dodging moving trolley cars, butcher carts, and other obstructions to suit him.

CURLING IN THE SNOW.

St. Andrew's Beats Van Cortlandt in a Closely-Fought Match.

Twenty-four curlers, representing the St. Andrew's and Van Cortlandt Curling Clubs, braved the rigors of Winter and the snow yesterday in order to play their annual club competition on Van Cortlandt Lake. The brooms have never been so busy this season in a curling match as was the case yesterday, for it required continued sweeping to keep a clear surface of ice on which to slide the stones back and forth within their proper limits.

Each club had three rinks on a side, and the game was one of the most closely contested that these rivals have played in years. St. Andrew's won the match by the narrow limit of 3 points, the score being 32 to 29. The third rink proved the salvation of the victors, while it was the Waterloo of the defeated side. Van Cortlandt's first two rinks piled up the big score of 25 to 16, and with this excellent lead of 9 it seemed impossible to lose.

A. Pratt, one of the crack skips of the local curling world, was skip for the Van Cortlandt's third rink, but his hand had either lost its cunning or the difficulty of playing an accurate game in a whirling snowstorm was too much for him, as he failed to show his customary form, and his team was almost swamped by 16 points to 4. Robert Boyd skipped the opposing rink, and he played a fast game from the start.

The star of yesterday, therefore, rested upon the St. Andrew's contingent. The defeat was the first encountered this season by the Van Cortlandts, for the latter have just won both the Mitchell and Gordon championship medals.

The players and scores were:

A Golf Record for Women.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 30.—Miss Downey of the Apawamis Golf Club made a woman's golf record here to-day by going around in 93. This is the best done by women players on the new course so far, but may be lowered before the season closes. Her card was:

Out .....5 5 6 5 4 5 5 5 4 6—46
In .....6 5 6 4 5 5 5 6 6 4—47—93

Her partner was George R. Read of the same club.

Clayton Dixon of the Huntington Valley Club, Philadelphia, arrived last night for the tournament commencing to-morrow, and will remain all the season. H. M. Forest of the Philadelphia Country Club has also come since the last event, and will enter for the President's Cup. There is considerable playing on the links every day, and the golf house is being taxed for room. There is some talk of enlarging it especially for locker room. The professional Robert Stronner is expected to-night to act as A. H. Fenn's assistant.

Champion Clay Bird Handicap.

The Inter-State Association announced yesterday that the second greatest event of the trap shooters' year—the Grand American Handicap at clay birds—will be decided this season at the Inter-State Park grounds, Queens, L. I., from July 23 to 26.

Elmer E. Shaner of Pittsburg was again selected as manager, and he announces the following programme of competitions:

The Grand American Handicap at inanimate targets, 100 blue rocks per man, handicap rises from 14 to 25 yards, thrown at unknown angles, high guns to win. The winner will be presented with a trophy valued at $1,000, in addition to first money. Entrance fee, $10.

Special features will also be the Consolation Handicap, open to all at 100 targets per man. High guns will have one yard added to their handicap.

Baseball Complications Threatened.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Some of the baseball people are disturbed by the threat of the National League players to join the American League. It is said that this will split the National League and greatly complicate matters. President Hart of the Chicago Club, however, says:

"Those resolutions of the American League are idle. They agree not to farm, trade, or sell players, &c., without the consent of the players. Why, where would they farm then? The American League has ignored the National agreement, and therefore the players in it may go wherever they choose without the formality of farming. The American League is in a class by itself.

The entire transaction will be subject to the approval of the counsel of both companies as to legalities.

$2,500,000 GOLD FOR SHIPMENT.

Gold engagements for shipment to-day by La Gascogne aggregate $2,250,000, as against $4,600,000 last week. Of the former amount Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co. ship $1,250,000, the United States Mortgage and Trust Company $500,000, and the National City Bank $500,000. All the gold goes in the form of bars, and was yesterday taken from the Assay Office. Sterling was much firmer yesterday, suggesting the inauguration of a gold movement to London by Saturday. Some of the gold shipped to-day is on the triangular system, but a slight variation in conditions at Paris or London might make possible shipments direct to London.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The demand for money was brisk to-day, and the supply was reduced to the extent of compelling borrowers to rely on the Bank of England, where they were charged 5½ per cent. for loans of a few days. Consequently, discounts were firm. The pressure is expected to be temporary, though the idea of a reduction of the bank rate to-morrow is less pronounced.

Business on the Stock Exchange was mostly featureless, and no increase of activity is expected this week. The anticipation of an early announcement of a Government loan affected consols. Home rails were mostly downward, on poor traffic returns.

Americans started irregular, but grew firmer, excepting St. Paul, which declined, but was improving before the close. The feature was the strength of Southern Pacifics and Missouris.

Kafirs were dull on the reports of damage done to mining property.

Spanish fours, 71¾.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 30. Prices on the Bourse today were firm until options were declared favorable to buyers. Afterward stagnation prevailed. Toward the close certain industrials were freely offered. The weakness extended to the close, which was dull all around.

Three per cent. rentes, 102f for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 16c for checks.

Spanish 4s, 72.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Home funds and internationals were firm on the Boerse to-day, especially Italians. Americans were quiet. Mines improved on favorable statements of the Minister of Commerce. Banks were maintained.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 48½ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 4 per cent.; three months' bills, 3½ per cent.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Business in the market for outside securities yesterday was very light and prices showed less strength than they did on the earlier days of the week. Declines were more numerous than advances, but only in a few cases were the day's changes of much moment. Trading was on too small a scale to bring about much variation in quotations or to attract any especial attention. The dullness and rather weak tone of the curb market were made the more noticeable by the increase in activity as well as in strength which showed in the Stock Exchange market yesterday. Practically no news directly affecting outside stocks came to hand during the day.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS securities were practically the only important issues that showed any considerable activity. All of these issues sold at better prices than those quoted at the close on Tuesday, and they closed at about the best prices of the day. The preferred stock, the most active of the three, was traded in to the extent of 1,500 shares between 74⅝ and 75¼. It closed at 75 bid. Sales of St. Louis Transit amounted to 1,000 shares or more, and the bonds showed a total of almost $40,000. The continued strength of the St. Louis issues is attributed to increasing earnings. Reference is already being made to the advantages which the company will derive from the expected large increase in its business which will result from the exposition to be held in St. Louis two years hence.

***

HAVANA COMMERCIAL preferred, after selling down early in the day, recovered to 52 and closed at that price, showing no net change. The common stock was somewhat weaker, being offered at the close at 13½.

***

UNION TYPEWRITER made a further net gain yesterday, closing at 42 bid. All of this company's stocks have recently shown strength, which has been most marked in the common stock and in the second preferred. It seems to be expected that at the next dividend declaration a large part, if not all, of the back dividends due on the second preferred stock will be paid. Last year the company paid off 4 per cent. of these back dividends, leaving 8 per cent. still to be paid.

***

ELECTRIC VEHICLE recovered partly from the decline which occurred on Tuesday. An odd lot sold as high as 14⅝, and the stock closed at 14⅜ bid, an advance of 1⅛ points over the best bid at the close of the previous day.

***

NEW ENGLAND TRANSPORTATION sold up to 3¼ and closed at 3 bid, a fractional net gain.

***

GENERAL CARRIAGE, though less active than it has been recently, sold to a considerable amount. It closed at 3⅝ bid, showing a net loss of three-eighths of a point.

***

CRAMPS' SHIPYARD was weak. It sold on Tuesday at 82½, but at the close yesterday was offered at 82, with no better bid than 80.

***

INTERNATIONAL SILVER preferred lost all of its gain of Tuesday, when it advanced to 47. It closed at 42 bid, with stock offered at 44½.

***

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Boston had an active market in Atchison, 6,400 shares of the common and 1,000 shares of preferred selling in the morning, with price up 1⅝ on the former. There was a great deal of favorable talk on the 1900 earnings results and on the 1901 prospects. There was good buying also of Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and fair interest in Union Pacific and Federal Steel. Only 400 shares of Sugar sold in the morning. Little was done in mining stocks, prices generally holding steady to firm, although Dominion Coal slipped off to 34. Iron and Steel held firm at 23. In railroad shares, Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis rose 3 more, to 63, and Kansas City and Birmingham 2, to 37. Bond business was fair, $67,500 bonds changing hands in the forenoon. Copper shares weakened in the afternoon, Montana losing 2, to 312; Centennial, ⅛, to 21; Isle Royale, ⅛, to 37; Old Dominion, ¼, to 30; Osceola, 1, to 81; Utah, ⅛, to 32; Wolverine, ⅝, to 48½, and Butte 1, to 78.

The bank rate on call money over the counter continues at 2 per cent., and this rate will be maintained so long as it is quoted on the Stock Exchange. Bank loans are not called so soon as the loans on the Exchange, and hence always command a slightly higher rate. There is no change in the rates for commercial paper, which are quoted at 3@3½ per cent. for indorsements, 3½@4 per cent. for prime single names, and 4@4½ per cent. for good names. The demand is good and the supply is not overabundant.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—Though without great activity the local market was very strong, recording exceptional advances in the bond department. Philadelphia Electric attracted most attention. Over 10,000 shares of this stock came out in the first ten minutes of trading at 7⅝, the price advancing later to 7¾, compared with 7¼ last night. The bonds moved up 1⅜, to 72. There was nothing authentic to account for the buying of these securities. Choctaw advanced ⅛ in the morning and suffered a slight recession later in the day. Union Traction jumped up ⅜, to 35¾, and the Readings held firm in the bond corner there was a noteworthy advance of 1⅛, to 62, in Asphalt 5s.

The close was steady at the following bid and asked prices:

"FARMER" KELLY'S VISIT.

Receives $5 on Account for Mythical Butter and Eggs.

"Is Mr. Ross in?" inquired a suave young man, doffing his hat politely to Mrs. Hattie Ross at the door of her home, at 2,074 Eighth Avenue, about a week ago. Mrs. Ross said she was sorry, but her husband was not in just then.

"Ah, too bad," said the visitor. "He is an old friend of mine, but I have not seen him in several years. I dropped in just to see how he was getting along."

The stranger, who introduced himself as John Kelly, said that when it came to a matter of butter and eggs there might possibly be a few farms that could tie his little old plantation at West Farms, but none could surpass it. The way Kelly dilated on the virtues of his eggs and butter was so beautiful to hear that Mrs. Ross struck a bargain with him for a supply of this "gilt-edged" produce and gave Kelly $5 for which he was to deliver it next day and incidentally to shake hands once again with his "old friend Ross."

The butter and eggs did not come next day. Neither did "Farmer" Kelly. Mrs. Ross saw no more of him until Tuesday afternoon, when she saw him entering an apartment house at One Hundred and Second Street and Amsterdam Avenue. She called a policeman and the alleged farmer was arrested.

In the West Side Court yesterday morning he pleaded guilty to petty larceny and was held in $500 bail for trial. Mr. Ross, who was in court, said that he had never before seen Kelly.

WOMAN TURNS BRONZE COLOR.

A case of Addison's disease was received at Bellevue Hospital yesterday. This is a rare ailment, of which the medical world knows little. The patient now in the hospital is apparently doomed to die, although suffering no pain. The patient is Mrs. Rose Lowe, twenty-eight years old, of 505 Second Avenue. About a week ago she noticed that her skin was becoming a peculiar color. She had previously had a short spell of sickness from some unknown cause, but did not attribute the changing of the color of her skin to that fact. The color of her skin became that of bronze of the shade used in ordinary statuary.

The physicians of the Bellevue authorities and Dr. Townsend took her into a ward as a private patient in order to make a close study of the disease. He and the other physicians diagnosed the case as Addison's disease, and there is little hope of curing the woman, although she may live a month. Mrs. Lowe does not look like a negress, although the skin of her entire body is the color of bronze.

It is said by physicians that the disease begins with some affection of a gland over the kidneys. It then spreads to other glands, and the color of the skin begins to change. Its various stages have never yet been accurately traced.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Among transactions closed yesterday one is of unusual interest, because it means the erection of a twelve-story building at the northwest corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street. It has not yet been decided whether the structure will be devoted to offices or bachelor apartments, but, in either case, such a building operation will be the first of its kind on that part of Madison Avenue just north of Forty-second Street. The two dwellings, occupying a plot 41 by 85 on the corner mentioned, have been sold for Dr. L. Bolton Bangs through Broker Herbert A. Sherman for about $120,000. The purchaser's name is withheld for the present. The estimated cost of the new building is $250,000.

John N. Golding has sold for James D. Layng the plot on the north side of Ninety-fifth Street, 150 feet east of Fifth Avenue, 100 by 100.5. Mr. Golding was also the broker in the sale of the similarly situated plot on the north side of Ninety-sixth Street for Daniel E. Seybel, reported yesterday.

The Watrous estate has sold the two five-story flats, 17 and 19 East Eighty-ninth Street, 51.1 by 100.11. It is reported that the purchaser will remove the present structures and erect high-class dwellings on the site.

L. J. Phillips & Co. have sold for Anna Krooff the three-story dwelling, with extension, 148 West Eighty-eighth Street, 18 by 100.5.

Barnett & Co. have sold for the Bradley & Currier Company the five-story double flat, 304 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, 25 by 100.11.

Julius Braun has sold to Gustav Eckert for improvement the lot on the north side of One Hundred and Third Street, 125 feet west of First Avenue.

Porter & Co. have sold for William F. Morris to Ella Benker the five-story flat 251 East One Hundred and Fifty-first Street, 25 by 114.

J. Bunn has sold for J. Bernard to Lowenfeld & Prager the five-story flat at the northeast corner of First Avenue and Fifty-first Street, 24.2 by 100, partly leasehold.

Joseph Hamershlag transferred yesterday to Peter Wagner the plot 100.11 by 100 at the northwest corner of Broadway and One Hundred and Twelfth Street, for $40,000, over a mortgage of $40,000. Mr. Wagner had secured a building loan of $100,000 on the property. The plot on the west side of Broadway, 26 feet north of Fifty-fifth Street, 77.4 by 74.10, with an "L" fronting 25 feet on Fifty-fifth Street, was also conveyed yesterday by Mr. Wagner to Moritz Falkenau for $21,000 over mortgages of $138,000.

Louis Becker has just sold for Watkins Brothers the handsome three-story and basement Indiana limestone-front dwelling 439 West One Hundred and Sixty-second Street, southwest corner of Jumel Terrace, for $32,000. Title will pass in thirty days. The dwelling, which is 22 by 55 by 100, faces the Jumel mansion and grounds.

J. P. & E. J. Murray have sold three lots on the south side of One Hundred and Tenth Street, 200 feet east of Second Avenue, to Louis Lese for immediate improvement.

H. L. Suydam & Co. have leased for the Trinity Church Corporation to the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills of Atlanta, Ga., the eight-story factory at 236 and 238 Spring Street, for a term of five years, at $8,000 per year.

DR. EVANS'S REAL ESTATE.

Heirs of the Late Dentist in This City Convey Their Interests.

The real estate holdings in this city of the late Dr. T. W. Evans, the American dentist of Paris, who achieved an international reputation, figured yesterday in the official records, when nine heirs conveyed for nominal considerations their respective interests in the properties to Charles F. Muller and others, who are executors under Dr. Evans's will.

The most valuable single parcel in the list is the entire block bounded by Broadway and West End Avenue, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Streets. The other properties are 125 Fulton Street, running through to 44 Ann Street; 64 Pearl Street, running through to 38 Water Street, and 201 John Street.

The heirs by whom the conveyances are made are Catherine E. Whelen, Thomas H., Horace, and John R. Enos, Juliette C. Henderson, Anna E. M. Heberton, Clara E. Davis, and Kate G. Muller.

Toucey Memorial for Railroad Men.

Plans were filed at the Building Department yesterday for the three-story brick clubhouse to be erected for the Railroad Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association by John M. Toucey as a memorial for his son. The new building will stand on a plot 54 by 94 feet on the north side of One Hundred and Fiftieth Street, opposite Spencer Place. According to the estimate of Architect G. A. Nichols, it will cost $25,000.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R & P" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyance should therefore show the true consideration:

THRILLING RESCUES AT A HOTEL FIRE

The Jefferson on East Fifteenth St. Burned Early Yesterday.

TWO WOMEN WERE KILLED

A Score or More Were Severely Injured and One Hundred and Fifty Lives Were Imperiled.

Fire broke out at 4 o'clock yesterday morning in the Hotel Jefferson, 102, 104, and 106 East Fifteenth Street, between Irving Place and Fourth Avenue, and before the firemen got the flames under control two women were killed, a score were more or less severely injured, a dozen thrilling rescues were made, and the lives of over 150 guests were imperiled.

One of the women, while in the act of being saved by firemen when the rope broke that was holding her, and in the presence of thousands of spectators and in the glare of a fire engine searchlight, fell headlong six stories to the sidewalk. Her head was crushed, and she was so certainly beyond help that for awhile the body was left to lie untouched on the sidewalk, while the firemen in the rush and roar and confusion went on with more urgent work. Another woman was found suffocated and partly burned in her room on the seventh floor.

THE DEAD:

ELEANOR D. DOWNING, a Bellevue Hospital nurse, who was killed when the rope which was swinging her to safety broke.

KITTIE FAY, a chambermaid, employed in the hotel.

THE INJURED:

Mrs. E. WALDO NASON, whose newborn baby died only the day before, and who was being attended by the nurse who was killed, suffering seriously from shock and exposure. Taken to a private hospital.

E. WALDO NASON, who was ill with grip, and whose condition is considered precarious; taken to a private hospital.

Col. WILLIAM GILDERSLEEVE, a lawyer, severely cut about the body by broken glass.

J. P. WALSH, a contractor, cut by glass about head and body.

M. W. BOLTZ, hands lacerated by sliding down a fire-escape rope.

JOHN KELLEHER, a porter, burned about face and arms while coming down a fire-escape in the rear of the hotel

Mrs. J. E. CHATFIELD, wife of the proprietor of the hotel, lacerated hands, torn by lowering her mother out of a sixth story window.

Many others were there who received medical attendance from the ambulance surgeons and doctors in the neighborhood, but who escaped in the confusion without giving their names to the police.

The cause of the fire is ascribed to defective insulation on electric light wires in the pantry, next to the dining room and adjoining the elevator shaft on the ground floor, on the Fifteenth Street side of the hotel. From here the flames spread rapidly, breaking the glass window leading from the pantry to the elevator shaft.

Up the shaft the flames roared as if the huge chimney had been especially provided. Clear to the top floor they went, spreading out in the seventh floor like a huge fire tree. In the shaft on the different floors were glass windows. These were broken by the heat, and volumes of smoke, sucked up with the flames, were sent into every floor of the hotel, at once spreading terror, even before the inmates were half awake.

MANY WOMEN AND CHILDREN THERE

The Hotel Jefferson is a seven-story brick family hotel. Many of its guests are permanent occupants of apartments, and have for years made the hotel their home. There were many women and children in the hotel, therefore. Shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday morning Night Clerk Fred W. Robertson left his desk to awaken the cleaning girls on the seventh floor. Everything seemed in order at that time. Robertson called the girls, and was on his way down stairs on the ground floor when he smelled smoke. Almost at the same instant the door of the pantry burst open, and thick volumes of smoke poured into the hallway. Robertson ran toward the pantry, but was driven back, and, pulling the special building fire alarm box, he ran up stairs to notify the proprietor, Mr. Chatfield's room was on the sixth floor. He jumped out of bed as he was, in his pajamas, and in bare feet dashed down stairs. The smoke on the ground floor was already so stifling that Chatfield had to stoop low toward the floor to catch his breath. He heard the flames crackling in the pantry, and the first flame leaped up the elevator shaft, lighting the darkened corridors bright as day. Without waiting he threw open the street door, ran into the street and sent in another alarm from the box at Fifteenth Street and Fourth Avenue. Before he could get back, Truck 3 from Thirteenth Street had pulled up in front of the hotel.

"I went with the firemen, who were dragging in hose, intending to show them the way to the pantry, but the fire was already in the dining room, and I was driven back by the heat," Mr. Chatfield said, relating his experiences. "The firemen went into the room, dragging their hose after them, and how they stood the smothering I will never understand. In they piled with more and more hose, while the sirens of other engines and trucks ran upstairs to awaken the sleepers. Owing to flames and smoke I could not get near my own door, therefore I ran to a side door, which I found locked. I knocked and my wife opened the door. She was standing in the room, and her hands were injured and bleeding. She had lowered her mother, Mrs. F. A. Streeter, out of the window by means of a fire-escape rope, and she had cut and lacerated her hands. I found my wife almost completely dressed, but I made her put on a fur coat, and, as I looked out of the window to think about the chances of lowering her to the ground, I saw Truck 20 had up its ladders to the fourth floor, and that the men were making preparations to use the extension ladder to get us out. As we were waiting for this a shout of horror arose from people in the street, and something white flashed by the window. As the ladder was nearing us I saw a fireman was already on top, waiting for the instant that it would touch the wall. I was fully dressed except for one shoe, which I could not find. The fireman jumped into the room. He would not let me hunt for the shoe, but went down with him and my wife with one foot uncovered. I found my wife's mother in the Irving Place livery stable, where policemen were taking the rescued to, and, after leaving the women with each other, a fireman loaned me a pair of rubber boots, and they are the ones I have been wearing all day."

THE NASONS' THRILLING RESCUE.

While the Chatfields were being rescued the audience of thousands on the street had been shocked with one of the most weird sights ever seen at a night fire. On the sixth floor of the hotel in a room on the Fifteenth Street side, and adjoining the Union Square Hotel, lived E. Waldo Nason with his wife. Mrs. Nason was seriously ill, and Nason himself was confined to his bed with an attack of grip which had come upon him the day before. The trained nurse, Eleanor D. Downing, therefore had two patients on her hands. It was while the fire was at its height, and when it threatened to prove another Windsor horror, that the plight of these people was discovered. All of the electric lights in the hotel had long since gone out, dense volumes of smoke were belching from every window on every floor, and the firemen had to feel every inch of ground they covered, when a momentary burst of flame from the roof lighted the forms of the three persons in the window of the sixth story. The searchlight was turned on them, and orders came from a dozen speaking trumpets below, which bellowed, "Don't jump! Don't jump!"

The window at which stood the Nasons and the nurse was within ten feet of the house line of the Union Square Hotel, and about the same distance lower than the roof of this building. Deputy Chief Ahearn and Policeman Schick had run into the Union Square Hotel, and, as they appeared on the roof armed with a rope, the glare of the searchlight was turned full on the group. The men on the roof leaned far over, and, letting down the rope to the level of the window, they swung it back and forth, pendulum fashion, until it swung far enough to be reached by the man and the two women. A mighty cheer went up as Nason caught the rope, and a minute later Mrs. Nason was let out of the window. She swung back and forth on the end of the rope, and then hands from a window in the Union Square building, directly under where the rescuers were standing, reached out and drew the woman to safety. Mr. Nason being ill and weak, the nurse tied the rope under his arms, and he in turn was swung to safety. Only the nurse remained. The smoke by this time was pouring out of the Nasons' apartment, and no time was to be lost. For the third time Ahearn and Schick swung the rope over toward the window where the woman stood. Despite the searchlight she could not see the rope, so thick was the smoke; but a draught cleared the view, and she seized it and tied it under her arms. Then she jumped into space. Almost at the same instant there was a wild shriek from the woman, and before the crowd realized what had happened her body, outlined in a white night dress against the black smoke, shot down headfirst through the glare of the searchlight and to the sidewalk. There was a groan from the crowd as the body struck the pavement. The ninety-foot extension ladder was still against the sixth floor, and firemen were rescuing people down it, when at the window of the fifth floor a woman appeared. She stood on the coping of the window, and, while the crowd yelled to her not to jump, she sprang out toward the under side of the ladder, and for an instant seemed as if she must look her hold. Then she lowered herself, hand under hand, sailor fashion, until within eight feet of the ground, when she weakened and lost her hold. She fell into the arms of a fireman.

Fireman Tighe of Engine Company 13, not on duty at the fire, happened to pass the hotel as it was ablaze. He rushed into the work as a volunteer, and was one of the first men up the ladder. He brought down a Mr. and Mrs. Marks. Policeman Schick, the man who had assisted in the rescue of the Nasons, ran into the hotel about this time, and, fighting his way up against the smoke and heat, found two men in a hallway. They were too badly frightened to get out, and had to be dragged out. One of them was S. P. Anderson, a commission merchant of Philadelphia, and the other's identity is not known. Fireman Mun of Water Tower 2 had followed Schick into the hotel, and brought down Mrs. Max Ihmsen from the fourth floor.

MRS. CORWIN'S RESCUE.

Aided by the searchlight, the firemen returned to a window on the fourth floor and brought down Mrs. Corwin, who, although scantily clad, were valuable jewels. When she was half way down the ladder she told the firemen she could finish the descent unaided. They let her climb down the rest of the way alone, and, when she got to the bottom she jumped from the rungs of the ladder and thanked the firemen for their assistance.

The searchlight was turned on a window at the seventh floor, at which it was thought a woman had been seen, and the ladder was raised to that window. A moment later the stalwart form of a policeman appeared at the window. He had heard screams, and had made his way through the smoke and fire to the top floor to find the person who needed help.

"It's only a cop," said the firemen, leaving the policeman to make his way down the ladder unaided.

Fireman Hageman searched for the woman, but could not find her, and returned to the street. It is believed that the cries for help were uttered by the woman, Kitty Fay, whose body was afterward found in her room.

Meanwhile, while the crowd was gazing on the rescues from the front of the building, stirring scenes, away from the searchlights and the assistance of scaling ladders, were being enacted on the fire-escapes on the rear of the building. The hotel adjoined on the rear a Hungarian restaurant, the roof of which came to the third story of the hotel. The distance between these buildings is five feet. Three employes of Steinway Hall were awakened and at once climbed onto the roof of the restaurant to lend assistance. As the men came out they saw a man pick up a woman and throw her bodily across the five-foot chasm. Then he threw a trunk after the woman and jumped himself to safety. The man was E. Lynch of San Francisco, and the woman was his wife. The Steinway men procured planks and, bridging the chasm, helped many who had climbed down the fire-escapes to the level of the roof.

One of those rescued in this way was Edward Marshall, the war correspondent, who was shot in the spine in Cuba.

EDWARD MARSHALL'S ESCAPE.

"I was awakened by noises in the house, and was about to go to sleep again when I saw a man with a lantern on the fire-escape outside my room. 'What's up?' I asked. 'House is on fire,' the man answered,'" said Mr. Marshall, speaking of his escape. "I had that night received from my publishers a new novel, which I had written, for final revision. I had only the one manuscript, and the first thought was to save that. Neither of my legs is any good. The one is cork and the other is paralyzed, and it struck me it would be a good thing to get my cork leg if intended to save. I could not find it for some time, and finally when I did it would not work. But I got out over the planking of the Steinway people, and went from there to the street. There were many poor women sitting in the cold shivering, and I bought them whisky and hustled around and got them clothing. That took me until 10 o'clock and I was tired, so I went over to the Fifth Avenue Hotel and had a good sleep."

The fire was scarcely out when complaints began to arrive in the East Twenty-second Street Station that guests had been robbed during the confusion. The police admitted that much money, jewelry, and many valuable papers had been stolen, and they said they thought they could arrest the thief. Acting Capt. Fagan was at the fire shortly after it started, and policemen were stationed at all entrances of the building to prevent outsiders from coming in.

After the fire was out, the rope that had burned and caused the death of the nurse was examined by the police. The rope was part of a patent rope fire-escape. This consisted of a cotton belt provided with snaphooks, and intended to pass under the arms. The snaphooks fastened in front and hooked into the "lower-away rope," which was provided with a lever to allow slower or faster descent as desired. The rope was one-half inch cotton woven window cord rope. When the body of the dead girl was picked up five feet of the "lower-away rope," including the belt and the regulating lever, was still attached. There was a clean break in the rope, as if it had been cut by the sharp edge of a window coping. To whom the rope belonged is not known. The rope fire-escape in the Nasons' room is of a different patent. Besides, the regular rope of the Hotel Jefferson, belonging to the Nasons' room, was found in its place untouched and coiled.

The Nasons were taken to the private hospital at 32 East Thirty-fifth Street, where they are attended by Dr. E. A. Tucker. Dr. Tucker said late last night that both patients were in a precarious condition, the wife owing to shock, and the husband to pneumonia, which was almost certain to develop.

CORPSE SHIPPED AS FREIGHT.

Body of Capt. James H. Barrett Arrives on Steamship Havana.

The body of Capt. James H. Barrett of Chicago, who died in Cienfuegos, Cuba, arrived on the Ward Line steamship Havana yesterday as freight. It was boxed and described on the manifest as "one box, containing a corpse." It was consigned to Wells, Fargo & Co. for transshipment to Chicago.

In most cases dead bodies travel on first-class passenger tickets, and they rarely come billed as freight. Capt. Barrett was formerly an military man, but for some time past held a civil position under the United States Government at Cienfuegos.

MAGISTRATE LOSES AT PINOCHLE.

Mr. Crane and Lawyer Levy Play a Game in the Yorkville Court.

A game of pinochle was played on the bar of the Yorkville Police Court yesterday afternoon between Magistrate Crane and Lawyer Elias G. Levy. The lawyer won, but it was shown that he was using a deck of marked cards.

The game occurred in the case of a complaint made by M. H. Cohen, a real estate dealer, who lost $125 in pinochle on Saturday afternoon in Max Comboney's café, 123 Second Avenue, to play with D. Tanenbaum, a barber of 80 Second Avenue. Cohen felt so bad over the loss of the money that he secured a summons for Tanenbaum's appearance in the police court yesterday afternoon on a charge of using marked cards.

Cohen said he dropped into the café on Saturday afternoon, and Tanenbaum invited him to play. Tanenbaum won every game, and when Cohen finally got a headache, his brother, Simon Cohen, who had been an agonized spectator of the game, told him that the cards were marked.

Simon was in court yesterday and said he had the deck of cards, which he had secured after Saturday's game. Lawyer Levy, who appeared for Cohen, took the cards and dealt the Magistrate and himself each a hand. It soon developed that His Honor was at Levy's mercy in the game. The lawyer won every trick and then called off the cards by looking at their backs.

The Magistrate said the evidence was insufficient to warrant a complaint. Cohen protested, but the Magistrate told him that he would not have complained if he had won, and discharged the barber.

CAPTAIN HERLIHY ON THE STAND

He Denies Positively that He Called the Rev. Mr. Paddock a Liar.

His Lawyer Offers to Prove that the Minister Once Spoke Disrespectfully of the Police Board.

"No! So help me God!" was the emphatic way in which Capt. John D. Herlihy answered a question put to him by his counsel, Louis J. Grant, at Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon.

The question related to certain parts of the testimony of the Rev. Mr. Paddock, in which he stated that Capt. Herlihy had said to him that he was disgracing his cloth; that his conduct was unbecoming to a clergyman, and that he was making a nuisance of himself.

Capt. Herlihy was called to the stand after several witnesses had testified to the general conditions of the district. President York and Commissioner Sexton were the only members of the board who were present at the hearing.

While answering Mr. Grant's questions, the Captain toyed with a pair of gold-rimmed eyeglasses or stroked his long, black mustache. Occasionally he leaned over and whispered to his counsel, who met his suggestions with the words, "Yes, yes; I'm coming to that."

Capt. Herlihy made a report of what he had done in the district. There were, he said, 3,630 arrests, of which 539 were of women for soliciting and 94 of men for warning them; 20 disorderly houses were raided, and 27 gambling arrests were made.

"In addition there were three organized gangs working in the precinct," added the witness. "Sandain three months I broke 'em up and sent 'em to State prison."

The congestion and character of the population were then touched upon, the Captain saying that the population of the precinct was about 175,000.

"On an average, how many men did you turn out on each tour of duty?" asked Mr. Grant.

"The most at any time was thirty-five. Some mornings there was only one or two. The rest were in court."

"You mean to say that at times there were only two men?"

The witness reiterated his statement and Mr. Grant asked him how that happened.

"Why, he has just told you," interrupted ex-Judge Olcott. "Your simulation of surprise is very beautiful."

"You have no reason to make such a remark," said Mr. Grant.

"Gentlemen! Gentlemen!" put in Mr. York. "Let's get on."

Capt. Herlihy told of efforts he had made by putting special men in front of suspected houses, in compliance with Mr. Paddock's complaint. He also told of the details of forty men sent by Inspector Cross to the district.

"Did you speak to those men about their duties?"

"Yes. I repeated the Inspector's instructions to them. 'There's my sentiments,' I said, 'and you'll do me, the Inspector, the Chief, and the board a favor, if such things exist, to stamp them out.'"

A letter was put in evidence which Capt. Herlihy had written to District Attorney Gardiner asking him to send an Assistant District Attorney, to represent the people in the Essex Market Court, in actions brought against owners of property charged with letting rooms to disreputable women.

The Captain said he had frequently consulted with Mr. Paddock, but that the latter had only once made a specific complaint, and had no suggestions to offer for abating the evils.

When Mr. Grant asked the witness to relate a conversation that took place between himself and Sergt. Norton, Mr. Olcott objected on the ground that it was incompetent. President York agreed that it was.

"Suppose I could show that Mr. Paddock on that occasion spoke disrespectfully of the Mayor and of this board?" asked Mr. Grant.

"He wouldn't be the only one," was Mr. York's rejoinder. "That don't bother the board."

Capt. Herlihy said that James B. Reynolds's testimony that he had said he had "no sympathy with the efforts of uptown aristocrats who wanted to reform the district," was absolutely untrue.

With reference to what took place in the station house on the night of April 28, Capt. Herlihy said that during the presence of Mr. Paddock in the station house he had not left his seat beside the Sergeant.

Mr. Grant then said: "Mr. Paddock has testified that you said to him he was disgracing his cloth, that you didn't think it becoming of him to disgrace his district, he was making a nuisance of himself, and that you were tired of it. Is that so?"

"No, so help me God."

"He also said you raised your clenched fist, put it almost in his face and said he lied and he knew he lied."

"That is positively untrue."

Capt. Herlihy related what took place in Inspector Cross's office, and said he had repeated there that the statement he made was that. From what Mr. Paddock said, the officer must be untruthful.

"Did Mr. Paddock ever before say you called him a liar?"

"Why, whenever I disagreed with him he always said, 'Then I'm a liar.'"

"But you didn't say he was a liar?"

"Denied positively."

The trial will be continued to-morrow at 1 o'clock, when Mr. Olcott will begin the cross-examination of Capt. Herlihy.

POLICE BOARD MAY ACT.

Will Probably Change Its Resolution About Promotion of Roundsmen.

The Police Board may to-day change its resolution of Jan. 22, which made only patrolmen of the first grade eligible for examination by the Municipal Civil Service Commission to be rated for promotion to Roundsman, so as to give the right to be examined to patrolmen of every grade. If this is done it will be due to Commissioner Sexton, who was not present at the meeting at which the resolution was passed.

The resolution called on the Municipal Civil Service Commission to take the necessary steps to make an eligible list of patrolmen for promotion to Roundsmen. It also directed Chief Devery to cause a notice to be given to the commanding officers of precincts requiring them to notify all first-grade patrolmen who desire to participate in the examination that they will be required to file an application with the Chief Clerk of the Police Department before Feb. 5 and that in this order the Chief should state that all previous applications of the kind will not avail in the present instance. Chief Devery has not yet complied with the direction of the board. His failure to do so was an innocent omission. Commissioner Sexton frankly shoulders the blame.

"I was not," said Mr. Sexton last evening "I present at the meeting when the resolution was passed. It reached the Chief the next day. I heard of it, and it seemed to me only fair that all grades of patrolmen should have a chance in the examination. So I went in the Chief and got him to delay sending out the order until I had seen President York. This I failed to do. The matter slipped my memory. I spoke to Mr. York about the matter to-day and the resolution by agreement is still held back and will come up for amendment to-morrow."

"No one is really to blame for this, certainly not Chief Devery," said President York. "His position is all right, and his explanation clear and satisfactory. I believed the order had gone out, the Chief trusted to Mr. Sexton, and Mr. Sexton trusted to what failed him, his memory. Chief Devery, when he knew the true situation, wanted to send the order out, but I requested him to delay it for board action. What we may do to-morrow I can't say. There is certainly no hitch between the board and the Chief growing out of the resolution of Tuesday week."

TEN YEARS FOR KASSHEIMER.

Judge Cowing Regrets His Inability to Give This Degenerate a Heavier Sentence.

Joseph Kassheimer of 190 East Seventh Street was sentenced by Judge Cowing yesterday to ten years in prison for taking thirteen-year old Mary Zinsmeister to a house at 66 Avenue A.

"For a crime similar to yours," said Judge Cowing in pronouncing sentence, "three men in New Jersey have been given thirty years. I regret that I cannot inflict that sentence upon you. The maximum penalty in New York is only ten years."

The unusually large number of convictions recently for crimes against young girls will, in all probability, it is said, result in a petition to the Legislature to increase the penalty in such cases. The Judges of General Sessions and Vernon M. Davis, ex-Assistant District Attorney, are considering the advisability of taking such action.

JUDGE FOSTER IN VICE CRUSADE.

Believes Evidence Submitted Against Book Club Stops With Book Fruit.

Deputy Attorney Perkins has submitted the Whitman conspiracy evidence to the "red light" district grand jury sent him by Judge Warren W. Foster, Assistant District Attorney Byrne, who will present it to the February Grand Jury.

Judge Foster's criminal conduct of valuable information contained in many letters written by high by responsible residents of the east side. It is particularly in his determination to secure the banishment of several proprietors of resorts in the Eldridge Street Precinct, so at least cause the suppression of many. The information was sent to the Judge under publication of his remarks concerning the Tenderloin Mardi Gras, charged with having permitted a great girl to a house in Catherine Street, boasting of crimes of this nature yesterday Judge Foster said:

"The horrors of the 'red light' district as shown by the testimony in recent trials before me have impressed my mind deeply. I am determined to do what I can to break up the practices by which young girls' lives are blighted and so-called men fatten upon the proceeds of their prostitution," said the lawyer. "I believe the evidence submitted by me to the District Attorney will result in some indictments."

SHE TRIED TO DIE.

Mrs. Diemler Turns on Gas While Procuring Servants.

The attempt at suicide made by Mrs. Marie Diemler, a widow, of 606 Hart Street, Brooklyn, on Tuesday, is believed to have been caused by the serving of papers upon her in a suit brought by Mrs. Carl Schwartz of East Fifteenth Street, Manhattan, for alleged alienation of her husband's affections.

Mrs. Diemler was found unconscious in the bath room of her house. She had attached a rubber tube to a gas burner and the other end was in her mouth. She is now a prisoner at her home, and when she recovers she will be arraigned in court.

Mrs. Diemler's husband died two years ago, leaving her in comfortable circumstances. He had a club friend whom they knew as "Carl Bunge," who, some time after Diemler's death, proposed marriage to the widow. The widow, however, declined. A week ago Bunge obtained, it is said, a loan of $500 from Mrs. Diemler and has not been seen by her since.

The following day the widow received a letter from a lawyer asking her to call at his office. There she was introduced to Mrs. Schwartz, who said she was the wife of Bunge, whose right name was Schwartz. The irate wife then drew from her pocket a bundle of letters written by the widow to Bunge and is alleged to have offered to surrender them upon receipt of $100.

On Tuesday evening a man who said he was a process server called at Mrs. Diemler's house. She told him she would give the papers to her lawyer.

"Didn't you see your name mentioned today in the papers?" the alleged process server asked. Mrs. Diemler sent for a copy of the paper, and seeing her name in print, became almost prostrated. She then hurried to the bath room, leaving the process server in the parlor and, it is supposed, attempted suicide.

It is said that on hearing of the woman's act the process server hastily left the house.

APPROPRIATION FOR LIBRARY.

Board of Estimate Votes to Issue Corporate Stock to the Amount of $2,850,000.

The Board of Estimate at the meeting yesterday took action on the new Public Library, in course of construction on the site of the old reservoir, in Bryant Park. The Board of Estimate received a report from Controller Coler recommending that corporate stock to the amount of $2,850,000 be issued for the building of the library. The city has already decided to spend $40,000 for the building of vaults and $500,000 for the removal of the old reservoir, which will bring the total cost of the library up to $3,390,000. The appropriation was unanimously authorized. The question as to whether the library was to be built of marble was brought up by Mayor Van Wyck, who said:

"As you know, I am not in favor of appropriating large sums of money, but I approved the appropriation of a little more in order to have the library built of marble instead of sandstone, as it would have been. It should be a lasting monument to the city, and only can be so by being built of marble."

The sum of $2,254,855 was appropriated for land taken for William H. Seward Park, whereupon Mayor Van Wyck took occasion to rebuke the administration of Mayor Strong for reckless expenditures.

A delegation of Brooklyn citizens appeared at the meeting to advocate the repaving with asphalt of Fourth Avenue from Flatbush Avenue to Sixteenth Street. Mayor Van Wyck positively refused to give the delegation any satisfaction. They demanded to know whether the work would be done, but Mayor Van Wyck replied that it was not the most necessary work, and the Fourth Avenue people would have to wait. The delegation left the Mayor's office very much dissatisfied.

VERDICT FOR $7,800.

A Woman Awarded It Against the Metropolitan Street Railway.

Catherine Kay was awarded a verdict for $7,800 against the Metropolitan Street Railway Company by a jury in the Supreme Court yesterday. This is the second trial of the case. On the first trial a verdict for $6,000 was given. The Appellate Division sustained the verdict, but the Court of Appeals ordered a new trial. The present verdict is the result.

The plaintiff had her head cut and her shoulder dislocated while on a car belonging to the company, on Jan. 28, 1895. She was a passenger on an Amsterdam Avenue car which ran into an empty car standing on the tracks. The defense was that there was so much snow and ice on the tracks that it was impossible to control the car.

AN ENGINEER'S STRANGE DEATH.

His Head Crushed in the Tunnel, He Falls Dying.

When the local train on the Harlem Branch of the New York Central Railroad, which leaves the Grand Central Station at 7:25 P. M., pulled into the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station last night the station employes noticed a man lying unconscious in the bottom of the engine cab. He was Engineer William Lay, thirty-five years old, of White Plains. The right side of his head was crushed in. He died in a minute or two on the platform.

Fireman William Ballow, also of White Plains, said Lay had his head out of the cab in the Park Avenue tunnel about Seventy-fifth Street when he was hit by something and tumbled like a dead man from his high seat. Instantly the firemen sprang to the throttle and ran the train to the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street station. Another engineer was obtained and the train was not delayed. The body of the engineer was taken to an undertaking shop. He was married.

RESCUED A CREW AT SEA

The Mason Passed Through Two Terrific Storms.

Sailors Transferred to the San Juan—Negro Cook Says the Cat Caused It.

"When dat cat stole off an' wanter way I knowed dat trouble was a-comin," solemnly declared big George Russell, the colored cook of the American schooner Albert Mason yesterday afternoon. Together with the skipper and four other stalwart seamen, he was rescued df sea last Sunday morning by the New York and Porto Rico Company's steamship San Juan. Their craft was waterlogged, and they had been put on half rations by the skipper, who feared that succor was not to be counted on for some time at least.

Capt. Keningham of the ill-fated vessel, when seen yesterday afternoon, said that the Mason had sailed from Norfolk lumber-laden on the 16th inst. for this city, and that good weather prevailed until the morning of the 18th, when from the northwest a gale began to blow. The storm rapidly grew in strength, and great seas swept over the little vessel, causing her to pitch and roll to such an extent that her cargo was shifted to starboard. Portions of the starboard railing were carried away, and finally the ship sprang a leak. It was decided to run before the storm in order to keep the vessel clear. After thirty-six hours the gale abated, and, still being able to keep the water down, the skipper decided to make up for lost time, and, resuming his course, started for New York. He was about sixty miles off the coast, when once more from the northwest a gale sprang up.

It was only for a short time that the little ship stood up before this second gale. The seas were tremendous in size and terrifically strong. They beat and smashed the ship until the tiller broke, when it was finally decided to run before the storm and if possible escape what appeared to be certain destruction. As best they could they patched up the tiller and started on the race for life. The cargo was going overboard, the leak grew larger, and the crew was battling with the impouring water trying to keep the schooner clear when the tiller broke again, and this time beyond repair.

For several hours more the ship managed to make a sort of headway; a mattress was stuffed into the leak which for a time to a certain extent stopped the water from coming in, but this soon gave way, when another great sea enveloped the ship and carried away her forestaysail and main jib, and finally the rudder chains. Having no rudder and finding that the vessel was now slowly going to pieces, the skipper decided—the gale having abated—to attempt to reach some port, and accordingly set a storm trysail forward and headed the craft for the Bermudas. This was on the 26th.

It was early on the following morning that Capt. Sampson of the San Juan made out the Mason's distress signal about two miles off. Steaming up in hailing distance, he ordered a lifeboat in charge of Mate E. D. McCalder lowered, and the rescue was accomplished without any exciting incidents attending it.

As the skipper concluded with a few words of warm praise for his rescuers, the cook took up the story about the cat. According to him, for many years the Mason has carried a black cat named Peter. When the Mason was some hours out of Norfolk Peter was found to be missing, and from that moment, declared George, "I knowed it was er comin'."

The passengers of the San Juan made up a purse of $127 for the rescuing and rescued crews, giving $65 to the former and the remainder to the latter.

A DEVOUT TOMBS PRISONER.

Burns Prayed Earnestly for Acquittal, but the Jury Disagreed.

Before a faded print of the Virgin Mary, flanked by two flickering candles, Salvatore Burns, in a narrow cell in the gloomy Tombs, gave thanks until a late hour last night that the efficacy of his prayers had caused the Blessed Virgin to prevent a General Sessions jury from finding him guilty.

Twice now have Salvatore's devotions, he firmly believes, caused juries composed of twelve men to fail to agree as to whether or not he attacked Mary Hegeman, of 206½ West Fifty-second Street, on Jan. 15, 1900, cutting her in the neck, face, and mouth. The first trial last year, resulting in a disagreement, was prayed through by Burns, and he made greater preparations for the second, which began Monday. When the case went to the jury Tuesday afternoon, and Salvatore was led back to the prison pens to await the verdict, he immediately dropped on his knees before an improvised altar of two overturned benches and began to pray fervently. Producing a small likeness of the Madonna, he placed it against the bench and draped it with a piece of soiled white ribbon. On each side he put pieces of stubby candle, lighting both.

Late in the evening he was summoned to the courtroom. His lips swiftly moving in prayer, he heard the foreman announce that no agreement could be reached. With difficulty he was prevented from breaking into a hymn.

Burns will in all probability be discharged on his own recognizance Monday.

INDICTED FOR PETTY LARCENY.

Unusual Procedure in the Case Against Herman Reimenthal.

Herman Reimenthal, President of the Furriers' Union, formerly a clerk in the fur store of Clark & Weinburg of 832 Broadway, indicted by the Grand Jury for the larceny of less than $30 worth of furs from his employers, was yesterday arrested and placed in the Tombs. Indictment for petty larceny is an unusual occurrence, although the Grand Jury has the power whenever it is deemed necessary.

Reimenthal on the 23d of December last had been arrested by a Central Office detective acting on a complaint of a sealskin collar and other furs, valued at about $16.50, under his coat. He was taken before Magistrate Zeller and Mr. Clark appeared against him.

Reimenthal stated that he was taking the furs home to match them with a cape he had, and that if they matched he intended buying them of his employers.

"Discharged," said Magistrate Zeller, and Reimenthal walked out of court a free man.

Subsequently Mr. Clark talked to the Magistrate, and a summons was issued for the President of the Furrier's Union. When brought into court, Reimenthal was held in $500 bonds to keep the peace on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mr. Clark told the matter before his attorney, who did not succeed in bringing the case to the attention of the Grand Jury. The indictment resulted despite the Police Court proceedings, and Reimenthal will be placed on trial in General Sessions at an early date.

EXTENSION OF WATER SYSTEM.

Controller Coler Wanted that City Has Adopted Wrong Policy.

Frederick De Bruler, who has made investigations of city departments for the Merchants' Association, wrote to Controller Coler yesterday about the proposed extensions of New York's water system. According to the ideas of Mr. De Bruler, the city is going to spend $[illegible] to begin work on a new reservoir on the Croton River Branch, and by adding that to a part of the Twenty-fifth Street reservoir, and that it enables the City of New York legally to get a portion of the State of New York and [illegible] perpetual [illegible].

Mr. De Bruler thinks that the Ramapo Company has options on the Hackensack River, which the city may have to buy in the future unless the policy of the City Government is changed.

Steamer Mary Thomas Disabled.

The Atlas Line steamer Alice, which arrived yesterday, reported that Tuesday, when sixty miles southeast of Delaware Breakwater, she passed the British steamer Mary Thomas, from Philadelphia, bound to Queenstown, Ireland, in tow of the French steamer Rochambeau, from Rochelle, from which port she sailed on Jan. 19. They were at the time pointing northwest.
